Hazen, Sultan Indorse Ban On Parking; Act Tuesday

2 Commissioners Voice Tentative Approval After Hearing.

Allen Pushes War On Proposed Plan

Opponents Given Time to Assemble Their Arguments.

Proposal to forbid night parking on 58 miles of Capital streets was tentatively approved yesterday by Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen and Dan I. Sultan after a public hearing.

Formal action is contemplated when the Commissioners meet in regular session Tuesday. Commissioner George E. Allen is opposed to the ban.

Delay in formal action was intended to give any persons who might wish to do so ample time to present arguments against the change, Hazen said.

Terms of the Ban.

The ban would apply from December 15 to March 1 on practically every city street on which motor buses or street cars operate. No parking would be permitted on these streets after 2 a. m. Automobiles parked on the streets all night make it difficult and sometimes impossible to clear away heavy snowfalls and this interferes with the flow of traffic, it was said. The ban was proposed by the Traffic Advisory Council.

Forty persons attended the hearing, at which the proposal was indorsed by representatives of the American Automobile Association, the Board of Trade, Merchants and Manufacturers Association, and the District Trucking Association.

James G. Yaden, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, said the proposal was too far-reaching. He pointed out the federation is to consider the question December 15 and he was speaking as an individual.

Havenner Interrupted.

Commissioner Allen developed other expressions of opposition at the gathering. Dr. George C. Havenner was expressing approval of the plan when Commissioner Allen asked him where he parked his automobile.

"Why, I park my car in a garage," Dr. Havenner said. Questions by the Commissioner developed that almost everyone else who favored the plan also parked their machines in garages.

"Why, of course, people with garages would think a ban on street parking would be a good thing," Allen commented. "But I would like to hear from those who park their cars on the street. Isn't there anyone here who does?"

Two men arose to say they did. Both opposed the ban. Franklin G. Sartwell, of the Washington Times, also opposed the ban, saying there already was too much confusion about the traffic situation. George Adams Howard, of the Washington Star, approved the plan.

Weather Bureau records were quoted by W. F. Summy, who opposed the ban. He questioned the genuineness of the professed reason for the proposal. Since 1926 there have been only nine snowfalls in

20-Degree Low Due for Today

District's Coldest Day of Season Forecast; Snow Falls in Virginia.

Winter held much of the Nation in its icy grip yesterday as snow swirled in the Middle West, sleet glazed pavements in the South and the mercury sank to a low of 31 in Washington.

The Weather Bureau last night predicted a low temperature of 20 degrees for the District early today. Yesterday's maximum was 35, and topcoat weather was replaced by heavy overcoats throughout the city.

The cold wave particularly hit the Central States, where much of the territory was covered by snow, and predictions were for continued snowfall.

The Associated Press reported motorists imperiled and airplanes grounded in the Great Lakes region. In Chicago streets were carpeted by more than six inches of snow.

The temperatures generally were low, reaching 16 below in Bemidji, Minn., and 15 below in Sheldon, Iowa.

In Macon, Ga., sleet fell, and snow appeared in Arkansas and Tennessee. Montgomery, Ala., was visited by a light sleet, which melted later when the mercury climbed to 40 degrees.

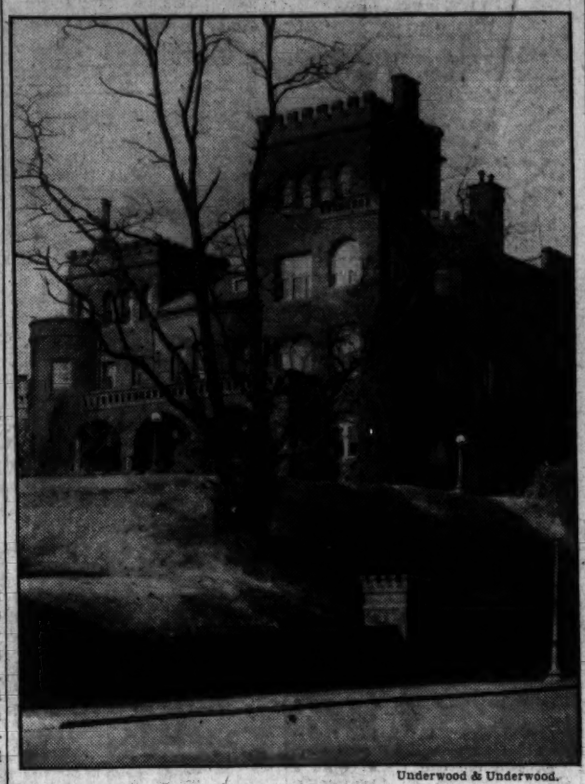
Famed Henderson Castle for Sale



Underwood & Underwood.

Henderson Castle Is Doomed To Block With Its Treasures

Sixteenth Street Mansion, Residence of Capital Society's One-time Dictator, Will Be Auctioned Next Month.

Last vestige of Washington's most brilliant social life, "Henderson Castle," will go on the auction block next month. The turreted brownstone mansion on Sixteenth street, the scene of America's greatest social triumphs and the home of Mrs. John B. Henderson, society's dictator in the past, is to go to the highest bidder.

Since Mrs. Henderson died in 1931 the house has been empty, the garden untended. There have been no guests to sit in the carved chairs once used by Presidents, no ambassadors to admire oil paintings or the other treasurers with which the mansion is furnished.

But these treasures will bring out Washington folk to the sale. They will come to buy, from curiosity or for sentimental reasons. They will buy the furnishings and be proud to say that they own a piece from Henderson Castle—as in the past persons were proud to receive an invitation from Mrs. Henderson.

The City's Grande Dame.

Perhaps Dolly Madison was as autocratic a ruler of Washington society as was Mrs. Henderson. But the grande dame who was the arbiter for 50 years was never surpassed. Washington celebrities came to her dinners, although she crusaded against meat, tobacco and alcohol. It is said that she converted a Chinese ambassador to vegetarianism.

Mrs. Henderson offered the Castle as the official home for the Vice President. This was refused because there was no money appropriated for its upkeep. One of her ambitions was to make Sixteenth street the most magnificent avenue in the world. To that end she bought property at high prices to keep out apartments and hotels.

On this land she erected mansions into which she cajoled ambassadors to move their embassies. Now, in the neighborhood, there are the embassies and legations of Spain, Italy, Poland, Lithuania, Mexico and Cuba. Meridian Hill Park, across from the Castle, is a tribute to her efforts.

Niece of a Senator.

Mrs. Henderson was Mary N. Foote, niece of a Vermont Senator. She met Senator John B. Henderson, of Missouri. They were married in June, 1868, and then lived in St. Louis for 12 years. Then they returned to Washington, built the "Castle" and stunned the Capital with an opening party said to never have been equaled in Washington.

One of Mrs. Henderson's memorable habits was that of wearing the clothes that were fashionable in her youth. She wore satin and brocade, and piled her hair high atop her head.

Defier of NRA Found Guilty On 10 Counts

Perkins, York, Pa., Battery Man, Is Liable to $5,000 Fine on Charge.

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 7 (AP).—Fred C. Perkins, battery manufacturer of York, Pa., was convicted in Federal court today of violating the minimum wage provision of the NRA code for his industry.

Perkins, who regarded the case as a test of the Government's authority to fix minimum wages, was convicted on ten counts of an indictment and is liable to a maximum fine of $5,000.

An eleventh count was withdrawn by the Government because of the absence of the prosecution witness and a directed verdict of acquittal was returned on that count.

Jury Out Three Hours.

The Government charges that Perkins paid his employes less than the minimum wage of 40 cents an hour fixed in the code for the wet battery industry, which Perkins refused to sign, claiming it would bankrupt him to pay the required wages.

Ten employes and former employes of the Perkins plant testified they were paid from 16 to 25 cents an hour, most of them placing the figure at 20 cents. Twenty men now are employed at the plant. No testimony was submitted by the defense.

The verdict was returned after approximately three hours' deliberation and closed a trial which lasted five days.

When the jury first reported late today, Judge Watson declined to receive the verdict, holding it was "not in proper form," and sent the

Rhinelander, Wis., Dec. 7 (AP). Clinton Moss, 85-year-old settler, chose today to stick it out alone in his cabin in the roadless, snow-stilled wilderness of the Willow Lake country.

A relief official, who came with a toboggan to carry away the body of Moss' 84-year-old wife and end the settler's four-day vigil beside the corpse, offered Moss a new home nearer a village.

Mrs. Moss died Monday of pneumonia, but it was not until last night that snowshoe party succeeded in reaching the cabin to bring her body out to civilization for funeral services and burial.

The old couple had been on relief for a year.

Last Tuesday a wolf trapper completed a six-hour mush into Tripoli general store and postoffice, 14 miles south of Moss' clearing, to report Mrs. Moss' death of pneumonia.

There had been no road to the cabin, even in summer. County highway crews in two days forced a snowplow through 6-foot drifts to make a trail to within a couple of miles of their goal.

Mark Stockley, Oneida County rehabilitation officer, and the trapper, pulling a toboggan, went in the rest of the way yesterday, plunging all day through the snow-piled brush and alert for possible encounters with the wolf packs occasionally seen in the neighborhood.

They fund Moss puttering about the little shack. He had hung a haunch of venison to supplement food a neighbor had brought. He helped them place his wife's body on the sled, but he refused to go along. Back at the snowplow trail, the body was transferred to a sleigh and then taken to the John Timm home, where the party stayed overnight.

Today the party proceeded to Tripoli and placed the body in the store and postoffice until arrival of a motor hearse.

La Follettes Called Here On Job Plan

Guesses on Expenditures '9-to-1' Wrong, Says Roosevelt.

Deficit Is Double That of 1933, Revenue Report Shows.

President Roosevelt yesterday talked over his vast relief and public works program for next year in a luncheon conference with Senator Robert M. La Follette and his younger brother Phil, the newly elected Governor of Wisconsin.

As a leader of the Senate Progressive bloc, Senator La Follette has been identified with that faction of the Upper House which long has championed a large-scale public works program as the best means of absorbing the unemployed.

That the Administration has moved closer and closer toward this view has been evident for some time, though the approach has been an indirect one. It was the desire to taper off the growing relief rolls by substituting forms of "made work" that is credited with turning the New Deal toward public works.

Program Is Expensive.

Neither the President nor the La Follette brothers would go into detail regarding their conference, but it was considered a safe assumption that they found ground for common agreement on the necessity of large new funds to pour into construction of all kinds.

Various amounts, ranging up to $8,000,000,000 or $9,000,000,000, have been mentioned as the prospective size of the new program, but all such "guesses" have received absolutely no backing from the White House. Mr. Roosevelt reiterated yesterday that until he himself informs Congress next month, all speculation will stand a 9-to-1 chance of being wrong.

Even as the President put forth this warning, it became known that the report of the National Resources Board, which will propose the expenditure of several billions on the planned development of the Nation's water and land resources, is almost ready for announcement.

Recommendations contained in this study, which was sent to Mr. Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Ga., are expected to form part of his 1935 relief and public works program. The report covers such subjects as flood control, reforestation, soil rehabilitation, power development, and distribution of industries.

Long-Range Planning.

In general, the National Resources Board is believed to have divided the nation into its major watersheds and sought to apply to each one the principles to which it is best adapted. The program is essentially one of long-range planning, such as the TVA, and hence not so suitable for quick public works, such as grade crossing elimination and road building.

Pausing in his study of these, and alternate plans, for giving work to the army of unemployed, Mr. Roosevelt yesterday signed two Executive orders which cut an additional $15,000,000 from the $525,000,000 drought relief fund.

He allocated $5,000,000 of this amount to the Federal Emergency Relief Administration for the purchase of submarginal land, and transferred an additional $10,000,000 to the Civilian Conservation Corps for camps in the drought area. At the same time, he authorized the transfer of $10,000,000 of CCC funds to the Department of Agriculture for the purchase of forest lands.

These represented but fractions of the vast amounts the Govern-

Wiley Post Soars To 55,000 Feet

New Altitude Record Is Believed Set by Flier.

Bartlesville, Okla., Dec. 7 (AP).—Wiley Post made his second hop toward the stratosphere in the remodeled monoplane Winnie Mae today and landed with the belief he had set a new altitude record around the 55,000-foot level.

"I went higher than I did last Monday by 5,000 to 7,000 feet," the globe flier said, after bringing the Winnie Mae to a perfect landing down wind with a dead stick.

This would indicate he soared from 55,000 to 57,000 feet. Examination of his barographs after Monday's flight indicated he reached about 50,000 feet. Post landed at Phillips Airport at 4:02 p. m. (central standard time) after 2 hours and 26 minutes aloft.

Arms Check Asked by Nye Called Futile

U. S. Control Would See More Powder Made, Says du Ponts.

(Associated Press.)

Six du Pont officials cracked back at the Senate Munitions Committee yesterday with an emphatic assertion that Governmental control of chemical and munitions plants would result in more, not less, gun and powder making.

This rejoinder was aroused by statements from Chairman Nye (Republican), North Dakota, and from the committee counsel, Stephen Raushenbush, that the long array of testimony produced by the investigation pointed toward that one method of eliminating abuses.

"The further we go the more convinced I become that the business of the national defense ought to be a Government owned and controlled project," Nye said. "The sooner we cease this practice of arming the world, the better off we will be."

Du Pont Quotes Wilson.

Dr. Fin Sparre, bulky, Teutonic du Pont chemist, suggested ironically that the Government should also take over the farms which produce the raw materials for explosives. Maj. K. K. V. Casey, the company's military sales manager, produced a letter from abroad tending to show that a government monopoly in arms manufacture would result in increased production. Irenee du Pont quoted Woodrow Wilson.

These developments followed the introduction of evidence that the Du Ponts had made an agreement for the exchange of patents, including military secrets, with the British munitions makers, Nobel, Ltd. The du Ponts rejoined that this was conditional upon War Department approval, and that actually no secrets had been divulged.

In 1923, it developed, however, an improvement in powder manufacturing methods was transmitted to Nobel, but the du Ponts contended that there was no secret about it, that it was actually an old process, on which Nobel was given a patent license.

War Department Attitude.

In addition, testimony and documents were presented to show that the War Department, for the purpose of keeping the du Ponts in the powder business after the war, had sanctioned their giving technical aid to other governments in the manufacture of explosives in exchange for fees and orders.

"We are in the position," said Nye at one point, "of arming the world so we will have the capacity to produce for ourselves when they decide to use our products against us."

At the afternoon session the du Ponts, Irenee, Lammot and Felix,

30,000 Homeless In Honduras Quake

11 Cities Razed, Many Dead in Copan District.

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Dec. 7 (AP).—Eleven cities with a total population of 30,000 were laid in ruins by the earthquakes in the Copan district, official reports today revealed.

All of the townspeople were homeless and in great distress. The organization of relief committees was under way in all parts of the country. The press referred to the quakes as a national disaster and made a strong plea for public sympathy and assistance. The number of dead was not determined.

Destroyed by the quakes were the towns of Santa Rita, Cabanas, Corquin, Copan, San Antonio, Paraiso, Concepcion, Santa Fe, La Encarnacion, San Fernando, and San Jorge.

Hitler Aid Reported On Way to Washington

Berlin, Dec. 7 (AP).—Reports in diplomatic circles tonight said Gen. Joaquin von Ribbentrop, whom Adolf Hitler sent to Paris last week as his personal emissary, would go to Washington to confer with President Roosevelt.

The time of the reported visit and the subjects on which the two might confer were vague, but it was pointed out Von Ribbentrop is an expert on arms.

Powers Move to Avert War in Balkan Crisis; Slavs Harass Hungary

Plundering Charged as Mass Deportation Continues.

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Szeged, Hungary-Yugoslavia Frontier, Dec. 7.—Roving bands of Serbian irregulars on the Yugoslav side of the Hungarian border harassed the troubled countryside tonight, adding to danger of war in the Balkans.

Hungarian patrols ignored these gangs as hundreds of refugees continued to stream across the line, in one of the greatest mass deportations in modern history. The Serbs, known as comitadjis, remained for the most part on the Yugoslav side, although a few were reported to have crossed the border, shouting imprecations.

The inhabitants of border villages were frightened lest the bands cross over in the night to plunder and rob, dashing back into Yugoslavia and safety from pursuit by Hungarian border patrols.

"Down With Serbia!"

The tension reached new heights this morning when Hungarian students in this border town held a demonstration, crying "Down with Serbia!" (Yugoslavia is the kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slavs.) The students, gathering before the Serbian Orthodox Church here, sang Hungarian national songs, but dispersed quietly when police urged they refrain from violence.

Another group of 130 more shivering, embittered refugees arrived, some without baggage, others with bundles over their shoulders and only a few coins in their pockets.

Many women, crying children in their arms, were among the refugees crammed into the border town, center of the exodus. Some are being given quarters in local schools and fed by the city until they can be taken to Budapest.

Charge Plundering.

The majority are peasant farmers who complain they had no time to sell their property. The Serbs started plundering as soon as the refugee trains left, they declared. One peasant said he was working peacefully when the Serbian authorities took him and others to a police station. Then they were hurried to a railroad station without being given a chance to dispose of their property or pack personal necessities.

The fugitives said many families had been divided, because not all the family was at home when the expulsion orders were received.

Refugees from the Baranya district said 8,000 Hungarians living there had been residents of Yugoslavia for 30 or 40 years, but neglected to become citizens after the World War and were expelled.

Typical among the refugees was Bela Horavth, 48, father of eight

Boston, Dec. 7 (U.P.).—The missing Dr. George Hoyt Bigelow, 44, director of Massachusetts General Hospital and former State health commissioner, was in the Boston market district Wednesday afternoon, two days after he vanished from his Milton home, it was learned tonight.

The information, furnished by a friend of the missing medical executive, believed to be suffering from amnesia, tended to dispel fears he had perished from cold in a wooded section of Southboro, where he had been seen a few hours after his disappearance.

U. S. Won't Sit On Geneva's Chaco Board

Declines Formal Relations With Committee, but Promises Help.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Although the United States is ready to play the part of a good neighbor in bringing peace to the warring nations in the Gran Chaco jungle, this Government yesterday shied away from collaboration with the League of Nations advisory committee on this dispute.

The American attitude was disclosed in a note from Secretary of State Cordell Hull laid before the secretary general of the League of Nations yesterday by Prentiss B. Gilbert, American counsul at Geneva. The note said, however, Mr. Gilbert would maintain informal contact with the advisory committee.

The care with which the note pointed out inasmuch as the United States was not a member of the league it "does not find it possible

Victims of Long's Censorship Bid to Free Speech in Virginia

Charlottesville, Dec. 7 (AP).—Student editors at Louisiana State University who were expelled in protesting censorship of their paper, which criticized "Kingfish" Huey Long, were invited to make the University of Virginia a haven of free speech in an editorial appearing tonight in College Topics, student newspaper at the university.

"Come to Virginia," the former editors of the Louisiana State University Reveille were urged by Murat Willams, of Richmond, Va., editor-in-chief of the paper that serves the university founded by Thomas Jefferson.

"The four students who have been 'indefinitely suspended' from Louisiana State University for gross disrespect in protesting the censorship of their paper, which dared to criticize the Kingfish, can come to Virginia and say all they want about the great American demagogue," the editorial said.

"In fact they might help rid the country of Louisiana's Senator by coming to a free State and revealing in a free press just what intelligent citizens of Louisiana think of their dictator.

"Men and women throughout the country will stand behind Messrs. Montague, McGuire, Godbold and Shlosman in their attack on the clown who is threatening to enter the next Presidential election. We shall be delighted to publish their sentiments in the editorial columns of College Topics. If they dare to leave the State of Louisiana their exposures of the Kingfish's political machine will awaken America to the threat of the demagogues.

"Virginia has been a haven for refugees from political intolerance since 1607 and will welcome men whose criticisms of political absurdities has been gaged by a dictatorial machine."

Little Entente Is Ready to Fight, Czech Envoy Tells League.

Terms Hungarian 'Plots' a Menace

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Geneva, Dec. 7.—War-like talk in League of Nations circles tonight spurred frantic efforts of the big powers to put the lid on the increasingly bitter conflict between Yugoslavia and Hungary.

A sensation-filled sitting of the league council, called into extraordinary session to consider Yugoslavia's charge that Hungary was implicated in the assassination of her King, Alexander, at Marseille October 9, saw Geneva's peace activities shift suddenly from South America to southeastern Europe.

The day's developments included:

1. The statement by Eduard Benes, Czechoslovak foreign minister, that the Little Entente—Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania—will fight if any nation tries to break up that alliance.

Charges Plot in America.

2. An assertion by Tibor Eckhardt, Hungarian delegate, that Alexander was sentenced to death, not in Hungary as Yugoslavia maintains, but in America. (He said later Croats meeting in Youngstown, Ohio, and Buenos Aires favored the assassination.)

3. The charge made by Bogoljub Yevtich, Yugoslav foreign minister, that the conspiracy against Alexander was "organized and nourished in Hungary," with the direct protection of Hungarian authorities.

With ever-growing tension between Hungary and Yugoslavia reported as result of the latter's expulsion of thousands of Hungarians, the major powers tonight were striking to keep the Balkans, "the powder keg of Europe," from blowing up again.

Earlier in this session prospects for peace had been enhanced as France promised to keep her troops out of the Saar, England offered to cooperate in policing the region during the January plebiscite and Germany assented to the dispatch of an international force.

Talks of War.

Optimistic, too, were proponents of peace over the action of the United States in supporting the league's efforts to end the long, bloody war in South America's swampy Chaco Boreal.

Benes, however, did not hesitate to use the word "war," several times as he lashed out at present and prospective enemies of the powerful Little Entente, asserted conspirators were seeking to smash the new countries set up after the World War and charged plots brewed "on the new northern Hungarian frontier" were directed against Czechoslovakia.

The Czechoslovak statesman, whose diplomacy was largely responsible for creating the Little Entente, referring to a suggestion by Tewfik Rushdi Bey, Turkish delegate, that an agreement to combat terrorism be formed, said:

"If such a treaty existed today between the Little Entente and Hungary, the terrorist acts of which

Gloria's Guardians Would Step Down

Two Seek Relief From New Imposed Duties.

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—The Daily News says in a copyrighted article tonight that Thomas B. Gilchrist and George W. Wickersham, coguardians of little Gloria Vanderbilt, will ask the Supreme Court to relieve them of their newly imposed duties in connection with the decree awarding the girl's custody to Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, her paternal aunt.

Gilchrist and Wickersham were made principals in the action through which the girl-heiress' mother, Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, unsuccessfully sought her custody.

The co-guardians, the News says, will contend that Supreme Court Justice John F. Carew in his decision trespassed upon the authority of the surrogate's court which exercises full control over their trusteeship.

Couple Inherit $2,000, Pay Back Relief Funds

San Francisco, Dec. 7 (AP).—Mr. and Mrs. James Cook appeared at the emergency relief headquarters today with the announcement they had inherited $2,000, and wanted to pay the Government back what it had spent on their relief, since April.

2 Sets of Votes Won by Byrns In Gavel Battle

Gets Oklahoma, Michigan Blocs; White House May Want a Say.

By Robert C. Albright.

Two additional blocs of Democratic votes from the North and the West moved into the Speakership camp of Representative Joseph W. Byrns yesterday as the contest over the coveted House gavel narrowed sharply.

Oklahoma Democrats, with nine votes in the approaching caucus, announced their support of the Tennesseean, while the Michigan contingent of six Democrats prepared to make a similar announcement.

As Administration spokesmen denied any part in the Speakership scuffle, reports were circulated on Capitol Hill that if the White House plays even an indirect role in House reorganization it will be in an effort to name the next floor leader.

May Want, Some Say.

A "hands off" policy on the Speaker's office has been strictly maintained, but word is going the rounds that the Administration may want some say in the leadership choice. On the shoulders of the new leader, rather than the Speaker, will fall the liaison job of whipping through the White House program.

Representative Jed Johnson, senior member of Oklahoma's all-Democratic delegation, announced that group as a unit will support the Speakership candidacy of Byrns. He said the group will take formal action when it foregathers in Washington just before the caucus.

"It looks like Byrns will go over, and the only real question to be settled so far as organization of the next Congress is concerned is the selection of a Democratic floor leader," Johnson said.

"This important office probably will go to one of the Northern States."

Although no formal statement was made by the Michigan delegation, it was learned that this group also plans to announce as a unit for Byrns. Other delegations are holding their forces in line for strategical maneuvers.

Brown for Byrns.

Representative George G. Sadowsky, of Detroit, probably will be made nominal head of the Michigan delegation when members meet here for organization purposes. His close associate, Representative Prentiss M. Brown, of Michigan, yesterday pledged his own backing to the Byrns ticket.

"Every precedent points to his election," Brown said, before catching a train for Michigan. "His record as leader and loyalty to the party can not be questioned. I predict he will win."

Representative Harry L. Haines, head of the pivotal Pennsylvania delegation, already has announced he will back the Tennesseean. The 23 Democrats from that State will meet here Monday to discuss group action.

New York's powerful voting strength still hung in the balance, with members apparently divided over Representatives James M. Mead and John J. O'Connor, both candidates for the floor leadership under Byrns.

Representative Fred J. Sisson, of that State, said yesterday he felt O'Connor should get the gavel, if the Speakership goes to the North.

Representative William W. Arnold, of Illinois, was in Washington yesterday, but was noncommittal on House reorganization. His friends believe he would make a strong bid for the floor leadership on any ticket. Like most of the leadership candidates, he already has conferred at length with Byrns. It was learned that Bankhead was in touch with the Illinoisan yesterday. Bankhead also contacted the office of Representative Byrns, for the first time since the Alabaman returned to Washington. Bankhead has consistently stated he is out for no other office than the Speakership.

Representative Robert Crosser, of Ohio, chairman of the Democratic steering committee and latest entry into the Speakership melee, was silent yesterday. In additional to the Speakership, it was learned that Ohio also is angling for a place on the Ways and Means committee, lost when Representative Charles West withdrew from the House. Crosser may encounter Administration opposition. The little black book kept by the late Speaker Rainey showed he was high up on the list of Democrats who voted against White House measures.

Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, remains an outstanding contender for the Speakership. Friends of the Texan, however, expressed disappointment at the failure of Vice President John Garner, also from the Lone Star State, to take an active part in his campaign.

9,604,000 Now Idle, Industrial Board Says

New York, Dec. 7 (U.P.).—The National Industrial Conference Board tonight reported unemployment in October at 9,604,000—a decline of 345,000 from September and of 40,000 from October, 1933. The American Federation of Labor figure announced November 30 was 10,671,000.

The gain in employment from September to October was due, the conference board reported, to settlement of the textile strike.

Sleep-Walking Hubby Beat Her, Is Divorced

Chicago, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Mrs. Edward Schmidt came into court today with a story that her husband beat her while she slumbered.

He apologized and said he had done it in his sleep.

She moved to another chamber, the woman went on, but was beaten again. Schmidt explained that, she added, by saying he must have walked in his sleep and was unconscious of his actions. Judge Joseph B. David awarded the plaintiff a divorce.

Between You and Me

Four Billion or Ten?—What Is the Work Relief Program Going to Cost?

By Raymond Clapper

About this work relief program. It still is covered with more question marks than a civil service examination paper.

Mr. Roosevelt comes back from Warm Springs still uncertain as to how much it will cost. The reason is that everything hangs on some fundamental questions of policy which must be decided before cost estimates can be made.

He is going ahead with a work relief program. That is settled. But when you have said that you haven't said very much. It might cost $4,000,000,000, which is the lowest estimate given to him at Warm Springs. Or it might cost twice that. Some of the more high, wide and handsome New Dealers would stretch it a couple of billions more, so you are up to ten billion before you know it. With differences as wide as that, why guess?

Here is the arithmetic of the minimum estimates. Some 4,000,000 persons are on relief rolls. The $4,000,000,000 figure is reached by assuming that it would cost $1,000 to keep a man on work relief for a year. It is assumed in all estimates that on the average 60 per cent of the money would go for materials and 40 per cent for wages. That is, a man would be paid slightly more than $7.50 a week and $600 in materials would have to be purchased. The actual ratio of material to labor cost varies greatly with the type of work undertaken, but the 60-40 formula is generally used.

But to get the cost down to $1,000 per man per year two departures from present policy would be necessary. Relief wages would obviously run far below the prevailing rates paid in private activity and material would have to be bought below commercial prices.

One group believes that it is bad social policy for the Government to set a subnormal standard of wages on relief work and that it would tend to pull down wage rates in private activity. Certain others believe that, as in the Swedish system, the wage rate should be kept lower than in private industry to force persons over to private jobs as rapidly as possible. The answer may lie largely with organized labor. If you see President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, paddling into the White House late some afternoon you'll know what's up.

Also to bring the program within minimum estimates the Government would have to obtain special discounts for materials. Exemptions from code mark-ups would have to be obtained. That's another tough problem. The Ickes-Moffett low-cost housing row was a small firecracker compared with the dynamite in this.

But tough as these questions are, they must be decided before a program can be proposed. Unfortunately this does not quite fit the picture of New Deal blue prints unrolling full-panoplied from the brow of Jove. The birth pangs are there all right. It's just the sound-proof walls that make everything seem quiet to those on the outside.

Senator-elect Truman, of Missouri, intends to enroll in law school in January and spend his nights attending classes. Considering the number of constitutional lawyers a freshman Senator must listen to all day long at the Capitol, Senator Truman ought to get overtime pay. Still, there are a dozen kinds of trouble a Senator can keep out of in Washington by going to school at night, so it evens up.

Representative-elect P. L. Gassaway, of Oklahoma, is planning to move most of his farm to Washington. He is bringing a carload of chickens, ducks, horses and cows with him and will continue to wear his famous cowboy boots at least part-time. One Oklahoma Congressman was beaten for renomination because it was broadcast over his district that he wore dude shoes and sometimes even went out at night in a claw-hammer.

Gassaway's first name is Percy, but he is going to live it down, by heck!

Now we have the real low-down as to why Vice President Garner came on to Washington nearly a month ahead of the session. He had been hounded all summer by job hunters. The worst pests were those who waited until after 8:30 p. m. and put in long-distance calls at night rates. But he bore up under that reasonably well. What finally got him was that when he went out hunting one day, he saw a coyote and instead of slinking away it began trailing him.

"If even the coyotes are going to start hounding me I'm going back to Washington where a person can have some privacy," Garner said to himself.

Harvey Couch, former R. F. C. director and Arkansas utility man, may take that contact job with the Edison Electric Institute after all, at least on a temporary basis. He turned it down recently after Owen D. Young and a group of friends interested in rehabilitating the utilities in the public eye visited him at his Arkansas estate. Now he is in New York, where utilities leaders are prevailing on him to change his mind.

If Couch takes the job, it is understood it will be with the idea of persuading the industry to do some house cleaning on its own. He is particularly interested in stripping off some of the layers of holding companies which have fastened themselves upon the operating utilities. They bleed the operating companies and thereby force higher rates and generally serve as excess baggage, in the opinion of many operating utilities men. It is the holding companies, they feel, which have given the utilities a black eye with the public.

Couch knows his way around Washington. Senator Joseph T. Robinson once was his attorney. It is felt by many in the utilities industry that he could lead an inside house-cleaning movement that would ward off some of the more drastic regulation that otherwise appears inevitable. The hope is that wtih Couch on the job something could be done before President Roosevelt opens his bombardment on the power question.

There's plenty of palace politics, but the chances are that Mr. Roosevelt will hold the family together, he's so adept to rotating The Smile. For instance, while Undersecretary of Agriculture Tugwell was basking in the Warm Springs sunshine, his chief, Secretary Wallace, was left to slave at his desk in Washington. But the first guest at the White House after Mr. Roosevelt returned was Wallace, so everything is all right again. Postmaster General James A. Farley, who always looks down his nose at Ickes, was in Housing Administrator Moffett's corner during the recent fracas, they being very close friends.

Now there's gossip that Secretary of Navy Swanson, whose health is bad, is to retire and be succeeded by Moffett, but those who ought to know say that talk is a thousand miles off.

President Roosevelt has added another member to the New Deal alphabetical family—the SCS. It stands for Sewing Circle Stories, meaning the kind that newspapermen suck out of the thumb on dull nights and which Mr. Roosevelt hates like poison.

U. S. Balks at Geneva's Bid To Join Conference on Chaco to collaborate with the work of this committee" was regarded as signifying the Roosevelt Administration is not yet ready to move any closer to the Geneva organization than this Government has in the past, despite the recent revival of pro-league agitation.

Will Join Neutral Board.

The action of this Government, however, was seen as strengthening the league's efforts to end the Chaco warfare. The United States agreed to name a member of the proposed neutral supervisory commission, to be composed of representatives of American states meeting on American soil. This member, however, will be without plenary powers to act.

Willingness to participate in a peace conference of American states at Buenos Aires, to be convened by the Argentine Republic, to conduct negotiations for a treaty of peace between Paraguay and Bolivia, was indicated by the note.

The American offer of cooperation in the two capacities noted is contingent on acceptance of the league peace plan by Paraguay and Bolivia. Before the United States sent its reply to the league's invitation to cooperate in the plan, Assistant Secretary of State Sumner Welles canvassed the viewpoints of a part of the Latin-American diplomats here, including representatives of the belligerents.

U. S. Gets Two Bids.

The fact that the United States agreed to cooperate with the league was regarded in one quarter as an indication that Paraguay and Bolivia were disposed to accept the plan, promulgated by the league's assembly last month. Meanwhile, the bitter fighting continues, with Paraguayan troops making sweeping gains against the demoralized Bolivians.

The league on November 24 issued two invitations to the United States. The first was to participate in the deliberations of an advisory committee, composed of representatives of 23 states, which will meet at Geneva. This committee is charged with the duty of following the Chaco situation, reporting findings and recommendations to the league assembly and assisting member nations of the league to concert their action.

This Government to that invitation replied that in view of the powers, duties and responsibilities of the advisory committee it could not participate with the group, but that Mr. Prentiss would maintain informal contact for purposes of information if agreeable to the committee.

The second invitation was to name a representative to take part in the duties of the neutral supervisory commission to deal with the military aspects involved in the cessation of hostilities between Bolivia and Paraguay and in taking measures necessary to provide for the neutrality of the zone which it is proposed shall extend between the military forces of the belligerent nations.

Without Power to Vote.

Mr. Prentiss was instructed to tell the league the United States would be happy to cooperate in the work of this commission by naming a representative "who would, however, participate in the labors of the commission without power to vote or to commit the United States except under specific instructions from the Government of the United States."

This commission will come into existence only if Paraguay and Bolivia accept the league's plan. In addition to the United States other members of the commission would be representatives of Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Peru and Uruguay.

The peace conference of American States which the United States also is willing to participate in, under the league plan, would meet on call of the Argentine republic one month after hostilities ended. Those attending this meeting would be the American nations comprising the Washington Committee of Neutrals—Cuba, Colombia, Mexico, Uruguay and the United States.

$4,000,000 Morro Castle Insurance Paid

Firm Collected $263,000 More Than Book Value of Burned Ship.

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

The Ward Line collected $4,186,000 in insurance as a result of the Morro Castle fire, approximately $263,000 more than the book value of the ship after writing off depreciation charges, it was brought out at the postoffice hearing on Ward Line mail contracts, which ended yesterday.

H. A. Blomquist, Postoffice Department inspector, testified at the hearing that of the insurance collected, $2,737,745.44 was paid to the United States Shipping Board to pay off notes held by the board for money advanced the company when the ship was constructed.

The ship was carried on the books at about $3,923,000. It was put in service in August, 1930.

The company was thus able to keep $1,448,254.56 of the insurance to use in writing off its original investment and have the surplus of $263,000 above the book value.

Blomquist also testified concerning the intricate financial situation of Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies Steamship Co., parent firm of the Ward Line.

The Ward Line, or New York & Cuba Mail Steamship Co., showed a loss of $1,750,000 during the period from 1928 to 1933, inclusive, when it held the mail subsidy contract, Blomquist said.

However, he continued, the Ward Line itself did not own the Morro Castle and Oriente, built under terms of the contract, but rather chartered them from the AGWI Navgation Co., another Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies subsidiary.

$1,086,000 Profit.

AGWI, from 1928 to 1933, showed a net profit of $1,086,000, derived entirely from rents of ships used by the Ward Line, the inspector said.

During this same period, Blomquist testified, the Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies received $1,250,000 from the Ward Line as interest on this firm's bonds held by the parent company.

Peter J. Connolly, Government counsel, charged that these two items clearly indicated the Ward Line would have shown a profit were it not for the intricate bookkeeping and financial set-up of the three companies.

Blomquist then said that the stock of the Ward Line was worthless, and that the company's liabilities exceeded assets by $400,000.

Added to this, he said, the company was carrying $1,000,000 among its assets as good will.

Ex-Gov. Brandon Of Alabama Dead Of Hemorrhage

Tuscaloose, Ala., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—William Woodward Brandon, former Governor and an outstanding political figure of Alabama, died today of cerebral hemorrhage. He was 66 years old.

In failing health since 1928, when he took the stump in behalf of Alfred E. Smith for president on the Democratic ticket, he had for the most part lived a quiet life at his home here.

The former Governor was chairman of the Alabama delegation at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago in 1932, and with his announcement "Alabama yields to Massachusetts," the nomination of President Roosevelt was placed before the convention.

Brandon was a member of the State House of Representatives from Tuscaloose County in 1894-1898, he served as State auditor from 1897 to 1911 and then became probate judge of Tuscaloosa County, a position he held until 1923.

He was inaugurated Governor in 1923 and after his retirement as Governor in 1927, was appointed by Gov. Bibb Graves as probate judge of Tuscaloosa County, a position he held until his death.

Funeral services will be held here tomorrow.

Liquor License Revoked by Board

Mrs. Leish Loses Permit for Fourteenth St. Place.

The District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday revoked the liquor license of Mrs. Shirley Leish, effective midnight Thursday. Mrs. Leish had a retailer's Class C license for 2416 Fourteenth street northwest.

Her husband, Henry Leish, had been convicted of violating the prohibition law in 1933. At the time the license was issued Mrs. Leish said her husband would not have anything to do with the business and would not be permitted in the place.

Private Paul F. Little, son of Lieut. George Little, head of the special liquor and gambling squad, testified Leish not only had been seen in the place but had served drinks.

ISOBEL LILLIAN STEELE.

American Girl To Be Deported From Germany

Isobel Steele Arrested in August 'on Suspicion of Espionage.'

The State Department was notified yesterday that Isobel Lillian Steele, of Hollywood, Calif., who has been held in Germany since August 10, will be deported on December 11 and be home for Christmas, the Associated Press reports.

The information came from Douglas Jenkins, consul general at Berlin. He said the young teacher had been transferred from Moabit Prison, to ordinary police detention quarters in Berlin.

Arrangements have been made, Jenkins reported, for her to sail from Hamburg next Tuesday on the steamship President Harding, scheduled to arrive in New York on December 21.

The consul general reported that Miss Steele was "very happy at her prospects for early freedom."

She was arrested in Berlin on August 10 on "suspicion of espionage," and has been held in prison since without any formal charges having been filed.

At the request of Senator Borah, of Idaho, American diplomatic officials made repeated efforts to have her released or to have formal charges filed.

Borah intervened at the request of Arthur Steele, of Nampa, Idaho, brother of Miss Steele.

Richard Roiderer, formerly of Chicago, arrested in June and held in prison since on "suspicion," is still imprisoned despite the State Department's efforts to have action in his case expedited.

17 Dead in Barn Fire.

Perpignan, France, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—The death of another woman in a hospital here tonight made a total of 17 fatalities from injuries received in a barn fire at St. Gaudericic. The fire, starting as motion pictures were being shown Wednesday night, caused a panic among the spectators.

Richards Quits As Prosecutor; Joins Law Firm

Got Convictions Against Harris, Dunn, Berlin as U. S. Attorney.

Julian I. Richards, for many years prosecutor in criminal work in the office of the United States attorney yesterday resigned from the staff of United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett to enter private practice.

Among the most celebrated criminal cases prosecuted by Richards while in office were the ones in which he convicted Charles Harris of the gangland slaying of "Millsie" Henry, small-time gambler, and the more recent one in which he obtained a verdict of guilty against John (Slim) Dunn and Sam Berlin for the Heurich Brewing Co. robbery.

In a letter accepting the resignation, Mr. Garnett praised Richards' services. He wrote that "Your career as assistant United States attorney has been marked by fairness, courage and ability. You have successfully prosecuted many cases, and many of the most notorious criminals who have appeared in our courts for some years."

Richards said he would become associated with the law firm of Cromelin & Laws.

Hazen and Sultan For Parking Ban

Washington of 3 inches or more, Mr. Summy said.

Arthur Clarendon Smith, representing the Federation of Business Men, said the ban would work a distinct hardship on the smaller business man. Speaking for himself alone Mr. Smith expressed the belief a ban on parking eventually would be necessary.

Construction of public garages was proposed by William A. Roberts, people's counsel, who indorsed the proposed ban. The ban, Mr. Roberts said, would facilitate the movement of street cars and other public conveyances.

An even broader parking prohibition was suggested by Burton W. Marsh, representing the American Automobile Association. He approved the Advisory Council scheme, but added that consideration should be given to parking problems in the congested sections of the city, where existing parking facilities were inadequate.

"We will have to eliminate this parking or else meet the criticism which comes down on the District government every time there is a heavy snow," Commissioner Hazen said.

William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic, said 7,400 automobile owners would be affected by the proposed ban. Eighty-eight per cent of the automobiles now parked on the streets included in the banned list could be parked on side streets within one block of the residence of the owners, he said. Another 8 per cent could be parked within two blocks, the traffic director said. This would leave only 325 machines for which parking space could not be found within two blocks.

Others who indorsed the plan included Arthur Sundlun, of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association; Wallace Robinson, of the Board of Trade, and George Beasley, of the Federation of Civic Associations.

Traffic Fatalities Nearing Record

Boy's Death Brings Total to Within Two of 1932 Toll.

Washington's traffic deaths for the year reached 121 late yesterday, within 2 of the all-time record of 123 in 1932, when Willie Cross, 5, colored, of the 1400 block Swann street northwest, died of injuries suffered November 28 when he was struck by an automobile.

Swann died at Freedmen's Hospital, where he was taken after the accident, which occurred in the 1700 block of Florida avenue.

Police said the automobile was driven by James R. Hutchinson, 50, of the 1600 block Buchanan street northwest. Mr. Hutchinson is being held pending a coroner's inquest.

London Awaits Tokyo's Reply To U.S. Caution

Japanese Delegates Ask if They Should Make New Proposals.

London, Dec. 7 (AP).—Tri-power naval conversations marked time here today as delegates awaited Tokyo's reply to an American warning that the end of present naval treaties may mean unrestricted shipbuilding.

The Japanese delegates, Ambassador Tsuneo Matsudaira and Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto, asked their government for instructions as to whether they should make new proposals for an agreement to replace the 1922 Washington pact, which Japan intends to denounce before the end of the year.

A British spokesman, meanwhile, indicated that Britain's restatement today of her position—favoring 30 per cent reduction in the sizes of battleships, aircraft carriers and large cruisers—was prompted by the address yesterday of Norman H. Davis, United States Ambassador at large, in which he outlined the American point of view.

Davis, whose remarks previously had been approved by Washington, revealed that President Roosevelt had proposed reduction of all navies. He urged retention of the principles of existing treaties.

The British spokesman said Britain's reiteration of her stand for reduction in the sizes of the three major categories of fighting ships should not be taken as an answer to Davis, but was intended merely to show that Britain also wants naval reductions, albeit in different fashion.

Official quarters indicated Davis' address received careful consideration because the British government had not had before such an authoritative statement of the American position on reduction of armaments.

The British and Americans this evening felt that Tokyo's reply to her delegates' request for instructions would determine whether the conversations should be continued after Japan denounces the Washington treaty.

Both maintained they were still hopeful that Japan would drop her original demand for absolute equality, but admitted there was little possibility Tokyo would make any such move.

War-Navy Estimates Held Up by U. S.

Chairman Buchanan (Democrat), Texas, of the House Appropriations Committee, reported yesterday that the amount of War-Navy appropriations for the next fiscal year depend upon the international situation, the Associated Press says.

The Administration, Buchanan said, has not yet submitted budget estimates for the Army and Navy. He said he hoped the committee could start work on them early in the session.

"If the international situation is disturbed and we need additional appropriations," he said, "it will be possible to make them in a deficiency bill or in a resolution.

"I don't know what the military appropriations are going to be because we don't know what Japan and other powers are going to do," Buchanan said. "If the naval conference fails I expect we will make appropriations to carry out the Vinson naval construction program."

British Craft Laden With Alcohol Seized

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—A British fishing schooner laden with 33,450 gallons of alleged contraband alcohol was seized early today by customs guards on a Coast Guard patrol boat.

The schooner was the George and Earl, from a Mexican port. It was captured in the East River off Hell Gate, in what customs officials said was the first seizure of craft for rum-running in local waters since prohibition repeal. Officials estimated the cargo's legal value at $334,500.

Rome Protests As Ethiopians Enter Province

Sharply Worded Dispatch Sent Government After Attack.

Rome, Dec. 7 (AP).—A strongly worded Italian protest—the second in as many months—was made to the Ethiopian government today after armed bodies of Ethiopians attacked Ualual, Italian Somaliland.

The assault, Stefani News Agency dispatches reported, took place Wednesday and the attackers, said to have had machine guns and artillery, were driven off only after reinforcements were rushed to the isolated Italian garrison at the Wells of Ualual.

As was the case three weeks ago, when an armed group attacked the Italian consulate at Gondar, near Lake Tana, the Italian Minister at Addis Ababa made energetic representations to the government of Emperor Hailie Selassie.

The new clash between Italian and Abyssinian forces recalled rumors rife recently of impending conflict in Africa, and heavy reinforcements Italy sent to her colonies in Eritrea and Abyssinia.

The Stefani dispatches said the Dubat troops manning the garrison at Ualual "resisted until the arrival of reinforcements from neighboring posts. The attackers were then heavily defeated and fled."

The Ethiopians, it was reported, abandoned quantities of "arms, munitions, tents and horses and cleared out of the zone for a radius of about 10 miles. The necessary dispositions have been taken to avoid further incidents on that frontier."

The attack on the Gondar consulate in November was led by the Abyssinian chief of police of that town. One member of the consulate guard, composed of Italians from the Eritrean colony, was killed and two wounded. The Addis Ababa government ten days later made ample apologies and compensated families of the guards killed and wounded.

Yugoslav Raids On Border Add To War Threat

children. While his wife sobbed at his side, Horavth said:

"I have lived in Zombor since 1913. I am a poor carpenter and only earned enough to buy food. I don't know what 'opting' (the citizenship procedure) means, except I suddenly was called to a police station and told to leave within four hours."

Horvath said his oldest child was 14, the youngest 13 months. "Forty dinars (about $1.20) is all we have," he added.

Anna Toth, mother of four children, said: "I was ordered to leave Neusatz within four hours. I have brought three children with me, but my fourth, 6 years old, was visiting an aunt and I couldn't take her. I don't know what has happened to her."

Mrs. Stephan Szabo, in a border hospital, said: "I have been bedridden for eight years and had to leave the country on a stretcher merely because I was born in Hungary, although living in Zombor for the last 35 years."

Johann Horvath, 18, said: "I can speak no Hungarian, although my mother is Hungarian. My father, a Yugoslav, stayed behind."

The authorities gave food and lodging to hundreds, but the limited facilities were practically exhausted by the steady stream of refugees.

Budapest, Hungary, Dec. 7 (AP).—A special session of the Hungarian Cabinet called to consider the situation growing out of Yugoslavia's expulsion of Hungarians was followed tonight by an appeal for contributions to care for the refugees.

Inasmuch as the cabinet issued no communique assailing the Yugoslav action, it was believed the government, which already has appealed to the League of Nations, wished to allow highly excited public opinion to calm before taking further action.

The number of refugees who have entered Hungary thus far was set officially tonight at 2,074, of whom 56 arrived at the border town of Keledia this evening. Reports from several towns where refugees found shelter, however, indicated the total was considerably larger.

Official circles characterized the situation as grave and newspapers were ordered not to publish details of the number or condition of the arrivals in order not to inflame public opinion.

The ministry of interior issued the appeal for contributions to care for the refugees, which will be used together with government funds set apart for the purpose, as officials took testimony from the refugees in border towns.

Powers Move To Avert War In the Balkans

Little Entente Is Ready to Fight, Czech Envoy Tells League.

Yugoslavia was a victim, would make Hungary an aggressor and the Little Entente would have the right to defend themselves with their armed forces."

Claims Russian Support.

Declaring Russia stood ready to back the Little Entente against an aggressor—defined in their agreement as a nation which supported or protected armed bands—Benes said "war between Yugoslavia and Hungary would have been a dolorous and horrible reality" had Alexander's assassination occurred before the World War or before the existence of the league.

"If, in the future," he continued, "anybody strikes at the unity of Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Rumania, that catastrophe will surely come."

Earlier Eckhardt, for Hungary, characterized Yugoslavia's charges that his nation nurtured terrorism, as "merely a political maneuver against Hungary."

The statement brought Nicolas Titulescu, Rumanian foreign minister, to his feet in the packed council chamber to demand that the Little Entente, since it had been attacked, be given the right to defend itself.

Demands Session Continue.

"Ministers and kings may be assassinated," he exclaimed, "but our right of defense can not be stifled." He demanded continuance of the session into next week.

Eckhardt asserted the Marseille murders were not plotted in Hungary and the assassin never lived in Hungary.

"A secret terrorist organization which had its headquarters in Yugoslavia" prepared the assassination, the Hungarian said, adding that "Alexander was condemned to death by Croats and terrorists organizations which existed outside Hungary.

"Croat newspapers spoke of this assassination, and at Croat meetings in America the death sentence passed on the King was pronounced."

[Subsequently, Eckhardt explained he had been informed that "last summer, in Youngstown, Ohio, a big Croat meeting, attended by several thousands, was held, at which a death sentence upon the King was announced and cheered." He said Croats meeting in Buenos Aires took similar action.]

The real cause of the crime, the Hungarian delegate asserted, was "the revolutionary bitterness which had arisen as result of the Yugoslav regime."

Approximately 1,500,000 Croats, Eckhardt said later, left Yugoslavia either as political refuges or because they wished to find jobs abroad. He said he had been asked to attenuate his memorandum, in order not to aggravate the political situation.

Indications tonight were that the council session, after permitting further letting off of steam, would hand the conflict over to a committee which will draw up recommendations.

An international conference on ways to check terrorist activities seemed one certain outcome of today's deliberations.

Death Sentence For Alexander Denied in Ohio

Talk by Dr. Jelic After Slaying Held Reason for Accusation.

Youngstown, Ohio, Dec. 7 (AP).—Americans of Hungarian and Croatian extraction were startled by the sensational assertion today that prior to the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia a "death sentence" for him was announced and cheered at a meeting of Croatians in Youngstown.

The assertion, made in Geneva by Tibor Eckhardt, Hungarian representative to the League of Nations, probably was based upon misinformation, said Joseph Kraja, president of the Croatian Circle of the United States and Canada.

A prominent Cleveland Hungarian, who declined to be quoted, expressed a similar view. He said the official Hungarian belief is that the assassination plot was hatched in Belgium.

Plans for Protest.

Aroused by the Yugoslav expulsion order against 27,000 Hungarian residents of Yugoslavia, Hungarian leaders in Cleveland tonight laid plans for a formal protest to the United States Government.

Stephen Gobozy, president of the United Hungarian Societies of Cleveland, said the action of Hungarians in the United States will be as American citizens, and will strike at the expulsion as an "inhuman action" without mentioning politics or nationalism.

Copies of the protests will be addressed, the Hungarian leader said, to Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Premier Mussolini of Italy, and Senator William Borah.

Regarding Eckhradt's statement in Geneva, Kraja asserted that if anyone at the Youngstown meetings announced or pronounced a "death sentence" on the king, he was unaware of it, and that it had no official part in the sessions.

Death Predicted.

Kraja recalled, however, that some of the Croatians predicted the assassination of the Yugoslav King. At one meeting, he said, the Croats called upon the King "to be careful lest he fall victim to an assassin."

Newspaper reporters who attended the meetings said one Croatian leader said Alexander should be warned by the fate of "other tyrants, none of whom had died in bed."

The opinion was expressed among Croats here today that Eckhardt may have been misled by a statement made by Dr. Branemir Jelic, exiled Croatian leader, in a Youngstown address the day after the assassination.

At that time Jelic said the King's death "was not murder; it was the carrying out of a sentence of death imposed by the Croatian people on Alexander the Tyrant."

Stuart Portrait Of Washington Under Question

Goshen, N. Y., Dec. 7 (AP).—Authenticity of a Gilbert Stuart portrait of George Washington is involved in a disagreement over price revealed in Supreme Court today.

Justice Raymond E. Aldrich granted permission to file suit to Charles A. White, of Chappaqua, in behalf of Wilbur J. Cooke, former art dealer. No suit has been filed.

The case involves Wildstein Findlay, as representative of the Kansas City Museum. White claims the picture was sold for $18,000, but Findlay questioned its authenticity and paid only $5,000. The picture was said to be in the Findlay galleries in Chicago. Papers filed here did not identify which Stuart portrait was involved.

Churches Plan A Round Table To Bring Peace

Suggestion of National Conference Includes 12 Nations.

Dayton, Ohio, Dec. 7 (AP).—While the possibilities of war were discussed in many nations, a plan for a new approach toward peace—a round-table conference of religions of the world—was indorsed today by the National Conference on the Churches and World Peace.

Three hundred churchmen and delegates of allied religious organizations, representing most American Protestant communions, approved the proposal for the round table, probably to be held at Geneva.

The conference approved U. S. Senator Gerald P. Nye's proposal that a 98 per cent war-time income tax be levied on all incomes above $10,000; it asked national naval restrictions to prevent a "calamitous race of armaments with Japan;" and it urged the United States to cooperate with the League of Nations in attempts to arbitrate the Chaco war. Another resolution condemned the present system under which the United States Army and Navy chaplaincies operate.

Counseled by technical advisers of several nations, the proposed round-table conference on peace would bring representatives of as many of the world's religions as possible to a consideration of the causes of war and their elimination. The World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches was asked to call the round table next summer.

Under the plan, at least 12 world powers would be represented by technical advisers and religious representatives.

The conference declared all war sinful and argued "the church should not commission her ministers to serve either under the control, on the pay roll or in the uniform of the military and naval agencies of war, but that the gospel * * * should be carried on by the church distinctly separate from any military establishment."

Hull Holds Telephone Parley With Minister Hirota at Tokyo

Cordial Words Exchanged in Talk Marking New Service.

As the naval conversations hung fire, Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Japanese Foreign Minister Koki Hirota last night for the first time heard each other's voice in a conversation inaugurating direct telephone service between the United States and Japan.

Neither mentioned the naval armament dispute, which has almost reached the point of the United States and Japan glowering at each other.

The Hull-Hirota conversation, which in effect was a brief speech by each since the text was written out in advance, was couched in diplomatic language with cordiality as its keynote.

Recalls Perry Journey.

Sitting in his office here, surrounded by a group of American and Japanese diplomats and telephone company officials, Mr. Hull expressed pleasure at being able to speak to Minister Hirota and recalled that 81 years ago Commodore Perry in a journey which required more than seven months carried a message to Japan from the then Secretary of State.

"It is a common observation that in the measure that people enjoy personal contact with one another," he asserted, "so do the barriers which separate them dissolve. This new means of communication which we inaugurate today spans the wide ocean as an additional link between our peoples.

Hirota Sees "New Era."

"It is my hope that by furthering the interchange of ideas and of commerce which play so important a part in the relationship of states, radiotelephone service will be of great and mutual benefit to our two nations."

Minister Hirota replied he was happy "to reciprocate the spirit of cordiality in which you have just spoken," adding that establishment of the new communication system "marks a new era in the good relations between our two countries," and will prove to be "a novel means for the promotion of understanding and good will."

Mr. Hirota predicted the day would soon come when the telephone would work hand in hand with television "so that not only shall we hear other's voice but also see each other's face."

"If this vision be translated into reality," he added, "distance would be almost annihilated to the further enhancement of the intimacy which characterizes the relationship of our two nations."

"Good Golfing!"

An informal touch was added to the occasion when Hirosi Saito, the Japanese envoy, in closing his remarks to Joseph C. Grew, the United States Ambassador to Tokyo, wished him success in his official business—and his golf. Whereupon the American wished him likewise amid laughter of the auditors at both ends of the transocean wires.

As the ceremonies were about to be ended Mr. Grew was told that his daughter, Mrs. Pierpont Moffett, was present in the Secretary of State's office and had been an interested participant. She was put on the line and her father told her that her sister had returned from the hospital and that the baby was doing well.

Eugene O. Sykes, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, also spoke briefly with Take Jiro Tokonami, Japanese minister of communications.

Roosevelt Asks For Full Report On Balkan Row

Information on Expulsion of Hungarians From Yugoslavia Sought.

The American Government yesterday called upon its diplomatic representatives in the Balkan states for full information on the expulsion of nearly 30,000 former Hungarians from Yugoslavia.

The request for details was made by the State Department at the request of the White House, President Roosevelt disclosed. Explaining to newspaper correspondents that this Government had received little information on the Balkan situation, Mr. Roosevelt added with a smile:

"Perhaps the wires are down."

Busy with multiple domestic problems which must be disposed of before Congress meets on January 3, the President declined to discuss the naval negotiations in London. He said Ambassador Norman Davis, chief of the United States delegation, outlined the Administration's position in his speech Thursday.

Mr. Roosevelt denied reports that the Government was sending Hugh Gibson, American Ambassador to Brazil, to Europe on an official mission. Gibson called at the White House yesterday and the President said later that the Ambassador was going to Europe to visit his son, who is ill.

Asked if he shares the opinion of Robert Bingham, Ambassador to Great Britain, that the time is ripe for expanding Anglo-American cooperation in world affairs, Mr. Roosevelt asked:

"When did he say that?"

"In a speech a few days ago," the correspondent replied.

"I'll have to get a copy and read it," the President said.

DuPonts Assail Arms Curb Plan

Casey Presses Point.

Casey, gaunt, wiry former Army officer and renowned pistol shot, pressed his contention that governmental control would mean more munitions rather than less, by citing the experience of Europe following the 1925 convention at Geneva which produced a treaty intended to regulate international shipments of arms.

The result he described as an effort on the part of almost every nation to establish its own munitions plant. It was in connection with these that the War Department authorized the du Ponts to lend other governments technical assistance as a means of keeping the company in the powder business.

Text of Communication.

The communication said:

"It is the opinion of the military manufacturers that no limitation will be put on governmental manufactures; for example, in France, there are 300,000 people employed in the government arsenals, and nearly all these men vote for the Socialist Deputies; therefore, while the Socialist Deputies with their Liberal doctrines cry for disarmament, any attempts on the part of the French war department to close down the government factories are bitterly opposed by these same deputies on the basis that it would throw voters out of work.

"In many other countries the same situation exists, and whenever there has been a tendency on the part of the military administration to reduce governmental manufacture, it has been always opposed by the labor deputies on the basis that it would put men out of work.

"It is therefore generally believed that there will be no limitation to governmental manufacture. The only thing which will be acceptable to the politicians is limitation on private manufacture; and it is further supposed that in case of future limitation on private manufacture that the present private factories, such as Hotchkiss in France and Bofors in Sweden, will be immediately transformed into government arsenals and continued as before."

Irenee du Pont later referred to a quotation from Wilson's message to Congress following the war in which he spoke of the value of a "policy of prudence" in maintaining a well-developed chemical and dye making industry in the United States. The war President referred to this as a lesson learned from that great conflict, in asking Congress for tariff protection on the products of the chemical industry.

Midshipmen to Get 12-Day Holiday

Leave Starts December 20, Ends New Year's Night.

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—Happy at the prospect of 12 days of Christmas leave, carrying with it the privilege of visiting home folk throughout the Nation, midshipmen of the Naval Academy today began consulting plane and train schedules, to conserve time as much as possible.

Officials of the academy announced that the holiday would begin on the afternoon of December 20, and extend until evening roll call New Year's Day. All of the 1,750 midshipmen, not under restriction, may avail themselves of it. Those forced to remain at base will be permitted overnight visits to Washington, Baltimore and other nearby points.

Pursuant to custom, the midshipmen on the eve of departure will gather around a decorated tree in front of Bancroft Hall and sing Christmas carols, then repairing to the "mess" for their Christmas dinner.

Nazi Bombings Result in New Austrian Panic

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Vienna, Dec. 7.—Authorities were concerned tonight with a startling increase in terroristic bombings, spreading panic through Austria, as indications grew that the Nazis again were active.

The new wave of terrorism coincides with the return of Franz Von Papen to Vienna from Berlin, to resume his duties as Minister to Austria.

Von Papen is said to have brought new peace proposals in an effort to cement Austria-German relations, but the bombings laid to Austrian Nazis have worked against his pacifying efforts.

The bombings in various parts of the country appear to be increasing in number and frequency, the United Press was informed. The Nazis apparently plan these acts of terrorism not so much with a desire to take human lives or damage public property as to embarrass the Fascist regime of Chancellor Kurt Von Schuschnigg.

Nazi sources admitted that recent negotiations between Chancellor Von Schuschnigg and the Austrian Nazi party, long outlawed, had broken down and as result many of the more militant Nazis are disgruntled. They favor resuming warfare against the government.

However, non-Nazi quarters assert that not only have the negotiations failed but the Nazis are split among themselves and for the first time lacked a united front. Whatever may be happening within the party, there is no doubt that Minister von Papen is not making great progress in his efforts to reach an Austro-German understanding.

Efforts are being pushed to get Geneva's approval of an increase in Austria's army. Italy was reported to be behind this movement. The chancellor discussed this issue at length while in Rome recently, gaining Premier Benito Mussolini's approval, it was said. Il Duce was understood to have reaffirmed his readiness to put Italy's army at Austria's service, in case of need, as he did when the Nazis rebelled last July, resulting in the shooting of Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss.

Hornsbys Reconciled.

St. Louis, Dec. 7 (AP).—A divorce suit by Mrs. Mary Jeanette Hornsby against Rogers Hornsby, manager of the St. Louis Browns, was dismissed today by her attorney, who said a reconciliation had taken place.

La Follettes Back Huge Works Plan

ment is now expending, principally for relief. The Treasury balance sheet issued yesterday showed that $3,033,368,000 has been spent for the five months and five days since July 1, representing a deficit of $1,515,931,000.

This is almost twice the deficit for last year at this time, and represents an expenditure of $2 for every $1 in revenue. Spending is still below Mr. Roosevelt's estimate of a two-year deficit of $9,295,000,000, however, although the rate may be increased after the Administration's new program is launched.

Closely tied in with Mr. Roosevelt's social and economic plans is the development of power, which he discussed yesterday with David E. Lilenthal, a director of the TVA, and C. E. Groesbeck, chairman of the board of Electric Bond and Share. This company is a holding corporation vitally affected by the TVA.

Question Constitutionality.

Mr. Lilenthal admitted that the situation at Knoxville, Tenn., where purchase of property controlled by Electric Bond and Share was held up by court action, was discussed, but neither he nor Mr. Groesbeck would comment. The latter is a trustee of the Edison Electric Institute, which has threatened a court test of the constitutionality of the whole Tennessee Valley experiment.

Meantime, the possibility of Administration action on another power question, involving the preservation of Niagara Falls, was seen in Mr. Roosevelt's promise to inquire into the status of a proposed treaty with Canada. In reply to an inquiry, the President said he believed the treaty—which has never been ratified by the Senate—would give private companies additional water rights, of which he does not approve.

Mr. Roosevelt spent his first full day back at his desk receiving a host of visitors and presiding over his first meeting of the Cabinet in three weeks.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, one of his callers, expressed satisfaction with the way the silver purchase act is working and added that he is opposed to levying any additional taxes. He made two predictions:

That silver will advance gradually to $1.29, without further legislation; and that present revenue laws will bring in from $500,000,000 to $1,000,000,000 more income, due to an improvement in business.

Voorhees V. Catlin.

Green Supports Moffett's Plan For Private Aid

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Organized labor last night threw its support behind Federal Housing Administrator James Moffett in his battle with other New Dealers to stimulate a building revival through the use of private capital instead of Federal dollars.

In stating the position of the trade unionists, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, told the United Press he had no desire to involve the workers in the sharp controversy existing between Moffett and Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes.

Ickes favors a huge public works and slum clearance program and construction of low-cost homes financed by Federal cash. He does not share Moffett's confidence that the job of stimulating the heavy or durable goods industries through home building and plant modernization will and should be undertaken by private capital.

Green stepped warily into this situation last night, but left no doubt that labor's sympathies were definitely with Moffett. He had a kind word, however, for Ickes' administration of the Government's public works program.

"A public works program was entirely justified and essential in priming the pump and it has played an important part in the Nation's battle toward recovery," the labor chieftain said.

"It may be—no one can tell yet—that the Government will have to keep on priming the pump. But that is not a satisfactory situation. This is a job for the banks and for private capital. The banks have the money—loads of it. Many plants are run down. New homes are needed. Others have to be repaired.

"Private money can and should take over this task. It is important that the period of transition from Government spending to private spending be hastened."

Cutting Is Seen Election Victor

New Mexico to Certify His Triumph, Claim; Chavez Forces Also Hopeful.

Prospects that Senator Bronson Cutting, of New Mexico, will be sworn in as a member of the next Senate were enhanced last night, with word that the New Mexico canvassing board will certify his election.

Friends of Representative Dennis Chavez, Administration candidate for his seat, who is trailing Cutting by only a few votes, expressed confidence, however, that Chavez will win in the final showdown.

Prospects of a formal inquiry into Cutting's campaign expenditures dwindled, as three members of the Senate Campaign Funds Investigating Committee were said to hold present evidence insufficient to warrant a committee investigation.

Senators taking this view were said to be Borah, of Idaho, and Keyes, of New Hampshire (Republicans), and Costigan, of Colorado (Democrat).

One prominent member of the Administration family voiced the not-to-be-quoted hope that Cutting would be seated.

Virginia Boy Is Hurt Critically in Accident

Winchester, Va., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—Thomas Gardner, 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Gardner, of Stephens City, was critically injured last night when he was struck by an automobile when he ran from his yard into the street while at play.

Both the child's legs were broken. He was unconscious when brought to the hospital and late today had shown no improvement. G. W. Leftwich, of Columbus, Ohio, driver of the car, was dismissed by Justice A. J. Tavenner today.

Drive to End Drug Traffic In Midwest Led by Woman

Mrs. Elizabeth Bass, U. S. Official at Chicago, Directs Campaign.

Chicago, Dec. 7 (AP).—A gray-haired matron tonight led an aggressive drive to smash Midwestern drug traffic.

Mrs. Elizabeth Bass, dynamic Federal narcotic chief for the Chicago District, directed her staff in a campaign that has already resulted in 250 arrests and the scuttling of a syndicate reported to have enjoyed a $3,600,000 annual trade in the illegal stuff. But the war has only begun.

"Our purpose is a general round-up of all known addicts and peddlers in this area," Mrs. Bass stated. "We aim to exterminate all the handlers and minimize the effects of this absolutely devastating business.

"This drive is directed mainly at the traffic in the larger cities—Chicago, Milwaukee, Indianapolis, East St. Louis and Peoria—but the problem is not entirely an urban one. It is not confined to any class of society or race."

Among the 20 persons taken in overnight raids by Federal men and the narcotic squad of the Chicago police department were John Daniels, 41, and James Sweeney, 42. Officials identified them as former convicts who were main cogs in the $3,600,000 combine. They said search of the prisoners' rooms had uncovered $200,000 worth of drugs—a portion of the $300,000 lot smuggled to the syndicate from New York each month.

Other disclosures accompanied the arrests. One middle-aged woman was caught selling her wares on a North Side street; another on an elevated railroad platform. A male distributor told the agents he had bought his original stock with money raised by pan-handling.

For several nights Mrs. Bass' operatives, with the cooperation of the police in Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, have swooped down on dark haunts and gay rendezvous. They gathered in all known addicts and peddlers. They were trundled off to jails, the salesmen to await arraignment before a United States commissioner.

Many of those seized were young girls. With other slaves of the habit, they were taken to the house of correction for the "cure."

Mrs. Bass is the only woman narcotic chief in Government service.

2 U. S. Experts Uphold Paper In Labor Fight

Richberg, Smith Contend Board Should Not Have Acted.

(Associated Press.)

Two of the Administration's leading legal experts lined up yesterday with the San Francisco Call-Bulletin in the paper's fight with the Labor Relations Board.

Both Donald Richberg and Blackwell Smith agreed with the Call-Bulletin that the board should not have considered the complaint of Dean S. Jennings, a rewrite man, that he was forced to resign because of activity as a member of the American Newspaper Guild.

Richberg is executive director of the National Emergency Council and formerly was NRA general counsel. He is one of President Roosevelt's principal advisers. Smith is acting general counsel for NRA.

Each filed a lengthy brief with the board yesterday after the board agreed to suspend its decision, which held it could take jurisdiction in the case, and ordered the Call-Bulletin to reinstate Jennings. Richberg built his legal argument around his contention that "may" means "shall" and carries no connotation of discretion.

Board Has Jurisdiction.

The Executive order establishing the Labor Relations Board says that the board "may" decline to take cognizance of labor disputes that can be handled by another agency.

Both Richberg and the paper contend the complaint should have been considered by the Newspaper Industrial Board, a labor disputes agency set up by the newspaper code. The Labor Relations Board, to the contrary, argues that the Executive order gave the board discretion as to what cases it should consider.

Richberg went beyond legal argument, however, to plead for harmony between the various agencies of Government and to say that both the NRA and the publishers understood the code provided for handling of all newspaper labor disputes by the industrial board and that the code was not to be modified without the publishers' consent.

Should Abide by Article 7.

"The agreement made and embodied in Article 7 should certainly be maintained by any agency of the Government in the letter and spirit and no representative of the Government would certainly voluntarily participate in any effort to twist the meaning of Article 7 or to evade its obligations by any legal hair-splitting," he said.

Smith likewise said the spirit of the code would not permit amendment without the publishers' consent.

"Unless there is a desire to monopolize (handling of labor disputes by the Labor Relations Board)," he said, "it would seem axiomatic that the remedies for settlement of code problems provided in codes of fair competition, and this one most of all, should be exhausted before outside methods of settlement are injected into the picture."

Morris Ernst, counsel for the guild, contends that the case will come before the board sooner or later, and the question of jurisdiction may as well be settled now.

The Executive order setting up the board specifically provides the board can hear appeals from code board hearings.

Upton Sinclair Sued By Colored Preacher

Los Angeles, Dec. 7 (AP).—Upton Sinclair and the Nation, a magazine, were sued today for $1,010,000 damages by the Rev. W. A. Johnson, colored pastor of the Trinity Missionary Baptist Church.

The pastor alleged the defeated Democratic candidate for Governor of California libeled him in an article which said, "On the Sunday before election day every Negro preacher in Los Angeles received $50 to preach a sermon against me."

EVELYN LAYE.

EVELYN VENABLE.

Hollywood, Dec. 7 (AP).—Treading almost almost on each other's heels, two film couples eloped to Yuma, Ariz., today and returned tonight.

Evelyn Laye, 32, became Mrs. Frank Lawton.

Their marriages did not surprise Hollywood, but the fact that they picked the same day and almost the same hour to fly to Arizona surprised everyone. Each arrived in Yuma, by airplane, shortly after noon.

Miss Venable and Hal Mohr opened the door of Judge E. A. Freeman's suite just in time to hear Miss Laye and Lawton say "I do."

Accompanying the latter couple were Gloria Swanson and Herbert Marshall.

Both Miss Laye, a favorite of American musical comedy audiences, and Lawton were born in England. The actor, who gave his age as 30, came to Hollywood two years ago.

Miss Venable is a native of Cincinnati. Although she received a scholarship to Vassar, she attended only one year, and returned to the University of Cincinnati. Two years later she went on tour in "Cyrano de Bergerac," playing the flower girl. As leading woman in "Hamlet," she attracted the attention of movie scouts in Los Angeles.

seven men and five women back to the jury room. They returned a few minutes later with the verdict.

Frank J. McDonnell, United States district attorney, said in a statement the verdict was "absolutely justified."

"The verdict of the jury, the personnel of which is a representative cross-section of the people * * * clearly demonstrates," he said, "that the sentiment of the people of the middle district of Pennsylvania is in full accord with the desire of the President of the United States to maintain the standard of a living wage as an important factor in overcoming the depression and restoring prosperity."

Harold B. Beitler, chief of Perkins' counsel, declined comment, as did Perkins. Before the trial there had been talk of an appeal in event of conviction, but Beitler, former president of the Pennsylvania Bar Association, said any statement as to plans of the defense will be deferred until after Monday.

Roosevelt's Aid May Be Sought In Census Row

800 Jobs on Farm Tally in Indiana Sought by Congressmen.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

White House intervention probably will be necessary to settle a lively scrap over some 800 or 900 choice farm census jobs in Indiana.

The Hoosier Congressional delegation, jittery over a designing eye cast on the patronage plums by Gov. Paul V. McNutt, former American Legion national commander and reputed Democratic Presidential aspirant, yesterday held a series of conferences to retain say-so over the "gravy."

Senator Frederick Van Nuys declined to discuss the strategy decided on by those who banded together to head off McNutt, but reports persisted that he had been chosen to lay the issue before President Roosevelt.

Among others voicing chagrin was Representative Arthur H. Greenwood, House Democratic whip and candidate for the leadership.

"It's Congressional patronage and always has been," Greenwood complained. "Members of Congress should have the right to claim these jobs. This is purely a Federal census. I don't know what the motive is behind it all."

Greenwood said he recommended 100 applicants to Secretary Roper after sifting the appeals of a flood of jobless. He said the Secretary assured him he would be given consideration, but none of the appointments in his State had been made.

Other members of the Indiana delegation charged McNutt sought the patronage to perfect a machine to assure success of his prospective Senatorial candidacy in 1936.

The jobs involved range from enumerators to supervisors and carry salaries of from $5 a day to $1,000 for the three months required for the task.

William L. Austin, census director, intimated he was awaiting word from higher up before handing out the Indiana jobs, though he has finished the personnel assignment in several other States. He said the check is due to begin January 2 and he hoped to perfect an Indiana organization on time.

Tonight—Santa Claus leaves for his toy factory at the North Pole

So much work remains for this genial old gentleman to do before he pays his planned visits to all good little girls' and boys' homes on Christmas eve—he must return to his North Pole factory—see that the hundreds of toys are being finished in proper fashion—and pack his huge sack with the gifts you want him to bring. And Slivers, the clown, is going with him to keep Santa's household in a happy frame of mind during the last busy days before Christmas. But both of them will be here all day today to see any little folk who haven't already visited them.

Army's Planes To Take Part In Miami Races

Langley Field to Send 90 to All-American Air Meet in January.

A total of 131 Army Air Corps planes, 90 drawn from the Second Bombardment Wing at Langley Field, Va., will converge on Miami, January 10-12 for the All-American Air Races, it was stated at the War Department yesterday.

Officials pointed out the large aerial armada had not been assembled "expressly for the purpose of staging these demonstrations." It was explained the winter field maneuvers of the Langley Field Bombardment Wing previously had been scheduled for the Florida area, and that there was little added expense in taking the planes to Miami for public inspections and demonstrations.

In addition to the Langley Field fliers, an observation squadron from Mitchel Field, New York, will be undergoing aerial gunnery practice at Chapman Field near Miami and will be available for military demonstrations at the races.

Pursuit planes from Selfridge Field, Mich; attack planes from Fort Crockett, Tex., and a special three-man pursuit team from Maxwell Field, Ala., also will be present at the South's big aerial show. The military pilots will not compete with the commercial fliers in the speed events, confining their flying to separate demonstrations.

The field exercises of the Second Bombardment Wing from Langley Field will cover a period of three weeks. An aerial force of 56 pursuit, 30 bombardment and 4 transport airplanes will leave Langley Field January 7, and will establish operating bases at different airports throughout the Southeastern section of the United States.

Pay Restoration Sought as Rider To Offices Bill

The Congressional move to restore full Government pay as of January 1, instead of July 1, as proposed by President Roosevelt, probably will take a course similar to that followed last year when the compromise 5-and-10 plan was adopted over the President's veto, it was learned yesterday.

House parliamentarians said a special rule doubtless will be sought so that a legislative rider may be attached to the independent offices appropriations bill, which will be ready for submission when Congress convenes January 3.

A rider of this nature can not be tacked onto an appropriations bill without a special rule, it was explained, because it would constitute new legislation and could be stricken from the bill on a point of order as was the $1.20 tax rider on last year's District bill.

With a special rule, however, a Governmental expert on appropriations bills said, "You could attach the Ten Commandments."

Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, yesterday revealed that he is gathering data to be used in support of his fight for elimination of the last 5 per cent pay cut on January 1.

His figures will show the increasing cost of living, he said, and the consequent necessity of making the pay restoration effective the first of the year.

While no member of the House has yet volunteered to lead the pay fight from that side, Representative William P. Connery, jr., and John W. McCormack (Democrats), of Massachusetts, are expected to be in the forefront as they were last year.

Connery Demands Repeal of Rider

Mrs. O'Day Noncommittal on Move to Save Jobs.

Representative William P. Connery, jr. (Democrat), of Massachusetts, yesterday added his "yes" to the congressional demand for repeal of the McKellar "patronage rider" which has endangered the jobs of 900 Treasury employes.

Connery was chairman of the House Labor Committee last year and a stanch fighter for Government employes as well as World War veterans, many of whom are the payless alcohol tax unit investigators.

A noncommittal letter was received by The Post from Mrs. Caroline O'Day (Democrat), of New York, whom Mrs. Roosevelt supported actively in the recent election. She wrote:

"It is impossible for me to answer a straight 'yes' or 'no' to your letter in reference to the McKellar rider emergency appropriation.

"On the face of it, it does not seem a fair thing at all, but I feel there must be some reason for passing it other than 'a purely political one,' and I want to find out what that other reason, if any, was before committing myself to a definite opinion."

Virginia Avenue Work Awarded at $116,176

Contract for the widening, improving and repaving of Virginia avenue northwest from Constitution avenue to Twenty-sixth street was awarded yesterday by the District Commissioners to Corson & Gruman, of Washington, for $116,176.

Improvement of the street is in line with plans to develop traffic outlets from the Government building center to the west. The bid approved by the Commissioners was the lowest. Funds for the work are to come from PWA.

Chicago Officer Indicted.

Chicago, Dec. 7 (AP). — John J. Hardy, 49-year-old Chicago police lieutenant, was indicted by a Federal grand jury today on charges of evading tax payments on an income of more than $51,000 for the year 1928. The tax due was nearly $30,000.

Fast Ruling Asked On Rail Pensions

A quick final decision on the constitutionality of the railway pension act was sought yesterday from the Supreme Court by the Department of Justice, the Associated Press reported.

There were indications it would be forthcoming.

James C. Biggs, solicitor general, asked the high court to pass on a decision by the District of Columbia Supreme Court, holding the act unconstitutional, without waiting for a ruling by the District of Columbia Court of Appeals.

It was generally expected the Supreme Court would take the case because of its importance.

Mortar Board Will Install New Chapter

University of Maryland Alumnae and Students to Be Members.

Elaborate ceremonies today will mark the installation of a new chapter of Mortar Board, national senior women's honor society, at the University of Maryland. Five undergraduates and 30 graduate-members of the university's senior women's honor society—will form a new chapter. Miss Adele Stamp, dean of women at the university, and Miss Frances Maisch, her assistant, will be initiated as honorary members.

Miss Margaret Charters, of Washington, a national officer of Mortar Board, will conduct the installation services to be held at 4 p. m. A banquet will follow at 6:30 p. m. A tea will be given tomorrow afternoon in honor of Miss Charters.

The undergraduates to be initiated are Miss Helen Wollman, of Baltimore, president; Miss Kathleen Hannigan, of College Park, vice president; Miss Evelyn Brumbaugh, 3001 Sixteenth street northwest, secretary and treasurer; Miss Mary Stallings, Dupont Circle Apartments, and Miss Felice Jacobs, Pikesville, Md.

Those who have been invited to attend are Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, Senator Millard E. Tydings, Senator-elect Herbert O'Conor, Representative William P. Cole, and members of the board of regents of the university.

Washington women who have been invited include Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the Mint; Dr. Kathryn McHale, director of the American Association of University Women; Miss Gladys Jones, headquarters secretary of the National Association of Deans of Women; Miss Mary Louise Brown, dean of women at American University, and many other women outstanding in educational circles and public life.

Mortar Board, composed of about 50 chapters throughout the country, selected the University of Maryland society from a group of three taken under consideration last year.

Regulations of the national sorority will require the group to select new members from those who have averaged a "B" in all classes at the close of their junior year, and who fulfill the qualifications as campus leaders. The present women's senior honor society was organized at the university in 1925.

Business Leaders Selected to Help Map 'Super-Plan'

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—The first step to carry into effect the recovery program of the Congress of American industry was taken tonight with appointment by the National Association of Manufacturers of a committee of nine to work with a similar committee of the United States Chamber of Commerce in devising a "superprogram" for prosperity.

Siam Delegation In London to Woo King Prajadhipok

London, Dec. 7 (AP).—A Siamese official delegation came to London today to try to get Siam's King Prajadhipok to withdraw his threat to abdicate.

Headed by the speaker of the people's assembly, the delegation hoped to settle the controversy over his majesty's royal prerogatives and persuade Prajadhipok to keep his ancient throne.

Siam's dapper little minister to London, H. E. Phya Suphan Sombati, took the three members of the delegation—Chao Phya Sri Dharmadhibes, speaker of the people's assembly; Luang Dhamrong Navavasti, secretary general of the state council, and Nai Direk Jayanam, secretary to the minister of foreign affairs—immediately in hand to prevent their making any statement before their meeting with the King.

A half dozen other Siamese, scurrying around the platform rounding up taxicabs, met all questions as to the delegation's purposes with silence.

It was not expected the delegation would see the King before Sunday.

March 1 to See Hospital Begun At Glenn Dale

Sanatorium, Which Will Cost $1,500,000 to Be Ready in 18 Months.

Building of the District Adult Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Glenn Dale, Md., will be begun by March 1, Lieut. Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, predicted yesterday. Construction of the hospital will be completed within the 18 months specified in the contract sent District officials by Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes.

Authority of Secretary Ickes over the hospital derives from the fact that the $1,500,000 its construction will cost is to come from PWA funds. Seventy per cent of this sum is to be repaid by the District with interest.

"Desire of the PWA to speed up the construction of the hospital is due to a wish to stimulate employment as quickly as possble," Col. Sultan said. "Under ordinary procedure it probably would take about six months to get all plans drawn and working drawings made and approved and another year and a half to actually build the sanatorium.

"Crowding the whole thing into a year and a half will certainly rush things, but it can be done. It may increase the cost a little and require the services of a larger number of workmen while the construction is under way. But the time limit seems fairly reasonable."

Signature of the District Commissioners will be attached to the contract as soon as its provisions have been studied, Col. Sultan said. The contract then will be sent back to Mr. Ickes for his signature and thereafter the loan will be made available.

Lamson Is Ordered Again to Face Trial

Expectations of Freedom Are Shattered.

San Jose, Calif., Dec. 7 (AP).—Defense expectations that David A. Lamson would walk out of court today free of wife murder charges were shattered when Superior Judge R. R. Syer ordered a retrial and refused bail to the former Stanford University press executive.

Saved from the gallows by a recent State supreme court decision reversing his original conviction, Lamson sat disconsolately in his jail cell tonight. Seemingly he was more pessimistic than when he was held guilty more than a year ago of beating to death his wife, Allene, in their Stanford campus cottage.

Lamson's counsel had counted heavily on the supreme court decision as possible legal bar to retrial. The high court held the circumstantial evidence insufficient to warrant conviction.

Mother, 2 Sons Held in Slaying

Woman Killed Brother for Insurance, Is Charge.

Georgetown, Del., Dec. 7 (AP).—A mother and two of her sons were arrested today in the slaying of her brother, Robert R. Hitchens, 55-year-old mechanic who was beaten and shot to death seven years ago.

Mrs. Mary Carey, Howard Carey, 27, and James Carey, 23, are charged with first degree murder. A third son, Lawrence Carey, 21, is being held as a material witness.

Attorney General P. Warren Green says he got from Lawrence and James statements describing the slaying as well as the events which preceded it. The motive, Green said, was the collection of insurance on the man's life. Mrs. Carey received $1,000, half the the amount of the policy. She and another sister were his nearest kin.

Steel Buying by Autos Found at Higher Rate

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—Steel buying by the automotive industry, says the weekly review of American metal market, is "at a distinctly higher rate than a week ago, but is still far from heavy."

The review says the outstanding feature of the steel situation is the "rising demand of the last few weeks, now continuing, against the usual seasonal trend downward."

13 Dry States To Get Special U. S. Protection

Treasury Flatly Rejects Proposals for Cut in Liquor Taxes.

(Associated Press.)

Special plans for blocking the liquor flow into the country's 13 dry States were disclosed by the Treasury last night together with a flat rejection of proposals for lower liquor taxes.

The spokesman was Arthur J. Mellott, deputy commissioner of internal revenue in charge of the Treasury's alcohol tax unit. He substituted for Secretary Morgenthau in giving a one-year-of-repeal radio talk after the Treasury chief had canceled plans for such an address.

Mellott put the first year's liquor revenue at nearly $400,000,000, about equally divided between distilled spirits and beer. He said this income is increasing.

Smuggling Cut.

Estimating that smuggling had been reduced to 5 per cent of the pre-repeal figure of 20,000,000 gallons annually, he labeled as "grossly exaggerated" estimates that fully 50 per cent of the present liquor supply is illegal.

"The dry States, of which there are now 13, need special attention," Mellott said. "The twenty-first amendment, by which the eighteenth amendment was repealed, specifically provides a measure of Federal protection for the dry States.

"Subsequently, new Federal legislation was enacted to prohibit importation of liquors into dry States in violation of the laws of the States. Unfortunately funds have not been provided to make this law fully effective. It is hoped that they will be provided by the next Congress.

"Doing Its Best."

"But meanwhile the Treasury is doing its best. It imposes on any manufacturer or distributor of liquor within a dry State a tax of $1,000. This is prohibitive in its intent. At the next session of Congress the Treasury expects to ask specific authority to enforce the twenty-first amendment's provisions with regard to transportation of liquor into dry States."

As to proposals to reduce the present liquor tax of $2 a gallon, or 50 cents a quart, Mellott said:

"Some people think the Federal liquor tax ought to be reduced. Their argument is that this will stop bootlegging. My feeling is that we have made big inroads on bootlegging with the present tax rates and that eventually we shall come close to stopping it entirely.

"Revenues are rising, the quality of liquor is improving and prices are going down."

Curb on Profits Urged by Logan

Regulations of profits and restoration of the antitrust laws were recommended yesterday by Senator Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, the Associated Press reported.

"We must for a time cease thinking about making money and think more about making a living," he said.

"Until we make it so that men shall not take from the people more than they are entitled to, we are not going to recover. It is absolutely necessary to restrain the rich and powerful from taking more than they are entitled to from those who can't protect themselves."

Logan said he would join Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, and others in urging repeal of that part of the recovery act suspending the antitrust laws.

Logan also said the country could stand some inflation, but it would have to be "on a sound basis."

Houston Named FHA Official for Virginia

Appointment of Harry H. Houston, of Richmond, as associate director for Virginia, was announced yesterday by the Federal Housing Administration.

Indians Denied Bid for Millions

Kaws $97,000,000 Claim for Ceded Land Ruled On by Court Here.

The Court of Claims yesterday ruled out the demand of the Kaw Indians for $97,000,000 which the petitioners asked on the grounds that the tribe had not been compensated adequately for the cession of millions of acres in the West, according to the Associated Press.

There are now about 500 members of the tribe, its best-known member being Charles Curtis, the former Vice President. The tribe, originated in the Wabash and Ohio River valleys, later shifted to Kansas and ultimately to Oklahoma.

In their petition, the Indians asserted that treaties leading to their removal had provided "shockingly inadequate" compensation, that other lands had been ceded without recompense and finally that they had a right to part of the wealth obtained by the Osage Tribe from the discovery of oil.

The court dismissed all claims except the one for $101,000 arising out of the disposal by the Government of 36 sections of school land. It found, however, that the tribe owed the Government $460,000 and hence was not entitled to a judgment.

A Credit To Their Country.

Smarting under the disrepute which "chiselers" have imposed upon the real veterans of the World War, the Maryland Chapter of the Rainbow Division Veterans has taken a positive stand against the major objectives of the so-called veterans' lobby.

In a resolution sharply critical of the alliance between groups of former soldiers and politicians, these former members of the Rainbow Division pledge themselves to "defend and help those newspapers" which are exposing and attacking rackets of this sort.

"The sooner veterans stand upon their own feet and fight their battles, instead of appealing to politicians for their help and promises," the resolution says, "the sooner the veterans will be classed as a body of men that is a credit to their country."

The Rainbow veterans voted to leave the question of paying the bonus entirely to the discretion of the President. They denounced the act under which benefits are paid to veterans who suffered no injury as a result of their war service. Because of the stigma attached to this "dole," they point out, some genuine veterans have refused to accept it. "If this act should continue," the resolution declares, "it would justly cause the people of this country to rebel against all veterans and consequently the deserving service-disability cases will pay the price."

This courageous stand is all the more notable because it is taken by the first Maryland unit of the A. E. F. to reach France, to enter the trenches and to suffer casualties. Of its 186 officers and men 6 were killed and 154 wounded, yet only 16 of the latter are on Government compensation. One can easily appreciate the disgust with which such real soldiers view a clamor for doles and special privileges by men who never saw the battlefield.

There are indications that this outburst of indignation is supported by the views of a large body of patriotic former soldiers. It is inspiring that they should rebel at the attempts of the noisy elements—whether a minority or a majority—to speak for the veterans of America on these vital issues.

Science No Solution.

One result of the depression which has been too little noticed is our diminishing faith in science. There was a time in the heyday of prosperity when science was regarded as the source from which solution of all the world's ills would be forthcoming. But events of the last four years have replaced that confidence with profound skepticism.

In the first of a series of local lectures on the influence of science upon current thought, President Angell, of Yale University, admits that science has little to offer toward solution of the baffling problems confronting the world. "Prejudice, custom, emotion and instincts of immediate self-interest," he said, "still largely control human conduct, both in its public and private aspects. . . . Science is indeed the method of knowledge, but it is far from being a controlling principle in life. . . . It is unlikely that the effects of emotion and instinct ever can be eliminated so that there can be an entirely rational world."

Dr. Angell seems to say, in effect, that science has not touched the inner nature of man, and that after all the fundamental problems of life are deep-seated in human nature. His view will be regarded as sharply pessimistic, yet it is based on realities that seem to be indisputable. If one is looking for optimism, it will be found chiefly in the fact that some of our thinkers are reverting to these fundamentals, from which all human problems spring.

Reporters And A Free Press.

Journalism's record in the United States is on the whole remarkably clean. The Peter Zenders have far outnumbered the Jake Lingles. Thus, when it is reported that certain correspondents made use of the cables for "arranged" stories favoring the American dye industry, and that the "news" they sent more clearly merited the appellation of propaganda, the revelation merits attention the more because exceptional.

Not long ago the counsel for the American Newspaper Publishers Association went on record to the effect that the New-Deal habit of hiring press agents for every governmental activity is antagonistic to a free press. At that time we pointed out that a free press had little cause for worry here; that in fact this system encouraged the better reporters to go behind the "handout" in search of the actual happenings. Somewhat similar remarks might be made of the revelations brought out by the Nye committee.

The mere fact that at least one Paris correspondent proved susceptible to "cultivation" by no means indicates that such cases are common. But to have the reminder that some newspapermen have succumbed to venality is salutary. The profession of journalism is rightfully proud of its integrity. The knowledge that its ideals are sometimes dishonored will only spur those who hold their profession in proper regard to further effort to keep the press of America really free.

Another Danger Signal.

The charges that Hungary seeks to overthrow the post-war treaty settlements by force, made yesterday at Geneva by the foreign ministers of Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia, are serious indictments. But their effect is very largely dissipated by the high-handed actions against Hungary which Yugoslavia is taking without giving the League of Nations opportunity to weigh her accusations.

After all, what the members of the Little Entente assert about Hungarian complicity in the assassination of King Alexander is only evidence for the prosecution. It may be true, or it may not. None can say with assurance until opportunity to weigh the specific charges impartially has been given. The aggressive action which the Belgrade government has launched against Hungary, on the other hand, is subject to no such discount. Here the responsibility is clear and unequivocal, resting directly on Yugoslavia. The council of the League will be well-advised if it makes complete cessation of this aggressive policy a condition precedent to judicial examination of the charges pending against Hungary.

Invasion of Hungarian soil by Serbian armed bands is an offense against international peace which can be overlooked as an unauthorized act, if adequate apologies are made. But the brutal deportations of thousands of Hungarian residents is a high-handed official policy against which Hungary will be amply justified in entering serious protest. The policy is the more offensive because the territories from which helpless civilians are being ousted are largely Magyar in population, and were incorporated in Yugoslavia by the peace treaties primarily for strategic reasons.

In the light of these Yugoslav actions the charges against Hungary brought by the Little Entente fall rather flat. It is unquestionable that Hungary demands treaty revision, but there is no warrant for supposing that she plans hostilities to achieve that end. As against the Magyar campaign for "liberation" must now be placed the indications that Yugoslavia at least is willing to consider forcible suppression of that movement. Such indications can only add strength to the contention of Hungary that she has been left defenseless and helpless by the peace treaties, and must arm illegally if she is to be able to protect her elemental rights as a sovereign state.

It is not a happy picture, this presented by the current Balkan crisis. Nor is the crisis one that can be eliminated by amelioration of its superficial aspects. The fundamental problem is whether or not punitive peace treaties, permanently relegating certain nations to inferiority, can be expected to endure. Soon or late, before or after a more serious crash than has yet come, that problem must be squarely faced at Geneva.

A Change Of Heart.

The recovery platform of the National Association of Manufacturers embraces a program of social security going far beyond any proposals that this conservative group of industrialists would formerly have consented to approve. They are not prepared as yet to urge the immediate adoption of Nation-wide unemployment insurance, but opposition to the system in principle has vanished and in its place have come constructive suggestions which the Administration will doubtless study closely.

Possibly the example recently set by the automobile manufacturers in unqualifiedly indorsing the theory of compulsory unemployment insurance was instrumental in overcoming objections. If so, the success of their missionary efforts does not detract from the credit due those who have been persuaded that the old attitude of unyielding hostility to State intervention in this field is no longer tenable.

The N. A. M. shows a keen appreciation of the difficulties of the problems that will arise in administering systems of unemployment insurance. In fact, at first glance, it almost seems as if the association were arguing against instead of for the development. Examination indicates, however, that the critical comment is based upon a careful and judicious appraisal, testifying to the seriousness and good faith of the pronouncement.

It would have been easy for this industrial congress to have dismissed the subject of relief with a few vague and general references to social security measures that would have sounded well but meant little. The manufacturers have preferred to indicate the lines along which they think a practicable system or systems of unemployment insurance can be developed, and have asked that further study be given to the subject with a view to the eventual adoption of "a comprehensive program which will meet American needs."

Stokowski Resigns.

Orchestras are news. Thanks especially to the radio, that conducted by Leopold Stokowski is generally exciting news. Mr. Stokowski, who came to Philadelphia in 1912, after a brief introduction to America in Cincinnati, has resigned his leadership. And therein is an excellent example of what may happen to art when politics is allowed to rule.

An orchestra, it has been proved time and again, is only as good as its conductor. He is the genius whose ability is represented in the mass by the individuals whose eyes are upon his baton. His is the spirit, his the fire; to him the praise, to him the blame. "Hundreds of times," the fiery leader said in his letter of resignation, "the players in the orchestra, the public, the radio audiences, and I have responded together to inspired music." But bitter politics within the Philadelphia Orchestra has sundered that coordinated response, and Mr. Stokowski steps out.

The merits of the controversy between the conductor and the board of directors are not sufficiently clear to warrant critical comment. Last month Mr. Judson, the manager, resigned, and no new manager has been chosen. Mr. Stokowski, looking ahead to the next season, which could only be built upon a foundation of hard, exacting work throughout this winter, claims to have foreseen disaster. It appears that he and the board could not get along well together. There were, he says, "deep lying differences of opinion," which he would "forget and pass over in silence." "I wish to remember only the beauty and inspiration of the music we have made."

With that the public will be in accord. For to the present generation the Philadelphia Orchestra without Stokowski is unthinkable. He made it world famous, and if, as is likely, there are two sides to the dispute, the sympathy of all who have heard his music, from concert platform or through the loudspeaker, will be with the retiring leader. He, as a lover of all things new, by his presence there gave the lie to the libel that Philadelphia is a drear town, living in the past.

Excessive Paternalism.

The dictatorial attitude of the PWA in dealing with the District of Columbia appears to be an established policy. When that organization first decided to make available $1,500,000 for a tuberculosis hospital to serve Washington, Secretary Ickes insisted on choosing the site. It was obvious that he did not want the hospital located at Glenn Dale, where the District already owns an appropriate site adjacent to the Children's Tuberculosis Sanitarium. A committee of experts appointed by the President terminated the resulting squabble in favor of the Glenn Dale location, but Mr. Ickes does not appear to be satisfied yet.

Under the contract through which the PWA proposes to advance funds for this improvement, the Commissioners are required to erect the hospital "on a site satisfactory to the Administrator." It is almost inconceivable that the PWA will again attempt to prevent location of the hospital at Glenn Dale. But this provision clearly indicates that the PWA has not dropped its paternalistic attitude toward local public works.

If the policy applied to the District should be generally adopted, local governments could not take advantage of PWA funds without virtually surrendering control over the work they wish to undertake. In this case Secretary Ickes has even assumed the responsibility of determining whether the water supply will be adequate and of good quality. In fact, bureaucracy has here been carried to extremes that would arouse bitter resentment in any community accustomed to handling its own affairs.

Precautions against the waste of public works funds on worthless projects is an essential part of the PWA's function. But there is no reason why it should use this authority to encroach upon the obvious prerogatives of home rule. If the contract which is being foisted upon the District should become a precedent, apprehension over the proposals to place further vast sums in the hands of the PWA would not be confined to financial and budgetary considerations. The very fundamentals of local self-government are threatened by the centralization policy which this arrangement attests.

It isn't exactly fair to charge poor government to the voter. All too often he is faced with the choice of voting for Tweedledum or Tweedledee.

The National Association of Broadcasters wants an official ruling as to whether or not "damn" is profanity. It probably isn't, but it sounds like hell.

Why Prolong The Inquiry?

More money is wanted by the Senate Munitions Committee. Without an additional appropriation, its employes will be added to the ranks of the unemployed, and the revelations which, it is said, will shock the world will not be made in the committee room.

It is just possible that the committee exaggerates the importance of the revelations. The world is not easily shocked, and even given as sworn testimony before an august committee of the United States Senate, the disclosures are likely to prove a twice-told tale.

It is difficult to keep up interest in evils that are admitted. Most persons, we think, would be satisfied to have the investigation closed. Without further testimony, there is enough material on hand to produce a strong report.

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Differences.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When the Russian Czar Alexander II, liberator of the serfs, was assassinated by revolutionaries, the tyrannous Czarist Government executed four men for implication in the plot. When Communist Kiroff is assassinated by alleged counter-revolutionaries, the liberal Soviet Government executes 266 men, [illegible]en and children. "The quality [illegible]cy is not strained."

"Culture Always."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been reading with keen interest the letters and editorials pertaining to the recent foot ball "scrimmage" and viewed the photograph of the huge floral tribute sent to Mr. Kramer by his sympathetic friends. Therefore, I am prompted to send my note of sympathetic encouragement to the courageous coach, Hap Hardell. When a subordinate of this redtape District school system has the courage to ask out "right in meetin'" if they want to hear the "truth" he is the man to whom the bouquets should have been sent.

Hardell has done enough to awaken the apathetic patrons from their lethargy, unless they desire to continue having their children suffer the fate of Carliner.

The youngsters apologized for their mistake. When will the superiors do as much?

Culture always! But not void of spirit and truth.

More power to the kids and to the coach. L. P. T.

"The Town Hall Episode."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am congratulating you on the editorial, "The Town Hall Episode," in The Post of December 6. It is straightforward, timely, and in excellent spirit.

President Glenn Frank is a clear thinker, expresses himself well, and offers constructive leadership in a time of much muddled thinking and futile planning. Reactionaries and their tactics will deservedly suffer in this skirmish.

The condition of this country and of the world, together with impending changes in government and industry, call for vigorous discussion of public policies and methods of a platform where great freedom of thought and expression are favored. The old saying, "Truth is mighty and must prevail," should still command our confidence.

I am sorry that the trustees of the church to which I belong did not at once tender to the Town Hall the use of our splendid, large downtown auditorium. Ever since colonial days churches of our order have, as occasion required, opened their houses of worship that ministers and other patriotic speakers might enlighten and inspire the people to higher social and humanitarian endeavor.

I trust that the Town Hall idea may rapidly spread, so that from one to several such centers may soon be opened in all our cities. Our sacred places and ideas should be greatly improved by a thorough airing. LUTHER K. LONG.
Washington, Dec. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I can not find adjectives strong enough to approve your editorial, "The Town Hall Episode," in The Post of December 6. It goes to the root of the causes of the economic debacle throughout the world because this country no longer has a free press or even free speech.

The same interests which dominate the press of the country also dominate the universities, colleges and churches, teaching a false doctrine of the thing called money or the medium of exchange for service, food, clothing and shelter. The result is that so-called intellectuals with high-sounding titles, as well as the man in the street, know nothing whatever about the fundamentals of economics or money, freely admit it and go their way in blissful ignorance of the cause of the depression.

I am glad to see that The Post is not controlled by these Tory interests and prints the views of others, whether or not they agree with them.

That Washington needs a Town Hall like, for instance, Albert Hall or Hyde Park in London, where one can air his views on any subject—political or social—without hindrance, is freely admitted. But that the auditorium of the United States Chamber of Commerce was selected as an open forum is beyond the imagination of any one. Free speech or a free press is not wanted by the leaders of that organization.

WILLIAM J. DWYER.
Washington, Dec. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It would be interesting to know who on your editorial staff writes such editorials as "The Town Hall Episode" in your issue of December 6, 1934. In the past I have always stood up for The Washington Post but, either at the time that it changed ownership, or, since that time, something happened and I can no longer do so.

Your editorial page has consistently taken the stand of the ignoramus in your attitude toward the inroads that have been and are now being made by "wavers of the red flag." By using the term "ignoramus," I am giving you the benefit of the doubt, otherwise there could be only one other conclusion possible: that you are in sympathy with what is now swiftly taking place in this country.

This is the third specific instance wherein your editorial page has either made light of or condemned, as you have in the Town Hall Episode, red-blooded Americans for their stand on this question.

I do not know the reason for the prevention of further meetings in the Chamber of Commerce Building but, if the reason is the one given in your editorial, then I am thankful that some red blood still runs. The Washington Post needs a strong transfusion. The thing to be regretted in this incident, provided the reason is as you have intimated and so strongly condemned, is that the United States Chamber of Commerce did not show the full strength of its red blood by stating its real reasons.

I am beginning to wonder what The Washington Post really stands for. One time I thought that I knew.

I would like to conduct a section in your paper in order that your paper as well as the public might be kept informed as to what is really taking place.

Even 'Mid Politics!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I join the poetess Myrtle Rejane Patterson in expressing my appreciation to The Post for giving space to poets? I am glad that a paper issued in so political an atmosphere is thus responsive to the call of beauty.

"Just A Temblor."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Former Californian's" letter regarding the use, in California, of the word temblor for a very slight earth movement is interesting to me, the writer of the letter criticising the use of temblor for earthquake.

I still see no reason for borrowing a Spanish word when we have an English word that adequately expresses our meaning.

Former Californian suggests that we say "just a temblor," as one would say "only a shower." Would that be more expressive than "just a quiver," which means a slight trembling motion and which is at least English?

In some cases we have no alternative but must use a foreign word, having no equivalent in English—detour, for instance. If there is an English word that expresses the meaning of detour I do not know what that word is. But I can not see why temblor should be used in place of earthquake, big or little.

It is interesting, however, to learn that such is the custom in California. Perhaps Californians, like Virginians, have a language of their own. (Now for some Virginian to take a crack at me!) C. B.

As Others See It

Dangerous Majorities.

A difference of three million in the voting strength of the two parties is not an indication of the passing out of one or the overwhelming supremacy of the other in a country of 40 million voters. Such a lead can be shifted with the next shifting of the political wind, but when three million votes give the winning party two-thirds majorities in both houses, the congressional result is specifically different. The composition of Congress would indicate that the party of opposition had disappeared. That indication can not be found in the election returns.

The Democrats now realize that their majorities in the House and Senate are not unmixed party blessings. Although they have not won an overwhelming popular approval, they have an overwhelming congressional vote. Senator George Norris, of Nebraska, says that if the party uses its great power recklessly it may destroy itself. He says the Democratic majorities in Congress may prove injurious, adding that the country is drifting toward elimination of party lines. Such a conclusion might be drawn from the appearance of Congress, but it is not from the election figures.

The Republican Party, opposed by the greatest political fund of public money in the history of the country, proved very much alive in the election, however moribund it may seem on Capitol Hill, and therein lies the cause of the Democratic apprehension that the party in Congress may do itself injuries which will be its undoing two years from now. The party will do itself injury as it does the country injury, and that inevitably may be a sobering influence when the new Congress meets.

Coronation Of The Duke.

Post Office, Saturday.

WHEN, last week, the Duke of Kent was married for the second time——.

But perhaps that is not a felicitous way to put it. We'll start again:

At the second marriage-ceremony of the Duke of Kent and Princess Marina, the Prince of Wales played a very different role from that which he performed during the Westminster wedding. At the Church of England service in the Abbey, he was the best man—and a personage. At the Orthodox service in Buckingham Palace Chapel, he—the heir to the Crown of England—was a mere spectator at the coronation of his younger brother.

Two thousand persons saw the first wedding; over the radio many more thousands heard it. For the second, the audience was limited to less than eighty; the longest news-dispatches were vocal by no more than a couple of brief paragraphs. Moreover, although there are some millions of Orthodox in this country (they have half-a-dozen churches in Washington) their ancient ceremony is unfamiliar to most Americans.

However, tomorrow the first fast mail-boats to leave England since the wedding will arrive at New York, bringing letters from some of that chosen eighty—and meanwhile (and just to beat those letters) here, anyhow, is what happened.

At the door to the palace chapel the duke and princess were met by the Metropolitan Germanos, Archbishop of the (Greek) Orthodox diocese of Britain: gray-haired, gray-bearded, having the features of a scholar, a pulpit orator's voice. Thrice he blessed the royal couple. He lit and handed each a taper. While a litany was recited, he took two rings and made "the sign of the Cross, with the ring of the bride, over the bridegroom—and, with the ring of the bridegroom, over the bride." He placed the rings on their fingers, whereafter they exchanged the rings.

It was the betrothal service, preliminary to the marriage service.

Then the Metropolitan led the duke and the princess into the chapel, where, before the chancel, an altar—really a lectern—stood covered with white roses, bearing a crucifix, the Gospels and two crowns. Fresh from its loom, a rose-tinted rug was spread for the bride to stand upon.

"Thou hast not promised thyself to any other?".

"I have not, reverend father."

Both the man and the woman were questioned—both replied.

The Metropolitan prayed:

"O God, . . . bless this marriage and vouchsafe unto these, Thy servants George and Marina, a peaceful life, length of days . . . mutual love in the bond of peace . . . a crown of glory which fadeth not away . . ."

And so to the coronation:

Those crowns were woven of Greek olive leaves which entwined ikons. The Metropolitan raised one crown high and slowly lowered it until it rested on the bowed head of the duke—raised the second crown high and slowly lowered it until it rested on the bowed head of the princess:

"George, the servant of God, is crowned unto the handmaid of God, Marina! . . .

"Marina, the handmaid of God, is crowned unto the servant of God, George! . . .

"O Lord, our God, crown them with glory and honor!"

That's what will be told tomorrow when the mail from England brings letters written by some of the few guests at Buckingham Palace Chapel.

How do we know?

Because this is, in outline, the "crowning service" that—except at the marriage of widows, widowers or divorced persons—is used by the Orthodox Church for every wedding, whether the bride and bridegroom be princes or peasants.

But it is none the less a veritable coronation. The crowning of many a king has fallen short of it in ritual.

Nor does the service end with the crowning. Wearing their crowns, the duke and princess stood on while the Epistle was read (Ephesians, v, 20-23—although there is no "vow to obey" in the Orthodox ritual) and through the reading of the Gospel: St. John's account of the marriage in Cana.

In the Russian Orthodox ceremony, the bride and bridegroom drink wine from a common cup; in the Greek, they share a crust dipped in wine; in both the officiating priest "taketh them and . . . leadeth them" three times round the lectern . . .

It was a long service—after the one at the Abbey—but, in the view of all Orthodox, not until then had the Duke of Kent been really married to the Princess Marina. It was a picturesque service; but, in the view of all Orthodox, the couple had at last been "crowned in matrimony"—even if the husband should never be crowned England's King in England's Westminster.

Brooklyn Bright Boy Beats Einstein's 'IQ'

(Special Correspondence of The Post.)

New York.

NEW YORK has been amusing itself throughout the week with an informal contest to determine who is the brightest boy in the world.

Manhattan was first in the field with a 7-year-old youngster, so far known to history only as "K," with an intelligence quotient of 196, only slightly below Dr. Albert Einstein's 205, and well above Charles Darwin's 180. Brooklyn promptly countered with a boy of 7½ with a quotient of 230 which hangs up a record for the human race up to date. Queens, Staten Island and the Bronx have not yet been heard from but expectation is running high. It has not yet been announced whether the Government will draft the two children for the Brain Trust at once or wait until they get into long trousers.

"K" looked pretty good at first and had the advantage of the initial publicity. In fact, on the record, he is quite a lad. He could converse fluently at 18 months and at 20 months could recite the alphabet backward. Owing to the fact that during the depression there has been only a dull market for reciting the alphabet backward he went serenely on to greater achievements. He now discusses astronomy learnedly and his ordinary conversation is adorned with such words as "cursive" and "luminosity." A good many people, unfortunately, have a rooted prejudice against words like "cursive" and "luminosity" in a private chat, but "K" is said to lisp them unaffectedly.

Indeed, with an IQ which only one in a million achieves, "K" seemed to be the yellow-haired-boy until "X," or "Bunny" popped up the next day. It may sound wholly incredible that anybody with an intelligence quotient of 230 lives in Brooklyn, but the Child Guidance Bureau of the Board of Education and the Brooklyn Ethical Culture School solemnly say it is so. Of course, however, "Bunny" is not an old Brooklyn resident, having lived in the district only seven and a half years.

DR. EINSTEIN at present is understood to be studying at Princeton, where his intelligence may develop a little, in spite of what they say at Yale. Just now, though, "Bunny" is 25 points up on him, which well illustrates the theory of relativity in its more lucid moments. But "Bunny" has a good start, having learned to read at two years without any instruction whatever. As he only learned to walk at 14 months he became a regular bookworm while still wearing diapers.

While nothing of this sort is known in the early history of Dr. Einstein, "Bunny" nevertheless seems to possess some of the attributes of the Einstein mentality. He has invented a number alphabet, in which digits replace the letters, and he writes in it with ease. This is obviously a great convenience in school, enabling a bright pupil to pass notes which teacher can't read. But "Bunny" is above that type of frivolity, disliking an argument in any form. He has also originated a new system of musical notation which competent musicians say is "the nuts."

Every effort is being made to keep "K" and "Bunny" from learning that they are different from other children, so a public debate between them to determine the winner seems impracticable. There are also some old meanies in the scholastic world who maintain that the Leland Stanford revision of the Binet Simon tests, which was the third degree used on these lads, don't mean a thing except that some children develop faster than others and decay faster. The history of prodigies has not been reassuring, even though City Chamberlain Berle was graduated from Columbia when he was 13 years old. Perhaps even that isn't reassuring.

Anyway, all the bright boys can't be concentrated in New York. There must be some in Washington. Indeed, it is a surprise to find that there are any left in the rest of the country since the present Administration began to tag them with options. Of course, though, the Farley test differs slightly from the Binet system.

POOR old Mike Romanoff has broken into jail again. The most engaging adventurer of his generation is now cooling his heels, which lately tapped so ecstatically in the musical success, "Say When," in the Ludlow street citadel where the alimony patients go. The authorities have said "when" for Mike.

Gerguson, which sounds like a gargle, is really Mike's right name. He hails from some little dump in the Middle West with an equally euphonious name. But several years ago, returning from a knockabout trip to Europe, he managed to fool the immigration officials into thinking he was Prince Michael Romanoff, scion of the Russian royal family. He actually got into his native land on that basis and his career thereafter was a series of purple patches alternated with very real patches.

Nobody could drop rubber checks so lightly, nobody could talk so fluently and persuasively as Mike. He talked himself into and out of all sorts of scrapes, always with a royal dignity which soothed many victims into hypnotism. Finally the law caught him on the bounce, but paroled him on the promise that he would get a job.

He did. It was not hard, because everybody laughed at Mike and he never laughed at himself. He was added to the cast of "Say When" as one of the minor foolishments. There, until a couple of days ago, he dispensed an aroma, not so much of caviar as of royal grandeur.

The check charge on which Mike is in jail is the silliest thing. He is furious about it and has explained it so convincingly. It appears that some six years ago Mike thought he was going to get hold of a little money and threw a party for his friends. He ordered a couple of cases of liquor for which he dropped a check for $170. In the cold gray dawn of the morning after he realized that he would'nt get the money and the friends weren't so much either. So he dropped around on the liquor man and told him to tear up the check. Six years ago, mind you, and he hasn't heard a thing about it from that day until this.

"The meanness, the vileness of life," says Mike, "Seems to me at times almost unimaginable." Cheer up, Mike. At times it seems that way to all of us.

A VOICE from the grave, or from somewhere in that vicinity, arose this week when a group of 40 friends celebrated the eightieth birthday of the once-famous Dr. Charles Griffin Pease, founder and president of the Non-Smokers' Protective League.

Dr. Pease, old-timers will recall, was in his hey-day about 1910. He was then to tobacco what Carrie Nation was to red rum. It was the day when "Smoke in Your Eyes" was not a song, but a serious offense. Members of the Non-Smokers' Protective League stopped to reason in the street with smokers. If you walked down to the corner with a roll of tobacco, called a cigar, protruding from your mouth, you were reasonably sure to get some of the members in your hair. And how the newspapers loved it!

Dr. Pease is not merely anti-tobacco. As his name indicates, he is a vegetarian and anti-meat. He is an anti-vaccinationist. He is also anti-drug and holds that the vile concoctions people put in their mouths in the name of medicine are a horror. Small boys agree with him. How far the general public has agreed with him in his noble crusade against the noxious weed is indicated by the cigarette statistics.

The birthday dinner was strictly vegetarian—grapefruit garnished with prunes and that sort of thing. There was quite a bit of hallelujah shouting and considerable poetry of very little fire and no smoke at all. But, sad to relate, the 80 candles on the cake had to be lighted with a cigarette lighter.

U. S. Lends $23,361 In Charlottesville

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—Fifty-one Federal housing repair loans, totaling $23,361, were made by Charlottesville banks in the local better-housing campaign through November 16, according to a report received by Henry Haden, chairman of the local chamber of commerce better housing committee, from the State FHA director.

Local bankers conservatively estimate at least five straight banking loans have been made for home repairs to every one made under the terms of he Federal housing act. By this ratio local building and repair loans in October and November can be estimated at $125,000 and this would not take into account housing improvements made without bank financing.

The local better housing campaign was organized here about October 15 under the auspices of the chamber of commerce and a committee composed of Mr. Haden, as chairman; Bennett Barnes, Randolph H. Perry, Fred L. Watson and Verbon E. Kemp. The work was featured by an exposition in the city armory and a house-to-house survey.

Jobless Mass Meeting Is Held at Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—A mass meeting of unemployed of Bedford County, Pa.; Mineral County, W. Va., and Allegany County, Md., was held tonight at the City Hall here.

The meeting was sponsored by the Western Maryland Unemployed League and an invitation was extended to all jobless persons in the three counties. Milton Bertholdt, of Baltimore, was the principal speaker. Unemployed persons in Mineral County have made numerous complaints in recent weeks, charging mismanagement and discrimination shown by the welfare board at Keyser. Grievances of the Mineral County and Bedford County unemployed were aired. There has been no complaint as to administration in Allegany County.

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

A Story.

A STORY concerning the recent Moffett-Ickes tilt which the Soviets would say was inspired by the enemies of the workers and which Mr. Roosevelt would probably dub as the machination of the Tories has gained so much circulation that students of stories wonder if it isn't pretty apt. It came down from New York and at the rate it was traveling yesterday should be all over the country in a few days. It has the velocity, in fact, of a good smutty story.

BARGERON.

A funny thing about it, too, is that every one who hears it doubles up and roars and remarks: "It's just like him, isn't it?"

• • • •

Well, the story is that after the tilt Mr. Moffett hied himself to Warm Springs and poured out his opinion of Mr. Ickes and his three, four or five (it makes no difference with Mr. Ickes) low cost housing program. To make it a good story one must assume that what Mr. Moffett said of Mr. Ickes was calculated to make the latter's ears burn. At the conclusion of his heated recital Mr. Roosevelt is reported to have said:

"You are right, you are exactly right."

Subsequently down came Mr. Ickes and his opinion of Mr. Moffett and his Federal Housing agency was just about as high as was the opinion of Mr. Moffett of Mr. Ickes and his plan. When Mr. Ickes had concluded, Mr. Roosevelt is reported to have said:

"You are right, you are exactly right."

Whereupon Mr. Ickes went rejoicingly away.

• • • •

All of this time Mrs. Roosevelt, according to the story, was in the background silently knitting. After the two men left she is reported to have looked up and said:

"Franklin, don't you think what you have said to both of those men is confusing?"

Mr. Roosevelt scratched his head a minute or so and then turned to her:

"My dear, you are right, you are exactly right."

What business is anxious to know just now is which one of the three will turn out to be "right, exactly right." It is another one of those serious clashes between the leftists and rightists camps and the most serious one yet to come up. It is the difference between whether private business is to be depended upon to bring about recovery or whether the Government is to take its greatest step yet towards Socialism.

Furthermore, if Mr. Ickes wins this time the impression is that there will be no stopping of him. The most ambitious man we have had in Washington since Mr. Hoover was Secretary of Commerce, he will have overridden the strongest opposition he has yet encountered. There will be official corpses lying all over the field if he succeeds this time and there will be a clear road ahead.

Although it is not known how he stands with the young liberals of the Administration on this matter, the Cabinet, with the possible exception of Miss Perkins, is understood to be solidly against him. Mr. Morgenthau, whose job it is to get the money for Mr. Ickes' projects, is understood to believe that it is definitely time to halt the gentleman. Even Mr. Wallace is believed to be against the housing program.

• • • •

Mr. Roosevelt himself is acting very secretive about it. He says there will be nothing from him on it until January 3. But his sympathies are with Ickes, and it is believed the opposition will have to exert far more pressure than it has to keep the plan from being approved.

In the meantime, the suggestion is being advanced that it would probably be cheaper and less dangerous to buy Mr. Ickes a place in the sun outright.

Mormon Church Seeks Improved N. Y. Unit

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—Leaders of the Church of Christ of Latter-Day Saints arrived today, looking toward a more permanent organization of the church in and around New York City.

Heber J. Grant, president of the church, and J. Reuben Clark, jr., were on their way from Salt Lake City to attend two meetings Sunday. Organization of the New York district into a "Stake" will be effected at these meetings.

Fascism's Chances in America

From An Editorial in "The New Republic"

THE first thing to remember about Fascism is that it springs originally, not from resistance to change on the part of the privileged, but from an insistent demand for change on the part of the masses.

The people must have undergone a period of confusion and suffering, and they must have become convinced that neither traditional government nor the ruling economic powers can or will help them. A second term for Hoover would have been the ideal setting for American Fascism. A drift of Roosevelt to the right in response to the pressure of the economy leagues and the reactionary industrialists and bankers could produce the setting now. Cut down relief, do nothing to lighten a crushing debt burden, present the people with a spectacle of legislative confusion and incompetence, convince them that the existing executive has no sufficiently drastic plans for improvement and is under the thumb of sinister private interests, and you have the fields of popular sentiment plowed and harrowed for the Fascist seed.

The second point to remember is closely allied with the first. Since the conditions that are appropriate to Fascism are those giving rise to truly revolutionary sentiment among the masses, the successful Fascist leader is a man of the people, a declared opponent of the bankers and the ruling economic powers generally. Mussolini was originally a syndicalist labor leader; Hitler was an outcast house painter.

In the beginning, a Fascist party is not so much the opponent as the rival of the older revolutionary and labor movements such as Communism, Socialism or trade unionism. It promises the masses something that sounds vaguely similar to the goals of such movements. It weans away their less well informed and more mercurial elements. Do not forget that the Nazis call themselves National Socialists, and that during their rise toward power much emphasis was placed on the Socialist half of the agitation. For this reason alone, any one remotely connected with Wall street would be an impossible burden on a Fascist movement at the beginning. If you are looking for an American dictator look for a Huey Long, not for a stock broker.

When a Fascist movement gets a start, it differentiates itself from the proponents of true social revolution by the vagueness and conflicting tenets of its creed, and by the unscrupulousness of its appeal. Everything else is sacrificed to the effort to gain power. It satisfies the demand of the young for "action" by promising them a place in the world, arming them, giving them a ritual and a sort of perverted glory, and setting them violently upon anyone who dares to oppose the movement.

WHILE promising workers socialism and the unemployed jobs, it appeals to the distressed small business man by assuring him freedom from the competition of the large, and enlists agricultural interests by envisionnig a return to small self-sustaining farms and protection in the home market. At the same time it conciliates the big industrialists and bankers by inveighing against the dangers of Marxism. The fact that its promises are mutually inconsistent makes no difference; this is not detected by the untutored and is glossed over in the face of criticism by a general attack on reason, logic and science. The whole conglomerate mess is fused, for political purposes, by an emotional mysticism centered about the supposed mission of the race or nation, and hatred of scapegoats such as Jews or foreigners. Above everything, an exaltation of the leader, to whom unquestioning loyalty is exacted, satisfies a natural desire to dump one's perplexities on a messiah.

After such a movement begins to gain real strength, it is likely to be taken over by large capitalist interests, but hardly until then. They recognize it as a dangerous enemy, but one that can be converted into a useful ally against organized labor and true social revolution. Here enters another factor. If the big interests are not genuinely frightened by labor and by the trend toward Socialism, hey are not so likely to support a movement of this unconventional and unreliable character. Thus the strength of the labor movement itself, and the intensity of its challenge to the existing system, is a factor in the success of Fascism. To prevent Fascism, a genuine labor movement must not only be strong, but strong enough to dominate the situation. It can not with impunity seriously threaten revolution for long without achieving it.

A Fascist movement, in turn, is not likely to be successful in the end without substantial and widespread backing from moneyed interests. Without such backing, its hectic course can be reversed; it is likely to die down as quickly as it rises, since its intellectual and institutional foundations are not solid. (Nazism was actually waning before Hitler became Chancellor.) With plenty of money, however, it can pay its armed cohorts, buy its uniforms, stage its demonstrations and use all the unscrupulous technique of modern propaganda. And at the crucial moment it can seize the government with the approval of the capitalists already in power behind the scenes.

WE ARE, so far, protected against Fascism in the United States by the fact that the national administration is doing something about the depression, however ineffectively, and that large numbers of people have confidence in it. We are protected by the fact that Congress has acted and not just debated. We are protected by the fact that the larger aggregations of capital are not seriously alarmed about immediate revolution. It may also be true that such a movement would have harder sledding in this country than in Italy and Germany because of our longer tradition of democracy and the lack here of the national inferiority complex which bedeviled both of them after the war. But if actual conditions become and remain bad enough, a revolutionary crisis will eventually arise. Then the only thing that can save us is an intelligent ability to distinguish the true revolution from the false, a well informed movement of workers and their allies, strong and resolute enough to prevail.

Winchester Officials See Maryland Armories

Winchester, Va., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—Led by Mayor C. R. Anderson and Andrew Bell, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, a delegation of Winchester citizens yesterday returned from Hyattsville and Laurel Meadows, Md., where they inspected armories with a view of obtaining data which may be valuable in event this city decides to erect such a building.

Flecks on a Surface

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

EVERYONE either has read or is reading or ought to read "Good-bye, Mr. Chips," and those who read it when it first appeared last July immediately began to look around for something by the same author. Some of the readers of this column may remember that I discovered, among the forgotten and stillborn publications of 1933, a novel called "Lost Horizon," which, by the way, has nothing to do with the successful play, "Lost Horizon," now running in New York. My enthusiasm for "Lost Horizon" almost equaled my affection for Mr. Chips.

• • • •

Hungry for more works by the same author, upon inquiry I discovered three—"Ill Wind," "Without Armor," "And Now, Goodbye." (Please always spell Goodbye with the final E, in order to preserve its meaning. It is an abbreviation for God Be With Ye, the same meaning as expressed in the French Adieu.)

Now while I don't think that any of these three novels is quite equal to either of the other two, they are emphatically worth reading, because they are highly interesting narratives, and rather extraordinary studies in character. They are slightly marred—as so many foreign books are marred—by occasional little slurs at America, of which the most appallingly inept is "Professor of Ventriloquism at Harvard," but these are only flecks on a bright surface.

While these five books are as different in their general plot as books could well be, Mr. Hilton has a strange and sinister passion for murdering his heroine. In his novels Death loves a shining mark, and the more attractive the heroine, the less likely is she to survive.

Remember how he killed off that lovely woman in Mr. Chips? Remember the railway accident in "And Now, Goodbye?" And I shall certainly never forgive him for allowing the irresistable heroine of "Without Armor" to perish, especially after she had escaped about 600 times from almost certain death? His skill in drawing attractive women is equaled only by the "deep damnation of their taking off."

Original he surely is, yet I think he has read with profit the works of Somerset Maugham and W. H. Hudson.

Teacher Paroled For Observation

Baltimore, Dec. 7 (AP).—Judge Robert F. Stanton today sent Miss Catherine Bauserman to a hospital for mental observation under probation with the comment that the 23-year-old former Virginia school teacher apparently had "a dual personality" or is a "confirmed criminal."

The trim young woman, who had been an honor student at several colleges, pleaded guilty last month to bad-check charges involving about $192, saying she had written these and other worthless checks to "keep up appearances" among wealthier friends.

Judge Stanton gave her a three-year sentence, but suspended it, placing her on probation and sending her to the hospital under the supervision of Dr. Manfred C. Guttmacher, court physician and psychiatrist.

The judge said Miss Bauserman, whose home is at Penhook, near Roanoke, also was wanted in Virginia on bad-check charges but that Virginia authorities had agreed to permit the Maryland court to dispose of the case through a parole to the hospital.

Slogan to Be Selected For Sanitation Drive

Leesburg, Va., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—A slogan for a county-wide campaign on "Sanitation and Kitchen Improvement," which is being launched by the home demonstration clubs of Loudoun County, will be selected from a number of suggestions mailed to Miss Matilda Garner, home demonstration agent, Leesburg, Va., and a prize of $5 will be awarded the winner of the contest.

Any resident of Loudoun County is eligible to send slogan suggestions, which must be mailed to Miss Garner by December 20.

Sewer Project Contract Signed at Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—The mayor and city council have signed contract No. 2 of the interceptor sewer project, Seaboard Contractors, Inc., and Richards-Kelley Co. of Philadelphia being the successful bidders at $146,944.05.

The council passed an order revoking the sales of $100,000 of the 1920 general improvement bonds to W. W. Lanahan & Co., Baltimore, at $117,029. The order specifies the bonds will be readvertised and sold at a lower rate of interest. The sale had been made at 5 per cent.

106,343 Idle Placed On Farms in Canada

Chicago, Dec. 7 (AP).—Robert J. C. Stead, director of publicity for the Canadian department of immigration and colonization, today told members of the American Railway Development that the Canadian government took 106,343 from the rolls of the unemployed and relief agencies and placed them on farms during the period from October 1, 1930, to September 30, 1934.

Less than 11 per cent of those colonized under this plan have abandoned their land, Stead said.

Deer Killed Near Cumberland.

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—Taylor McLaughlin and his son, Robert, of Oldtown, killed a large buck yesterday, with four points, while hunting deer at the foot of Town Hill, this county.

Ulm's Ill-Fated Dash Held a Blow to Flying

Backward Trail Traversed by Use of "Land Craft" for Hazardous Hop to Hawaii.

By Harris B. Hull.
(Aviation Editor of The Post.)

WHAT progress aviation? Seven years ago a group of half-trained fliers in a mixed assortment of airplanes took off from California for a prize of $25,000 which awaited the winner in Honolulu. But the journey did not end there for most of the pilots. The tragic toll taken in this race, known as the Dole flight, is history now. The Michigan school teacher, Mildred Doran, Angy Pedlar, Vilas Knope, John Frost, Gordon Scott, Capt. William Erwin and others flew out over the great stretches of water between Oakland and Honolulu in planes equipped with wheels for landing. Somehow they missed the little dot that is Hawaii and flew on. When their gas ran out they landed on the water, in airplanes outfitted with wheels for landing. The planes sank and they drowned.

That was seven years ago.

Since then we are told that aviation has progressed tremendously. We are constantly reminded that the transcontinental and intercity speed records have been broken and rebroken, new airplanes built for military, naval and commercial purposes, with flight performances undreamed of a few years ago.

Yet last Monday another flier started out over the same 2,399 mile over-water course, flown by the Dole contestants—in an airplane equipped with wheels! And, like the 1927 racers, he, too, missed the mark. The airplane landed on water, and evidently sank, carrying Charles T. P. Ulm, George Littlejohn and J. L. Skilling to Davey Jones' locker.

How much, then, in the final analysis, has aviation really accomplished in these seven years? How far ahead have we gone if we still allow a flier to take off from an American airport for an American possession in an airplane equipped with wheels?

• • • •

ULM stated before his departure that he planned to blaze an airway to Australia, to open a commercial service. But airways are not opened by individual, spectacular, long over-the-water flights in airplanes not equipped for emergency. New routes are placed into service as the result of painstaking research, by careful selection of equipment, in this case naturally flying boats, and then by gradual accumulation of experience until the trip can be made with the element of chance reduced to a minimum.

Millions of readers have gazed at screaming headlines telling of Ulm's tragic failure. Perhaps a week ago, or a week from now, they have read or will read more about plans announced by Postmaster General Farley working with an American company to establish an American air transport system across the Pacific.

"What, a regular line across the Pacific? Look what happened to Charles Ulm on the first leg of his trip," will be the readers' answer.

It is obvious that a stunt flight has prejudiced the public mind against a practical commercial operation with flying boats, an enterprise of great importance to the United States.

• • • •

BUT more than that, Ulm carried two others with him. Their contribution was the operation of radio, relief piloting, navigation. But somewhere along the line there was failure, either mechanical or an error in personnel, and the brave Australian had not provided any margin of safety for such a contingency.

During that awful moment when they burned their last gallon of gasoline and glided down to the water, no land in sight, and only wheels to support them, Ulm, Littlejohn, Skilling, must have wished that some governmental agency had not let them venture out over the Pacific with wheels underneath them instead of a rugged, seaworthy flying boat hull.

But there was no governmental agency telling Ulm to use a flying boat instead of a land plane. There was no official to caution him to carry auxiliary radio and a life raft. And the chances are that now, as a result, there isn't any Charles Ulm or George Littlejohn or any J. L. Skilling.

There is only a disturbed public opinion that reacts against aviation. The general public draws no distinction between a stunt flight, such as this attempt, that would have proved nothing, and the operations that may be inaugurated in the future by regular lines properly prepared.

• • • •

THERE are Government regulations, we are told, that prohibit aviators from taking off on ocean flights until they have satisfied inspectors that they have sufficient experience for such an undertaking, and that their equipment insures a fair chance of the venture ending in success. That is for the best interests of American aviation, and rightfully so.

Charles Ulm's past record would indicate that he had completed enough flying on similar trips, a great deal of it as a copilot with Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, to undertake such a flight with a minimum of hazard.

But what about the airplane? Was it qualified to start off on such a venture?

No, it was not.

Is there any competent aviation official that would recommend starting on a 2,399-mile over-the-water flight in a land plane to Hawaii, a mere pin point in the Pacific, that can be entirely missed with only a slight navigational error? Would anyone but an enthusiastic flier start out on such a venture with no margin of safety as protection for himself and crew?

Certainly not. Enthusiastic fliers will do this, but occasionally such enthusiasm needs counsel, even if it be enforced counsel.

THEN why wasn't this airplane declared unsuitable for such a flight? Here a technicality enters the picture. Ulm is an Australian. As a result of this he does not come under this regulation. The fact that he is flying from a United States airport to an American possession makes no difference. Even the presence of an American crew would not make it necessary for him to qualify under this recent regulation designed to prohibit just such things as happened on Tuesday. The captain of the airplane was an Australian and that removed the necessity of complying with the law.

The obvious ridiculousness of this situation emphasizes more than anything else the need of a permanent aviation commission to coordinate the activities of the multiple number of Government bureaus involved in some way in the flying business. Government officials, the manufacturers, the operators, the very pilots themselves need advice and regulation in this business in which one error may mean the loss of human life.

In the past few years we have had an even score of aviation investigations. But, unfortunately, most of them have been destructive in nature rather than constructive. Today another aviation investigating group has completed its inquiry. The Federal Aviation Commission, headed by Clark Howell, is engaged in writing its report to the President.

The members of the commission are faced with a problem. If they do not recommend such a permanent group they will have lost the golden opportunity to do something really constructive. If they do recommend it, they will be criticized by some commentators and some Government officials who have had their fingers in the aviation pie, for attempting to preserve their jobs indefinitely and to enlarge upon their organization.

Wouldn't it be better for the Howell commission to risk the chance of this latter criticism, and to recommend a permanent commission? Perhaps some flier might be prevented from starting out on a 2,399-mile flight over the water with only a set of wheels for landing.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Mr. Roosevelt in the Stratosphere.

(A radio interview.)

"Hello, Mr. President! Can you hear us?"

"Yes. What's new?"

"Everything's about the same down here; how are things up in the stratosphere?"

"Wonderful."

"How high are you?"

"I'm not certain, but I must be very high."

"What makes you think so?"

"I can't hear Borah."

• • • •

"Don't your instruments show your height?"

"Oh, I'm not carrying any instruments."

"How can you tell where you are or where you are going without any instruments?"

"You can't. That's why I love it. The Republicans always knew where they were going—and look where they landed us"

• • • •

"Have you any idea of your altitude, Mr. President?"

"No. It's almost as difficult for me to give my position up here as it is down on earth, but somehow I feel better up here."

"Why?"

"There's no crowd shouting suggestions."

• • • •

"Is the air different up there?"

"Oh, the minute you leave Washington the air is different."

"Are you having any trouble breathing?"

"I hate to disappoint the GOP, but I'm not."

"How cold is it up there?"

"I should estimate it at about 40 below zero."

"How do you fix the temperature at that level?"

"By the fact it's just about as cold up here as it was at those conferences with big business leaders."

• • • •

"Are you up above the clouds?"

"I've been up above the clouds ever since I can remember."

"Do you feel strange?"

"No, I'm used to it."

• • • •

"Is there anybody else around?"

"Not a soul. It's just a vast expanse of solitude. Now I know how Hoover feels!"

No Torpedo Code.

Mr. Richberg urges the business world to shout with Farragut, "Damn the torpedoes, go ahead!" The trouble is that the torpedoes can do what they wish, but the business men have to operate under a code.

The Administration resents the charge that it is to blame for the many collapses at Niagara Falls. It says they were defective when it got them.

"We're not afraid of the torpedoes," said a business man yesterday. "What we don't like is the attempt to make us think they're capsules."

Albert Shultz's Funeral Rites Set Tomorrow

Staunton Business Man Died After Short Illness; Other Obituaries.

Staunton, Va., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Albert Shultz, 67, Staunton business man, who died yesterday at his home after two days' illness, will be held at the residence on North Augusta street at 11 a. m. Sunday, with Dr. Edward N. Calisch, of Richmond, officiating. For all except eight years of his childhood, Mr. Shultz has been a resident of Staunton, interested in numerous civic and business undertakings.

He has served as president of the Rotary Club, Board of Trade, Red Cross Chapter, Temple House of Israel, of which he also was a reader; on the board of the King's Daughters' Hospital and the Community Welfare League; a member of the municipal board of zoning appeals. He was a thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason, and belonged to all three branches of Masonry here and Acca Shrine Temple, Richmond. He was a former worshipful master of Staunton Lodge, No. 13, A. F. & A. M.

In the business field he was long manager of the Beverley Bookshop, publishers of books and magazines; president of the Beverley Manufacturing Co.; president of the New Theater Corporation; secretary-treasurer of an investment partnership, and manager of a travel agency.

He was twice married. His first wife, the former Madeline Barth, of this city, died in 1904. There was one son, Sidney Barth Shultz, and a son was born to his second wife, Miss Fay Laub, of Natchez, Miss., Philip Laub Shultz, who, with his mother, also survives; as does a sister, Mrs. Joseph Loewner, of Staunton. Mr. Shultz was born in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., July 9, 1867, a son of Samuel and Henrietta Shultz.

Mrs. Elizabeth L. Ambler.

Front Royal, Va., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Mrs. Elizabeth Lyon Ambler, 65, who died today in Emergency Hospital, Washington, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow in Old Leeds Church, near Hume, Fauquier County. After her marriage and until three years ago, when with her husband, Edward Ambler, she removed to Front Royal, Mrs. Ambler lived on the large Ambler estate, Texas, near Hume.

Mrs. Ambler was the daughter of the late Daniel May Lyon and Mrs. Anne Meriwether Brodinax Lyon, of Petersburg, Va., and besides her husband is survived by a son and two daughters, James C. Ambler, Commander Thompson, U. S. N., Richmond; Mrs. W. Maddux Thompson, of Lyon Village, wife of Commander Thompson, U. S. N., and Mrs. Carl Gillespie, Bluefield, Va. She also leaves two brothers and a sister, Peyton Lyon, of Massachusetts; the Rev. Daniel Lyon, of New York, and Miss Anne Lyon, of New York.

Wade D. Mangum.

Petersburg, Va., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—The funeral of Wade D. Mangum, yardmaster of the Seaboard Air Line Railway in this city, who died yesterday morning at his home here, will be held tomorrow and will be conducted by the Rev. George T. Tunstall, of the West End Baptist Church, assisted by the Rev. E. H. Pruden, of the First Baptist Church. He was a prominent local member of the Masonic fraternity.

Mr. Mangum is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary Mangum, and six children, Mrs. R. W. Wilcox, of Elgin, Ill.; Mrs. Melvin G. Cromwell, of Baltimore; Wade D. Mangum, jr., Edwin, Clarence and Robert Seward Mangum, of this city; his father, Adolph Mangum, of Durham, N. C., and several brothers and sisters. Burial will be in Blandford Cemetery.

Ernest C. Guy.

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 7 (Spl.). Word has been received here by Mrs. W. H. Guy of the death of her brother-in-law, Ernest C. Guy, of St. Petersburg, Fla. Mr. Guy had made his home in Florida for the past ten years. He was 54.

Mr. Gug is survived by his wife, who was Miss Nora Dudley, and one daughter, Mrs. Courtney Harding, of St. Petersburg, and four brothers—T. A. Guy, of Gretna, Va.; Harry Guy, of Princeton, W .Va.; Frank Guy, of Atlanta, Ga., and W. H. Guy, of this city.

Mrs. D. L. Ward.

Sara M. Taylor.

Cambridge, Md., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—The funeral of Mrs. Sara M. Taylor, who died in Baltimore, was held at 2 p. m. today at Gypsy Hill, with the Rev. T. C. Saneholtz officiating.

Mrs. Taylor is survived by five daughters, Mrs. Minnie Peters, Mrs. Ernest Fleischman, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Lester McCollister, Mrs. Elsie Robinson and Mrs. John H. Webb, of Cambridge, and three sons, Harvey A., Herman B. and George W. Taylor, of Cambridge. She also leaves one sister, Mrs. John Yeo, of Washington, and one brother, A. C. Neighbors, of Centreville.

Thomas J. Holder.

Cambridge, Md., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Thomas J. Holder, 71, prominent farmer and horse fancier, who died Wednesday night at his home near Vienna after a stroke of apoplexy, were held today at Windsor Hills, his home, with the Rev. J. W. Sutton, pastor of Reids Grove M. E. Church, officiating. Interment was in McKendree Cemetery, at Rhodesdale.

Fire-Proofing Expert 'Cooks' Concrete Columns

One of these days the Bureau of Standards may put firemen out of business. More or less constantly engineers of the fire resistance division are testing so-called fireproof materials. Above, Nolan Mitchell, bureau engineer, examines "fireproof" columns that have been cooked for nearly eight hours at 2300 degrees Fahrenheit.

Veterans' Unit Set to Defend Stand on Bonus

Leave Payment in Hands of the President, Demands Rainbow Group.

Baltimore, Dec. 7 (AP).—J. A. Clarke said today the Maryland members of the Rainbow Division veterans, who have gone on record in favor of leaving the bonus payment in the hands of the President and in opposition to nonservice disability legislation, stand ready to "carry the fight" to Washington if necessary.

Clarke, chairman of a committee which submitted resolutions on the subject adopted by the Maryland Chapter of the Rainbow Division veterans here last night, said:

"We are standing on what we said last night. But we are ready to go to the front if necessary. If circumstances warrant it, we could send a committee to Washington to support our point of view. There are a couple of attorneys in our chapter and some others who would serve on such a group.

"The battery is absolutely opposed to nonservice disability legislation and we're opposed to bringing politics into veterans' affairs."

Chiseling by many "so-called veterans" who don't deserve compensation, Clarke said, has made it "almost impossible" for deserving men to get aid.

"There's too much chiseling of veterans by veterans," he said.

Price Increases Noted for Farms

Baltimore, Dec. 7 (AP).—Charles S. Jackson, president of the Federal Land Bank of Baltimore, said today the average price per acre received for farm lands sold by the 12 Federal Land Banks in the country from January 1 to September 30, 1934, was $20.01—an increase of about $3 over the average price for the same period last year.

Jackson said that, although the price per acre varies in the different farm credit districts, each district reported an increase over 1933. Tobacco farms, he said, are bringing higher prices in the Baltimore district, which includes Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia.

All of the districts, Jackson added, report a definite increase in the number and amount of collections on land bank and land bank commissioner loan installments falling due.

Cumberland Kiwanis Elects Dr. C. L. Owens

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—Dr. Charles L. Owens was elected president of the Cumberland Kiwanis Club for the ensuing year at a meeting yesterday of the Board of Directors. Phil A. Heimlich was chosen vice president and Robert S. Barnes, treasurer. The newly-elected directors are William Claus, Joseph Klawan, John A. Oliver and Phil A. Heimlich.

Secretary Wins Banner.

Cambridge, Md., Dec. 7 (AP).—The membership banner of the Cambridge Hospital membership campaign was awarded to the Secretary district for enrolling the largest percentage of its population of any district in the county. An average of one member for every 3.5 persons in the district was Secretary's record.

Two Men Here Play With Fire—But Get Pay Instead of Burns

Test Blazes of Federal Bureau Provide Much Valuable Data.

Somewhat as Druid priests paying homage to the burning sun, Simon Ingberg and Nolan Mitchell build a fire when they want to learn something of the fortunes of men.

Knowing man's yearly sacrifice to flame in this country alone runs close to a billion dollars in property losses and claims thousands of lives, they peer, figuratively, into blazing furnaces to see how to curb the awful appetite of fire.

The Druids made fire offerings of sheep and goats and sometimes lovely princesses, and from their agonized writhings foretold the bounty of the next year's harvest.

Mr. Ingberg and Mr. Mitchell place in their fires cement, iron and wood and from their condition when the flames are quenched foretell the course of the fire battle. Mr. Ingberg is chief of the fire resistance section of the Bureau of Standards. Mr. Mitchell is his assistant.

In one of their furnaces they place miniature columns made of most of the fire resisting material known to the building industry and burn them with gas jets to temperatures ranging up to 2,300 degrees Farenheit, the melting point for iron. Strangely enough it is a cement compound that is more than 20 per cent wood by volume, that, next to asbestos, offers the longest resistance to fire.

Mr. Ingberg defines a fireproof building as one that may be burned throughout without collapsing. Gypsum cement mixed with wood chips held the iron core at the center of the test column at a temperature below the buckling point for 7½ hours, indicating that a building so constructed would come under Mr. Ingberg's definition of fireproof.

In another building at the Bureau of Standards, Mr. Ingberg and Mr. Mitchell ran a life-size partition against a one-wall furnace to determine the fire retardant qualities of mineral wool blown between the plaster and sold by a Midwestern manufacturer as a home insulator. The wool held the fire for 30 minutes longer than an uninsulated portion of the partition, and the bureau believes the manufacturer has reason to look for heavy sales of his product in New York, where tenement buildings are being proofed against the yearly sacrifice of lives in fire traps.

Mr. Ingberg and Mr. Mitchell similarly test all manner of materials to learn their combustibility. When fire in the X-ray room of a Cleveland hospital a few years ago took nearly 100 lives, they began studies to determine improved methods of storing films. After the Morro Castle disaster, they worked on fire prevention at sea.

Once in a while their experimentation gives the fire department an uneasy moment or two. Some one living near the bureau turned in an alarm the day they filled a small building with old furniture and set fire to it because they wanted to know how much heat certain materials created when burning. The firemen saw that the joke was on them all right, but they stood by with equipment ready just in case.

The Government building program gave Mr. Ingberg and Mr. Mitchell the chance they'd been looking for since the fire resistance section was founded in 1914. Instead of tearing down a couple of old buildings, Mr. Ingberg and Mr. Mitchell were allowed to burn them. The fire department stood by that day too, but about all the laddies had to do was to stand around and watch.

Two Get Year in Jail For Chicken Stealing

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—Two men were given jail sentences of a year each in circuit court here yesterday on charges of breaking and entering a chicken house.

Dot Mansfield, colored, and Sim Wood were the men sentenced.

Ocean City Votes Honor to President

Plans to Name New Waterway Roosevelt Inlet.

Ocean City, Md., Dec. 7 (AP).—A proposal to name the new waterway between the Atlantic Ocean and Sinepuxent Bay "Roosevelt Inlet," and to invite the President to its dedication next spring, has been adopted by the Ocean City Chamber of Commerce.

The resolution, authorized by A. R. Holcombe, editor of the Eastern Shore Times, also proposed the erection of a tablet at the inlet bearing the names of men who made its construction possible.

W. I. Purnell, president of the chamber of commerce, said the proposal was based on the fact that $281,000 needed to supplement a $500,000 State appropriation for the waterway was obtained from the Public Works Administration as one of its first emergency relief measures.

Dr. Hall Analyzes Necessity Of an Education Department

By Warren A. McNeill.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 7 (AP).—Why is a State department of education necessary? Why could not local officials administer the school system which requires approximately one-fourth of the State's income for its support? How does the State department carry on its work? What is the trend of public education in Virginia and what is the goal toward which the department is aiming?

These were questions propounded to Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, who directs the activities the department carries on from its offices on the seventh floor of the State office building.

"This department," Dr. Hall replied, "is a professional organization operating under direction of the State board of education for the purpose of carrying out a mandate of the Virginia constitution which says that the General Assembly shall maintain an efficient public free school system throughout the State.

"The board employs the State superintendent of public instruction, who in turn appoints assistants to carry on the various phases of work in the system.

"The superintendent is charged with seeing that policies established by the board and laws passed by the General Assembly are complied with throughout the State. In order to do this he must have a corps of assistants well qualified in their respective fields of work to see that an efficient system is maintained and that all policies and laws are executed properly."

Outlining the organization of the department, Dr. Hall pointed out the six divisions and their directors as follows: Instruction, Dr. D. W. Peters; higher education, Dr. Thomas D. Eason; school buildings, Raymond B. Long; school libraries and textbooks, C. W. Dickerson; vocational education, Dr. Hall, who is made the head of this division by law; research and finance, also headed by Dr. Hall as superintendent of public instruction.

A State department to direct the educational system is necessary not only because it is required by the State constitution, Dr. Hall said, but also because "the experience of 300 years has indicated the greater amount of mass education, the greater the permanence of democracy.

"Hence, the department exists primarily to see that every child is given an educational opportunity equal to that of every other child and can develop to the fullest extent."

He said that the State as such has an interest in maintaining a certain standard of efficiency throughout the State and unless it has a centralized agency to check and measure the various units of the system, there would not be this uniformity and the laws would be generally evaded.

It also is necessary to have an agency to see that the State's money is spent for the purposes for which it is appropriated.

Furthermore, the State department stands as a coordinating agency between localities and between elementary and more advanced units of the education system. It serves, too, as a coordinating agency between States, facilitating transfer of students between States as well as between units within the State by having standards made uniform.

(In the next article of this series Dr. Hall describes the function of each division within the Department of Education.)

Naval Officer Shot Self, Department Report Says

The Navy Department announced today the death of Lieut. Herbert Monulta, jr., on the destroyer Upshur, Tuesday, apparently was caused by self-inflicted gunshot wounds. The Upshur was stationed at San Diego at the time.

Monulta's father, Herbert Monulta, sr., lives in Charleston, S. C. He has directed that burial be at Bloomington, Ill. The dead officer was born in Anaconda, Mont., in 1903 and appointed in 1921 to the Naval Academy.

Virginia Town Plans 10% Cut In 1935 Taxes

$1.35 Rate Is Scheduled in Fredericksburg for Next Year.

Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—City taxes for 1935 will be reduced 10 per cent when the city council adopts the new budget Monday night, council members voted in a preliminary conference last night. The tax rate will be reduced from $1.50 to $1.35 per $100 valuation. The cut is expected to save the taxpayers approximately $10,000.

A decrease of $1,540 in proposed expenditures is largely responsible for the cut. The lessened expense is due chiefly to the drop in school expenditures due to a larger State educational appropriation here.

Lessened lighting costs will save the city approximately $1,800, council officers said.

The budget calls for three salary increases. They are: Mrs. Muriel N. Gouldman, city manager's stenographer, increased from $936 per year to $1,080; Carlton C. Massey, city manager's clerk, from $1,680 to $1,800; Roland J. Leveque, superintendent of filtration plant, from $1,620 to $1,740.

Possibility of some change in the salary appropriations was indicated today by expressed dissatisfaction on the part of some councilmen. Reduction of City Manager L. J. Houston's remuneration was discussed in a recent meeting, but no action was taken last night. The budget was presented by John F. Gouldman, jr., finance committee chairman, but had not been seen previously by Cecil L. Reid and E. G. Heflin, comembers of the committee, they said.

Success Seen for Sale Of Seals in Fauquier

Remington, Va., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—Early reports of the Christmas seal sale in Fauquier County indicate an encouraging response, according to county Tuberculosis Association officials.

The sale, which opened Thanksgiving Day, accounted for a total of $314.80 up to Wednesday night. One district has yet to be heard from.

SUPER MIND SCIENCE. SUPER MIND SCIENCE.

SERMONETTE ON SUPER MIND SCIENCE
The New Scientific Religion, by PROF. WILLIAM ESTEP, Founder.
Subject: "IS GOD THE CREATOR OF DISEASE AND POVERTY?"
The Bible tells us that "God Is Love" and Jesus refers to God as "Our Heavenly Father" and asks "If Ye ask bread of Your Father would He give You a stone?" This Teaching then is that God is a Giver of all things Good, and not creator of Disease suffering, and Sin in any form, for if He creates both Good and evil His Kingdom would be divided and would therefore fall. Super Mind Science says Disease and Poverty are creations of the Negative Consciousness of Man, and that The Will of God, which is positive, can create Health, Happiness and Success, and Heal Mankind of all his wounds. If man will only overcome Mental Negation and use the Powerful Constructive Will of God which Jesus used. This will controls all Health energy in the body, and since it is the will of God Creates Perfect health. Fusion Deficit Charges False, Democrats Say Lansdale and Hagner Claim Funds Are Available to Pay Debts.

The charge made by the Fusion County commissioners of Montgomery County, Md., that the county faces an operating deficit of $453,554.37 is not true, the two Democratic members of the board, Richard H. Lansdale and Robert D. Hagner, declared last night in a signed statement.

The commissioners declared that the county had $738,157.89 cash in the county banks, enough to pay all interest on county bonds and certificates of indebtedness due this fiscal year, or until June 30, 1935; finish paying for the new county school houses under construction and to meet all county salaries and other operating expenses well into the month of May.

To create the alleged estimated operating deficit charged by the Fusionists it was necessary to list for payment in cash $102,000 general county bonds and $242,000 short term county certificates of indebtedness issued against street assessments that mature before June 30, the commissioners said. These are to be paid from "street assessments to be collected in the next ten years and consequently can not be described as current operating deficit at all," the Democrats pointed out. The previous Democratic administration proposed to extend the certificates to the extent that the street assessments remained outstanding and to extend the $102,000 of bonds authorized by the 1933 session of the Legislature.

Should Extend Obligations.

The previous board had refunded 20-year serial general county bonds amounting to $253,000 in 1933 and in 1934 bonds amounting to $193,000. In the past 12 months the board also has refunded approximately $650,000 in short-term county and suburban district certificates as to 10 to 20-year serial county bonds, with a reduction in interest rate of from 1 to 2 per cent.

"Not to have extended these maturing bonds or county certificates would have added to the county's direct tax rate 1 cent for each $10,000. It is recognized throughout the world in this period of general depression that maturing public obligations, whether short or long term, should be extended wherever possible for the present relief of the taxpayers," the Democratic commissioners declared. They stated that county bonds were selling at par in the financial marts of the country and that sale of these bonds to leading investment houses had been prefaced by thorough investigation of the county's financial situation by these firms.

The only operating deficit that Montgomery County really has to pay prior to June 30, 1935, will be through failure to receive $126,000 estimated by the last board as available to the county from the State gasoline tax and if amounts from the profits of the county dispensary system up to June 30 fall short of $150,000. These profits already have reached $100,000, with December and the six months to follow still to come, Hagner and Lansdale declared.

Estimates Conservative.

Alexander K. Hancock, county auditor, stated yesterday that figures printed in The Post yesterday failed to state that they were contingent on four items which had been appended to his report.

He said: "This statement indicated insufficient cash to meet estimated disbursements, provided no tax anticipation notes are issued or renewed, nothing is received from the State roads commission from gasoline tax for debt service, no further bonds or certificates of indebtedness are issued and that suburban district certificates for street improvements are not extended."

Hancock further declared that his figures regarding estimate of receipts were conservative and the clerk and counsel of the board were so informed when he submitted his statement. He declared that the statement he had prepared does not pretend to show a county budget deficit and that he had not had reason to suppose the report was to be published. The auditor said that upon the ability and willingness of the county commissioners to wisely and prudently administer the affairs of the county depends whether or not there will be a deficit, but such a deficit if it should occur should not be large enough to burden the taxpayers unduly.

Takoma Park Hears New Cleric Tomorrow

The Rev. J. A. Pfeiffer, newly-installed pastor of the Takoma Park Evangelical Lutheran Church, will deliver his first sermon tomorrow to his new congregation. The Rev. Mr. Pfieffer was installed December 2 by the retiring pastor, the Rev. R. G. Steinmeyer, assisted by the Rev. E. H. Heuser, pastor of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church, Washington, and the Rev. Gerhard Lenski, Ph. D., pastor of Grace Lutheran Church, Washington.

Dr. Meuser delivered the charge to the congregation and the Rev. Mr. Lenski gave the charge to the new pastor.

The Rev. Mr. Pfeiffer come to Takoma Park after having served for more than four years as pastor of St. James' Lutheran Church of Rockdale, Md. He is a graduate of Capital University and Seminary of Columbus, Ohio, and is a native of Springfield, Ohio. He is married and resides at 824 Tewksbury place northwest, Washington.

Alexandria Post No. 24, American Legion, had as guest speaker last night in Gadsby's Tavern, Kennard F. Bubier, United States Marine Corps, Aviation, who told of his experiences at the South Pole with Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd. The program was arranged by Commander Everett Hellmuth, and is one of a series of talks by prominent persons to be given this winter.

The members of the post had been requested to bring to this meeting some staple article of food or canned goods for the post's Christmas baskets which will be distributed to the families of needy veterans.

Included on last night's program were song and dance numbers by Miss Margaret Eddington. The club room in the Tavern was formally opened last night.

The Rev. Father Pius, of the Congregation of the Passion, began a Triduum last night in St. Mary's Catholic Church. An hour of prayer was observed in honor of the Sacred Heart, which is observed the first Friday in each month. The senior choir of St. Mary's held its rehearsal of Christmas music, after the service.

The Feast of the Immaculate Conception will be observed today with masses at 6, 7, 9, and 12:10, and special services this evening at 7:30 o'clock.

John Rusher, national councilor, and Willard A. Robey, State councilor, of the Sons and Daughters of Liberty, made an official visitation to Friendship Council last night.

A program of entertainment was arranged and short talks were made by City Councilman A. Slater Lamond and the Rev. Norman Roberts. A buffet supper was served at the close of the program.

Judge Luther B. Way, of the United States Court for the Eastern District of Virginia, directed a verdict for the defendants in the suit of Mrs. Irene Sullivan, administrator of the estate of her husband, the late Guy Sullivan, after all evidence for the plaintiff was in.

The suit was against Philip T. Kron and Felix J. Kepper. Mrs. Sullivan asking $10,000 for the fatal injury of her husband April 29 last, near Falmouth, Va.

Russell Mitchell Post, No. 609, Veterans of Foreign Wars, is planning the distribution of baskets at Christmas to the needy poor of the city. This post will hereafter hold its meeting at 115 North Pitt street, the next meeting being scheduled for December 17, to which the public is invited.

William Mitchell, 39, who lives on the Hume estate, Mount Vernon avenue, while working on a culvert there yesterday, was crushed by a pile of brick. He was taken to the Alexandria Hospital, where it was said he is suffering from a broken back, fractured leg, fractured arm, broken collarbone and fractured ribs.

The local Salvation Army, Capt. McMullen in charge, will place Christmas contribution kettles on street corners here this morning, and from now until Christmas solicit help for a holiday dinner for the poor.

Stickley Heads Arlington Unit Of FireFighters

Tax Collections Gain Over Last Year, Report Discloses.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Arthur C. Strickley 2d was unanimously elected president of the Arlington Volunteer Fire Department at its meeting held in the Firemen's Hall last night.

Other officers elected were David S. Watson, vice president; Elmer J. Blackmer, jr., secretary-treasurer; Henry Bone, assistant secretary-treasurer; A. C. Schaffel, chief; Carl E. Schaffel, deputy chief; William Clark, captain; Erwin Bailey, lieutenant, and William McAtte, fire marshal.

Complete reports of the collection of taxes for this year up to and including Wednesday, the last day prior to the adding of the penalty of 5 per cent, amounted to $365,139, as against $300,778 for the same period last year. These figures show the percentage of collections for this year was 59.52, as against 54.20 for last year.

The report also shows the collections this year to be the highest in the past three years. In 1932 collections totaled $361,628.

The annual Christmas party for needy children of the county at Arlington Hall, Junior College for Girls, will be held in the college auditorium Monday evening, December 17, at 7:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Mate E. Jacobs, superintendent of public welfare, announced that 20 children under 6 years of age will be taken to the college, where the students will present them with toys and clothing.

Announcement has been made of the election of S. P. Vanderslice, principal of the Washington Lee High School, as vice president of the department of principals in the Virginia Education Association.

Bids for the purchase of 5,000 feet of fire hose were opened by the county board yesterday. The contract will be awarded by the board Friday morning at the courthouse.

The Arlington County Girl Scouts will hold their annual Christmas garment party at 2 p. m. today in Scout Hall at Ballston. The entrance charge will be a garment at the door.

Boonsboro Prepared For Community Show

Somerville Case Gets Evidence From Physician

Testimony Seen Favorable to Those Seeking to Break Will.

Culpeper, Va., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—Dr. Mulholland, of the University of Virginia, was the principal witness in the Somerville will case today, giving expert testimony on the mental condition of the late Miss Fannie T. Somerville at the time that she was under his care in 1932. This evidence tended to show that she was feeble-minded.

Francis T. Somerville and others have brought suit against Samuel W. Somerville and Atwell Somerville, executors of Miss Somerville's will, in an effort to break it. By the terms of the will, the bulk of the estate, estimated at more than $100,000, was left to the schools and missions of the Presbyterian Church, with legacies to distant relatives. This is being contested by her nieces and nephews on the ground that her mind and body had become feeble prior to the date of the will, and that therefore she was not capable of executing her real wishes.

F. H. White, cashier of the Second National Bank, was recalled to the stand today to identify certain checks in the detailed examination of her bank account, especially of a $4,000 check that was reported lost just prior to the appointment of her business guardian.

Judge A. T. Browning, presiding, announced that court would adjourn at 1 p. m. Saturday and reconvene at 10 a. m. next Tuesday. Jurors will spend the week-end at their homes in the county.

Galax, Va., Dec. 7 (AP).—Capt. John Blair Waugh, 92, Confederate veteran and one of the founders of Galax, died at his home here today. Capt. Waugh was one of the organizers of furniture industries and banking houses here. He retired ten years ago. Surviving are three sons.

Funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon.

Club Urges Tax For Keeping Up Fire Company

Takoma Young Democrats Indorse 10-Cent Town Levy for Support.

Legislation to provide for a 10-cent tax to be collected on each $100 property by the mayor and council and to be paid to the Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department for upkeep of the department was urged in a resolution adopted by the Young Men's Democratic Club of Takoma Park at a meeting Thursday night in the firehouse.

The money would be collected by the town officials and paid in quarterly installments to the fire department. The club also adopted a resolution expressing dissatisfaction with the manner in which the new municipal playground is being constructed. The club alleged the steep hills in back of the playground are a menace to the school children.

The two Democratic candidates, John B. Diamond and Raleigh S. Chinn, will win a recount and their seats on the board of county commissioners, J. Bond Smith, president of the club, declared. He charged the two Fusion candidates, Charles E. King and Frank H. Karn, won their seats because the election laws were not followed.

Smith and F. Byrne Austin were nominated for president. Others nominated were Charles Y. Latimer and Luke Bennett, first vice president; Earl H. Burdine and Oscar Scherger, second vice president; Luke Bennett and Charles Y. Latimer, for vice president of the fourth election precinct; Michael Ware, Charles Mattox and Charles Lorens, for vice president of the sixth precinct; Walter Griffin and William Fowler, for vice president of the ninth precinct; Benjamin Wilkinson for secretary; Oscar Scherger and Michael Ware for treasurer. The election will take place at the January 3 meeting.

Officials Going On Trial Soon

Special Panel of 27 Jurors Summoned for Anne Arundel Case.

Annapolis, Dec. 7 (AP).—A special panel of 27 jurors was summoned today for the trials of four former and three present Anne Arundel County officials to begin in the local Circut Court on Wednesday.

Judge William H. Forsythe, jr., drew the panel late yesterday. Jurors were drawn from each of the eight county districts.

Lewis Kelly, Elmer E. Parkinson, J. Edwin Wilson, F. Guy Kelly, C. Addison Hodges and Severn Arnold were indicted in their capacity as county commissioners charged with paying a magistrate his monthly salary without requiring him to make return of criminal cases under oath. Since the indictment Arnold has died, and all except Parkinson have completed their terms as county officials.

John Bromley, county roads engineer, and Zach Johnson, chairman of the county House delegation in the Legislature last session, face trial on a charge of conspiracy to sell a power shovel to the commissioners at an exhorbitant rate.

Kappa Sigma Alumni Will Dine at Richmond

Richmond, Va., Dec. 7 (AP).—The Richmond alumni chapter of the Kappa Sigma Fraternity will celebrate the sixty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the fraternity with a banquet Tuesday night. Herbert M. Martin, of Danville, historian of the fraternity, will be the principal speaker and will be introduced by Lieut. Gov. James H. Price. W. L. Prince, of the University of Richmond faculty, national head of the organization, and Gov. George C. Peery will be guests of honor along with delegates from the chapters at several colleges in Virginia.

Hanging Decreed For Girl Attacker By Three Judges

Convicted of criminally attacking a 16-year-old Chevy Chase girl, William J. Harold, alias Alexander Jones, colored, 35, yesterday was condemned to hang by three judges in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville.

The judges deliberated 35 minutes before reaching a decision that "the evidence proves clearly and conclusively an active participation by this defendant in the crime charged in the indictment."

The courtroom was well filled and was guarded by more than 20 county policemen and deputy sheriffs, but there was no demonstration. The girl testified behind closed doors. The crime occurred September 30. Neither State nor defense offered closing arguments.

In sentencing Harold, Chief Judge Hammond Urner declared: "If the extreme penalty prescribed by law is not to be imposed under circumstances such as those proved in the present case, it is difficult to imagine a case in which such a penalty would be justified."

Associate Judges Arthur D. Willard and Charles W. Woodward sat with Judge Urner and concurred in the sentence.

Takoma Park Citizens To Hear Prettyman

The Takoma Park Citizens Association will meet Monday night at 7:30 p. m. at the Takoma Park Branch of the Public Library, Fifth and Cedar streets. E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel of the District, will speak on the proposed legislation to give the Commissioners increased powers.

Proposed changes in street car service to Takoma Prak will be discussed. Report on the milk question will be heard.

The club will cooperate with the welfare committee of the school and community league in serving hot lunches to the school children.

Two Men Jailed As Tipsy Drivers

Two Washington men were committed to jail yesterday at Upper Marlboro when they were unable to produce fines for driving while drunk and other traffic charges.

Joseph R. Shriver, 1121 Fourth street southwest, and William E. Robertson, 1256 I street southeast, were each fined $102 and costs. The charges included reckless driving and having no driver's license.

Judge Waldo Burnside committed them to the Marlboro Jail for 12 days, provided the fine is not paid. Shriver was arrested by Prince Georges County Policeman W. G. Gray, December 6, near Marlboro. Robertson was arrested near the District line by State Police Corporal J. T. Knight.

Orthopedic Clinic Planned.

Skilled Labor Pay Rate Off

But Unskilled Workers Get Advances in Virginia Under NRA.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 7 (AP).—Wage rates for unskilled labor have increased under the NRA, but the pay of office workers and skilled labor in many instances have declined, says the thirty-seventh annual report of the State department of labor and industry.

The report, submitted to Gov. Peery by Commissioner John Hopkins Hall, recommends an advanced program of legislation, including unemployment insurance, old-age pensions, health insurance and minimum-wage laws.

Officials of the Virginia Federation of Labor, who saw the report tonight, immediately expressed their approval of the program it outlined.

Amendments to existing laws suggested in the report include: Prohibiting employment of children under 16 years of age and regulating employment of those up to 18 years, limiting hours of work for both men and women to eight in any one day, modernization of mining laws and a requirement that all coal mines be rockdusted to prevent explosions, periodic inspection of steam of heat-generating boilers, electrical safety regulations and inspection and elevator inspection.

Card Party Tonight.

A card party is to be held tonight at 8 p. m. by the women of the Rector's Aid of St. John's, St. Bartholomew's and St. Luke's Episcopal Churches at the Sherwood School in Sandy Spring, Md.

"Freeze-up" Weather is here!—put in your car and play safe!

THE GUARANTEED ANTI-FREEZE

Every minute... "freeze-up" is reaching for your car. Stop it! Put in Eveready Prestone at once...and save yourself big repair bills for a frozen radiator, or worse still, a cracked water-jacket.

One-shot of Eveready Prestone is all you need. And your car is safe against both freeze-up and rust, right through until next Spring. ALL ANTI-FREEZE... no water. Eveready Prestone at $2.95 a gallon is your most economical buy. It brings you these important advantages: No "freeze-up." No boiling away.* No more trips back for more anti-freeze.

Eveready Prestone should not be confused with either glycerine or alcohol. Eveready Prestone is approved by all car manufacturers and guaranteed by National Carbon Company, Inc., to provide all-Winter, two-way protection against freeze-up and rust.

FIND YOUR CAR ON THIS CHART

IMPORTANT! The price per gallon of an anti-freeze means nothing unless you know how many gallons you will need during the Winter. You can't get that information on a boil-away anti-freeze—you don't know how many gallons you will need. But you can get it for Eveready Prestone... and here it is. See how reasonably you can get two-way protection all Winter long against both freeze-up and rust with one shot of Eveready Prestone—one shot because it won't boil off, no matter how warm the weather gets between the cold snaps. First cost is last cost—no trips back for more.

Gladys Broz Is Presented At Reception

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

There are only two diplomatic debutantes this season. They are Miss Valerie Prochnik, daughter of the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik, and Miss Gladys Broz, daughter of the Secretary of the Czechoslovakian Legation and Mme. Broz. The latter was presented to society yesterday afternoon at a reception given by her parents in their home on Leroy place.

The drawing rooms were decorated with autumn flowers and bouquets sent to the debutante, who received with her mother and wore a gown of turquoise blue with a bertha of Spanish lace. The skirt, which was cut very full, was ruffled to the end of the brief train. Mme. Broz wore a gown of handsome black lace, fashioned with a tiny jacket.

Assisting the debutante were Miss Sibilla Skidelsky, daughter of Mme. de Bianchi, and Miss Florence Harris.

Mrs. Brown Is Hostess.

Another large party for debutantes yesterday was the luncheon given at the Shoreham by Mrs. Wrisley Brown for her debutante daughter, Miss Katharine Brown, who will be formally presented to society at a tea in the Sulgrave Club December 15. Idle N. Y. Women Studied by Society

Unemployment Average of 16 Months Found.

Unemployed business and professional women in New York who lost their jobs during the depression have been idle on an average of 16 months, a recent study of white-collar unemployment made by the American Woman's Association has revealed.

The association made its study among its membership of 4,000, of which 75 per cent are engaged in business or professional work.

The study showed that in the last 2½ years unemployment in the group had almost doubled. It showed that almost one-tenth had been without employment three years. The median salary for 1933 was $2,415, a decline of $620 from the median salary of $3,035 reported in 1931.

Complete Oratorio Is Sung at College

Salisbury, Md., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—Said to be the most ambitious program in local music circles to have been attempted in years, the complete oratorio, "The Evangel of the New World," was sung tonight at the Maryland State Teachers College here.

The oratorio was written for the celebration of the 150th anniversary of the Methodist Church in America, the score being by Van Denman Thompson and the lyric by Dr. Forrest J. Prettyman.

Soloists were Mrs. George Vincent, Baltimore, soprano; the Rev. E. E. Coleman, Salisbury, tenor, and Dr. Justin C. Wood, Salisbury, basso.

Trio soloists were Mrs. Harry G. Harcum, Mrs. Harry Adkins and Mrs. Elwood Eckhart, all of this city.

The production was directed by the Rev. E. Eckhart, with Frances P. Hopkins as accompanist.

The choruses were sung by 125 voices, practically all church choirs in the city joining forces to stage the production.

Dishrag Shirts and Loosely Woven Canvas Cloth Trousers Popular at Beach Resorts

Biscuit, Coffee Colors Big Note In Swim Suits

Colored Linen or Cotton Jackets and Contrasting Trousers Worn.

By M. A. Weiss.

THE TIME for your annual pilgrimage to Florida's sunny shores is almost at hand, and your wardrobe should occupy a great part of your consideration. Incidentally, what's smart at the Riviera majors at Palm Beach and comes north the following summer.

At Juan-l'Pins the dishrag shirt is replacing the polo shirt. This garment has a collar slightly different from the latter, and is made of a meshed or twine construction allowing the sunshine to penetrate to greater extent. Ombre stripings are particularly good looking. Note especially that this garment buttons all the way down the front. Col. Sawyer and many other notables are going in strongly for the navy blue cashmere jersey with fisherman's neck and puffed sleeves. This is finished in lastex yarns to give a slimming effect. Note too that lastex is being used for almost every type of garment . . . sloppiness is not tolerated although comfort is courted to the 'nth degree. Twine and open mesh construction is the highlight for sports blouses, shirts and sweaters.

Trousers are of loosely woven canvas cloths. The tunnel belt loop is favored together with reverse pleats giving a smooth effect across the waistline. As of last year, a foulard necktie worn cummerbund fashion in place of a belt adds a new touch of color to the ensemble. To revert to the trouser again, creams, tans, ecrus and all shades of blue are having a huge success. I particularly like those washable tropical worsteds with faint nubs, flecks and curls that make them resemble our Harris tweeds.

Sleeveless Jackets Worn.

Coats are not in great fashion, but a tiny sleeveless jacket . . . like an eton jacket without collar or lapels, and made of contrasting colored linen or cotton (that is contrasting to the trousers) is generally accepted, since it permits street gadding-about by those who don't care to change from the dishrag shirt to a linen one.

At Biarritz, biscuit and coffee colors are the big note in bathing suits. (If you can call them suits.) Lastex is a favorite for trunks. People here come to sun their bodies and are educated morally enough to be proud of them rather than ashamed. They are a healthy looking lot, and the combination of sun-tan, coffees, yellows and maroons, against emerald sea, white sand and sapphire skies . . . well there's the pigment, paint your own picture. Canvas trunks with two buttons on each hip (without belt) are also in favor. Pajamas are not worn on the beaches by men. Huge terry cloth poncho's slit in the center (for the head to slide through) and colored in all hues of the rainbow come in handy after the dip, and are used as beach rugs.

Seen at Victors, and Monte Carlo . . . a beach fashion for evening that should catch on in our sunshine haunts. The best known men-about-town are wearing colored linen or cotton, double-breasted, jackets with rounded peaked lapels, side vents, and contrasting linen trousers for evening wear! With these are worn a white cotton polo shirt with a tie of the same material. Does it sound outre to you? Consider the locale, and become weaned to the unusual . . . it's practical as well as smart.

Mess Jackets Are Out.

Don't throw away your shawl collar, white linen dinner jacket. It's still smart, especially with lightweight bangkok midnight blue trousers and a maroon or yellow "weskit." But tell all of your friends to give their mess jackets to the pullman porters. Look for color in evening wear . . . even in most conventional Washington, next summer and this wintering season. Nothing can stop it. Evidence? Your colored contonniere, colored clocked sox, colored reefers, colored waistcoats are already in . . .

At Lido everyone is going mad about the double-breasted jacket with side vents as exploited by our dean of fashion publicizers, the Prince of Wales. This garment is worn buttoned at the lowest button only, and has a decided flair to the lapels, exposing more of the shirt and weskit than formerly. But you already know this garment. Just one thing I ask you to watch . . . watch the suspender back, backless "weskit," with three-piece summer suits.

In shoes the brown buck jai-alai shoe with crepe soles is still good. Of course, sandals and espadrilles for knockabout wear. From there on you pay your money and take your choice.

The Pork-Pie Hat.

Don't forget the pork-pie hat. Your father's old telescope in new colors and crushable lightweight felts demands a place in the resort wardrobe. It's the most popular headgear here.

Incidentally, since the boutonniere, though indispensible, is often inaccessible when you need it most, many lapels sport carnations, cornflowers or what is your choice, made of feathers, by those clever Viennese. You can't tell them from the real thing even at close scrutiny. Some of them are perfumed, and they always look fresh. Talking about accessories, the foulard and madder handkerchief is still big. They use them for blowers and showers, for neckthrows and cummerbunds.

Nothing of great importance seen in shirtings, although deep tones are taking second place to British stripings that give the same effect. Raspberries and other reds of that family receive a play, because they make a pleasant foil for the light ground foulard and other summer neckwear.

What's Puzzling You?

TO BE correctly dressed for the occasion without being foppish is the mark of the gentleman. There is a modern etiquette in dress as important as the etiquette governing conduct. The men's fashion editor of The Post is prepared to answer queries on the what, when and why of sartorial good taste. Put your questions to him.

Leave Well Enough Alone.

* * * *

SIR: I don't think it's wise. The garments you mention in detail are broken in and would not have the proper lines.

When to Wear Tail Coat.

MEN'S FASHION EDITOR: Is the tail coat worn at winter Florida resorts, or aboard boat going South? M. T. K.

* * * *

SIR: Very rarely, only at a decorous formal function. See my item on summer formal wear in other columns.

How to Clean Buck Shoes.

* * * *

SIR: Get a flexible, copper-wired brush or a piece of fine sandpaper and rub briskly, but lightly. Unless you are adept, use the brush, since too heavy rubbing with sandpaper will remove spots and surface both.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Do you think all women who have to battle the world alone as a rule lose their femininity and become abrupt and masculine in manner? I feel since I have been out in the world on my own that I have lost much of my early gentleness of manner.

* * * *

I find myself talking bluntly and stalking about more like a man than a woman. Then, too, I believe that living alone prevents me from developing an easy graciousness of manner.

* * * *

I was brought up in a cultured home, but feel I am fast losing touch with the grace of manner I was taught in youth, simply from knocking about alone. I try to see my faults as they must appear to others, but I don't know what to do to overcome them. What do you suggest? TROUBLED.

It Doesn't Follow.

DEAR TROUBLED: While many women who have to battle the world alone do lose their femininity and become abrupt and masculine in manner, it is not at all necessary or inevitable. I suspect the phenomena amounts to a perverted expression of gallantry; that it is a valiant disclaimer of any need to ask favors; a way of saying: "I can and I will meet man on his own terms."

* * * *

Which is a mistake, of course. Woman never can and never will be able to meet man on his own terms; any more than he can meet woman on hers.

* * * *

Needless to say, there is no spectacle more odious than that of a woman being consciously coy and overtly alluring, in the obvious feminine sense, in a business or professional environment. Unless, perhaps, it is the thorough-going feminist, who confidently expects to conquer the heights by sheer force of intellect alone.

* * * *

Since you are battling the world all alone, you must be engaged in some business or profession, which in turn must bring you into daily and hourly contact with other men and women. Instead of saving your graces of manner for some hypothetical social occasion, why not give them some play in your workaday world?

* * * *

In the business world, as elsewhere, the woman sets the tempo of her relationships with men. If she is feminine in a well-bred way, men will accord her the deference her manner invites. Only if she is brusk and curt will they retaliate in kind and set in motion a vicious circle which makes it necessary for her to act the destroying role of man among men. M. H.

Dress 'Weskit' Reveals Some Smart Changes

Narrow at Waist, to Show More of Shirt Front; Elastic Back Strap.

THE BLACK and white season brings to the fore some notable innovations in dress waistcoats. There is a distinct narrowness at the waist, resulting in a greater display of shirt front. A black elastic detachable back strap replaces the old strap buckle, giving an entirely new and pleasing effect.

The tension at the waistline is "cushioned" instead of strained, and the shirt and vest do not bulge, regardless of the wearer's position. The left-hand clip has a clasp action which prevents it from falling off. Being black, the elastic is invisible when worn with tails and high rise English trousers.

There is a new knitted fabric resembling marcella (an indent material) that looks and launders marvelously well. It is finished so that it never glazes, no matter what the laundry does to it, and most important of all, it will not shrink.

The London season indicates the predominance of a "weskit" stressing a very narrow waistline . . . a la guardsman . . . with sharper narrow points. There are whalebone stiffeners in the points (like the tabs in your tab collars), so that points won't bend and buckle. The suspender back waistcoat is the answer to the man-about-town's prayer for compact, non-bulging accessories.

In view of the fact that modern buildings and means of transportation are so well heated, it is rather foolish not to indulge in the backless models which permit greater freedom and less bulk and wrinkles, with an immaculate trimness entirely in keeping with this modern era. M. A. W.

Women Voters Urge Reforms In Platform

Board Accepts Program Emphasizing Exalted Public Service.

THE BOARD of directors of the National League of Women Voters accepted the following platform as presented by Mrs. Jasper King, of Chicago, at its sessions yesterday in the Powhatan Hotel:

"We believe that government of the people, by the people and for the people can meet the challenge flung by Fascism and Communism. We believe that we the people must shake off our lazy-minded attitude toward government. We believe that Jackson's "to the victor belongs the spoils' must vanish. In its place we shall unfurl a fresh standard, 'There is no greater glory than public service.' Let public service be so exalted and so wise that no one in the future shall find scope for his patriotism only in military service.

"We believe that we the people can, through the machinery of our democracy, create ways of training and selecting our civil servants which will attract to public service men and women of extra worth.

"We believe that essential governmental services are menaced by the appalling reduction in revenue from taxation. Our systems of taxation are antiquated and outworn. We believe the tax burden can be redistributed, tax systems readjusted to provide sufficient income to pay for services rendered in the interests of the people."

Prizes to Be Presented.

MR. PENDLETON HOGAN, author of the "Bishop of Havana" and "The Dark Comes Early," will announce and present the prizes to the winners of the short story contest at the dinner at 6:30 o'clock today at the Women's City Club. Mrs. Merritt O. Chance will preside:

Among those attending will be Mrs. John S. Bennett, Judge Mary O'Toole, Mrs. William L. Corbin, Miss Jennie M. Olin, Mrs. Gus A. Schuldt, Mrs. John F. Cremen, Mrs. Lyman B. Swarmstedt, Mrs. Caroline S. Stephen, Dean Grace Hays Riley, Mrs. William J. LaVarre, Mrs. Frank G. Stewart, Mrs. Clyde B. Aitchison, Mrs. William Partridge and Mrs. Ella Oldham Howard.

Fly Here For Bazaar.

MISS LUCY FOGARTY, women's editor, Ahrens Publishing Co., and Miss Anne Owens, president of the National executive Housekeepers Association, yesterday flew from New York to attend the bazaar and card party of the local chapter of the Association tonight at the Raleigh Hotel.

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Phi Alpha Fraternity will give a card party Monday afternoon and evening at the fraternity house, 1325 Eighteenth street northwest.

Curb Should Be Placed on Habit of Teasing in the Family.

By Alice Fox Pitts.

"TEASING is inexcusable," says one mother. "It is wearing on nerves and it makes him unhappy unnecessarily to tease him about his freckles or his big feet, his new girl or his latest hobby."

The father in the same family takes the opposite stand.

"He's going to be teased all his life," he says, "by classmates and friends. If he doesn't get his share of it at home, when he is young, he won't be able to take it, and he'll be more unhappy than if he learns young to be a good sport."

There may be some ground for the latter contention, for a little, good-natured raillery does no harm. But the trouble with teasing is that the chronic teaser never knows when to stop. Children never can start mild teasing without carrying it to extremes, which results in tears, or hidden resentment which is even worse.

It seems to me that a ban on teasing in the family is a good idea. Despite any such ruling, a certain amount of teasing is certain to occur, but the ban may at least put a curb on it.

Mrs. Barnett Has a Collection of Dolls She Purchased in Many Countries

Owns Several Hundred, All Tucked Away in Tissue Paper.

From wooden sticks to hand-painted bisque, from bits of rag to silk and lace ruffles—these are the ranges of the world's dolls. Yet, no matter how crude, no matter how near perfection, they are all loved by the world's children.

By Katherine Smith.

WITH THE MEMORY of a big doll she loved as a child and the attraction of another in Switzerland, Mrs. George Barnett started her collection. She found dolls in bazaars in the Orient, in railroad stations in New Mexico, in shops in Holland and in the mountain workshops of this country. Now she has several hundred—she isn't sure of the exact number—all tucked away in tissue paper and mothballs.

She looked around the parlor of her beautiful home and said apologetically, "I'm sorry I've no dolls out, but the moths ate them and I valued them so I had to put them away.

"I don't suppose doll collecting is very exciting, but it was for me because they fascinate me. I remember when I was 6 or 7 years old I had a big doll with a beautiful china face and long, real hair. She had china hands, too, and one day a playmate broke one of the fingers. They had to get a doctor for me as well as the doll!

"So in every country of my travels I looked for dolls. The Swiss dolls are lovely. The Spanish ones are beautiful, too—I have bull fighters, matadors, toreadors, and ladies from different provinces—some with white mantillas, others in church costume. I have dolls from China, Japan, France, Germany—although they aren't so very different. People are used to French and German dolls. I got a few Russian ones, some from Hungary. Then I have the grass-skirted ladies from Manila, Guam, Hawaii, and those places. I have tribal Indian dolls, some of their primitive sticks of wood that children cuddle.

Chinese Figures Most Valuable.

"But of all the collection I think the Chinese figures are about the most valuable. The Chinese made dolls of every age, profession, in summer or winter costumes. I had many of them made for me in the convents. I'd simply say, 'send me a little boy in summer costume,' or 'I'd like to get a mandarin, please.' They are really copies of Chinese life, rather than dolls.

"But the dolls I love the most are the Dutch ones. They're so square and substantial. The little girls have 18 to 20 petticoats just like real children; the boys' trousers are spread out stiffly.

"The Indian dolls are made of the crudest materials. One old woman doll in my collection has cheeks that are dried peaches. Yes, the peaches are fine, all wrinkled like an old woman's face. Another doll is a stone, wrapped in rags, and a crudely painted face. Sometimes there is a little papoose strapped to the back of a squaw—all these things show that the Indians try to make what they know—things closest to them."

Sees Dolls' Popularity Waning.

Mrs. Bennett thinks children don't play with dolls as much as they did. "Children have too much, anyway," she said. "I think modern dolls frighten them, they're too realistic. Why, the child of a friend of mine made a doll of a little blanket, rolled up. She took it to bed with her and couldn't be happy without her dolly. I suppose it was because the blanket was soft and cuddly—modern dollies are so hard and cold! Except the rubber ones, and they're clammy.

Chinese Figures Are Most Valuable, But Dutch Are Her Favorites.

Among her other collections, Mrs. Barnett has a fine array of Chinese belt buckles; white jade, turquoise and other stones are represented. In another cabinet she has little silver models of Chinese arches, tiny musical instruments, French silver desks, chairs, a piano. Her home is filled with beautiful things, gathered fron her extensive travels. But in her interests and affeotions, her dolls, slumbering in moth balls, come first.

Monday: Doll Psychology.

Harris & Ewing.

If the subject is dolls, Mrs. George Barnett can tell you all about it, from the long-legged French restaurant ones to the Indian squaws whose cheeks are dried peaches.

1. Is the "b" in catacomb silent?
2. "Is there such a word as Italianize? If so, how is it pronounced? Is its meaning the same as Italianate? What is an Italiote?" J. W., New Haven, Conn.
3. What is a shebeen and how is it pronounced?
4. What is the correct pronunciation of bovine, and what does it mean?

Answers Here.

1. Yes. It is pronounced CAT-a-come (the last syllable rhymes with "home.")
2. Italianize (it-TAL-ian-ize) is a synonym of Italianate, and means to render Italian in any respect. An Italiot (it-TAL-i-ot) was, in ancient times, a Greek inhabitant of Italy. This term is rarely used in this, or any sense today.
3. Shebeen (shee-BEAN) is the Irish word for an illicit liquor house.
4. BO-vine or BO-vin (with a short "i").

Chutney Grows In Popularity In Washington

Many Hostesses Are Serving Certain Combinations for Canapes, Meats.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

WASHINGTON is fast becoming chutney conscious. It is a real pleasure to note that many hostesses who keep apace of the times are serving certain chutney combinations for canapes, and others offer cold meats with a dash of chutney.

It is no wonder that the curious ones amongst us sought the source of this delicious chutney. And thereby hangs a tale:

Years ago a Washington woman and her husband were traveling in India. In Colombo they stopped at a hotel which, among other things, prided itself on the chef. The chef in turn prided himself on his chutney. The visitors became so fond of it that they were eager to take some away. The best way to do this was indirectly, by means of the recipe, so straightway the recipe was sought. Needless to say it took much persuasion before the chef would finally divulge his secret, but when you taste the chutney you'll say thank goodness he did.

Until recently this chutney was enjoyed only in private circles. A short time ago, however, a friend called and found this Washington hostess making it. She tasted it and declared it was too good to be so little known. From then on her chutney reputation began to spread, and the chutney was sought by Washington clubs, caterers, hotels and housewives.

You may buy it directly from the Washington woman who makes it—and if you buy it once you are as good as a regular customer! It's delicious when mixed with cream cheese and spread on wafer-thin crackers, or, of course, it's an unrivaled dish when served like a relish with meats.

New Perfume Offered.

"Love in Bloom" is the romantic and promising name of a new perfume. For all those who dislike a heavy perfume, will have nothing to do with Oriental aromas and heartily deplore anything cloyingly sweet, this must have been especially concocted. If you can call a perfume sentimental, this is just that. It has a delicate, sweet fragrance that seems to combine the best that lillies of the valley, tuberose, orange blossoms and honey suckle have to offer. Not that these flowers went into the making. It is a blend of many, but you notice none. Instead, you think of all the lovely flowers you've ever enjoyed and feel sure this essence is all of them combined.

Nail Pencil Popular.

Those who have once used a nail white pencil use one forever afterwards. It's such a relief to see the dull tips grow suddenly snow white with merely the stroke of a pencil. It's almost too good to be true to see them stay white for hours.

A certain cosmetic house puts out a long pencil which combines many uses. The "lead" is white, hard enough to last for ages, soft enough to give a snowy touch to the tips. On the other end is a small metal gadget for cleaning the nails and shaping the cuticle. These handy pencils, convenient for handbag, office or dressing table cost very little and last for an indefinite time.

Big Boxes of Chocolates.

Surely it has been the dream of every woman to receive one of those enormous boxes of candy displayed occasionally in drug store windows. Sometimes there's a vivid remembrance of the time some one else received one and you were allowed to nibble. The time has finally come when you can afford to buy yourself one—or persuade your husband to play Santa in advance. A local store is displaying 5-pound boxes, literally filled to the brim with a variety of chocolates and other candies. They range in price from $1 to $2.49.

If you're thinking of giving candy to some one, you could thrill them with a Titan box like this.

Plaid Collar Brightens.

The surest way to brighten a dull dress is by means of a plaid collar if the collar combines a lot of bright, cheerful colors.

Some people argue: "Who wants to spend a lot on an old dress even to brighten it up?"

It isn't necessary to spend a lot, and certainly any dress is worth a little if you can get a lot of good wear out of it. Frequently an old dress will be so becoming with an extra touch or two that you'll adopt it as a favorite. In a local store there are some plaid taffeta collars in a myriad of colors, and they sell for 59 cents.

Odd Soap Clusters.

There have been fantastic tales of distant magic lands where it showed popcorn and rained lemonade. Now here's a true story of all-colored grapes that contain small parcels of soap.

If you drop by the toilet goods department of a downtown store you'll see them. Likely as not you'll think they are decorative center pieces.

Inquire and you'll find they are soap clusters. Each grape conceals its small cube of soap by a bright cellophane covering. If you can resist buying this for yourself it is a delightful "surprise package."

Dinner Gown Informal Enough for Afternoon

Pattern No. 635.

A DINNER gown that actually hides those extra inches through bust, waist, or hips! A dinner gown that is formal enough for a later party, informal enough (with its little jacket) for late afternoon. A design that is smart enough for the finest fabric, conservative enough to stay in style. That describes No. 635.

In the envelope that holds this expertly designed, accurately sized pattern, there is also a large instruction chart. In sizes 34 to 48. Size 40 requires 5¾ yards of 39-inch fabric for both frock and jacket, or 3⅝ yards for the dress alone.

Culbertson on Bridge

1252

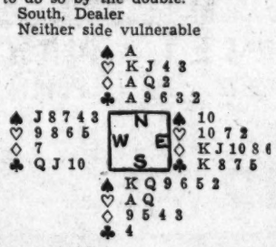
Giving the Opponents a Slam.

Like all Bridge players I have my own peculiarities, superstitions and fetishes in bidding and play. As I have mentioned before, my biggest weakness is that I let long diamond suits of seven or more cards go completely to my head and can not be restrained from bidding them way up into the stratosphere unless restrained by physical force.

However, what I believe to be one of the chief strengths of my game is my absolute hatred for doubtful or very close penalty doubles. I have filled these columns time and again with examples of contracts which were fulfilled because of unwise penalty doubles where without these doubles the declarers would not have made them.

I recently uncovered another one of these doubles. The South player fulfilled a small slam contract in spades only because the distribution was indicated to him by a most unwise and foolish penalty double by the West player. Admittedly, South deserves all the credit in the world, as his play of the hand was little short of magnificent. But he could not possibly have chosen this line of play had he not been led to do so by the double.

South, Dealer
Neither side vulnerable



The bidding:

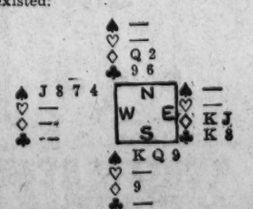
South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	3♣	Pass
3♠	Pass	4NT	Pass
5♠	Pass	6♠	Pass
Pass	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

Admittedly, North's bid was slightly, overoptimistic, but the contract would be a laydown with a 3-3 trump break.

West chose as his opening lead the club Queen, and when the dummy went down South quite properly came to the realization that the only possible excuse for a double by West was the possession of at least five trumps. He accordingly immediately set out to prepare for a possible end-play against West.

He won the opening club lead with the Ace in dummy and immediately ruffed a club in his own hand. Dummy was reentered by the spade Ace and, fortunately for South, East dropped the ten-spot, thus confirming South's suspicion as to a five-one trump break, but at the same time giving South hope, in that West did not hold equals in spades.

Another club was led from dummy and South again trumped, thus reducing his spade holding to three while West still retained four. The Ace and Queen of hearts were now cashed, and dummy was entered with the diamond Ace, South quite properly refusing to take the finesse. The two top hearts were now cashed in dummy, diamonds being discarded, and fortunately for South, West had to follow on both. The following situation now existed:



At this point it made no difference what was led from dummy. East followed suit and South discarded a diamond from his own hand. West, of course, was forced to trump, and now had to lead away from the spade Jack into the declarer's King-Queen-nine tenace. Thus the contract was fulfilled with the loss of but one trump trick.

What Today Means

"Sagittarius."

IF DECEMBER 8 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:45 a. m. to 12:45 p. m. from 2:45 to 4:45 p. m. and from 7:45 to 9:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:45 to 10:45 a. m., from 4:45 to 6:45 p. m. and from 9:45 to 11:45 p. m.

On this December 8, if you are wise, all forms of practical jokes, horse play and undue familiarity will be abstained from if trouble would be avoided. Letters written on this date should bear satisfactory results.

A social engagement might result in a contact which will bring about a great deal of happiness. The verbal expressing of your appreciation for considerate thoughtfulness displayed by a friend will not be amiss when your attention is called to it. Married and engaged couples, as well as those in pursuit of matrimonial bliss, will avoid quarrels if they cheerfully agree to abstain from doing something they know is a pet aversion of their companion.

If a woman and December 8 is your birthday, you may be inclined to force your religious and political opinions on others. You will gain in popularity if you refrain from trying to make people adopt your own line of reasoning. You have a great deal of personal magnetism, which, if directed in the right direction, may bring gratifying financial results.

If a man and December 8 is your natal day, you may progress more rapidly if you do not insist too much on having your own way. You will gain much more in both a social and business direction if, instead of using dictatorial methods, tactful ones are employed. Literature, preaching, banking and politics have vast possibilities to be taken advantage of.

Recipe Contest Prize Winners Are Selected

Mrs. Kennon, Mrs. Kearful and Mrs. Spring Take Three Awards.

NOT MANY places will one find as elaborate an array of Christmas cookie recipes as was entered in The Post's recipe contest this week. The first prize, $3, is awarded to Mrs. C. C. Kennon, 3120 Thirty-eighth street northwest, for her recipe for Christmas Lebkuchen. Second prize, $2, goes to Mrs. J. M. Kearful, 1255 Kearny street northeast, for her recipe for gum drop cookies, and third prize, $1, to Mrs. J. J. Spring, Leesburg, Va., for her recipe for butterscotch sticks.

Honorable mention is awarded Miss Mollie E. Gritzen, 1321 North Central avenue, Baltimore, Md., for her recipe for wine cookies; to Mrs. Orville E. May, 214 Raymond avenue, Chevy Chase, Md., for her recipe for frontier cookies; to Mrs. David Zimmer, 3216 K street northwest, for her recipe for cookies Oriental, and to Mrs. Anna Stowe, 406 Cedar street, Takoma Park, D. C., for her recipe for date fingers.

The recipes appear in the order mentioned above.

Christmas Lebkuchen.

½ cup warm honey
½ cup cooking molasses
1 cup brown sugar (rolled)
2 eggs
Grated rind of 1 lemon and 1 orange
¼ cup minced citron
¼ pound ground almonds
2 cups flour
½ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon allspice
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon salt

Mix all ingredients in order given, put in ice-box overnight. In the morning roll out about half-inch and cut in strips 3 inches long by 2 inches wide. Bake at 400 degrees Fahrenheit. While still hot, ice with a very soft icing made of confectioners' sugar and cream. This icing should be applied with a brush.

Gum Drop Cookies.

4 eggs beaten together
2 cups brown sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon water (no more, no less)
2 cups flour
1 cup pecans (broken in small pieces)
1 cup gum drops (cut small)

Bake 30 minutes in moderate oven, cut in squares and cover with powdered sugar.

Butter Scotch Sticks.

¼ cup butter
1 cup of brown sugar
1 egg
¼ cup broken walnut meats (black walnuts preferred)
1 cup sifted flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon vanilla

Melt butter in saucepan, add sugar and when well blended remove from fire; cool to lukewarm; add unbeaten eggs and beat well. Add other ingredients, vanilla last. Bake in a shallow pan lined with greased paper. When done the mixture will be a golden brown. Remove from pan, cut into strips 1 inch wide. Recipe makes about two dozen strips.

Wine Cookies.

½ pound butter
½ pound granulated sugar
6 tablespoons wine
½ teaspoon cinnamon
Pinch of salt
Flour to make a stiff dough

Roll out and cut with fancy cutters. Brush with white of egg and sprinkle with chopped almonds mixed with a little granulated sugar. Bake in a moderate oven.

Frontier Cookies.

2 cups dark brown sugar
1 cup butter
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup hickory nut meats
4 cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder

Work the butter until it is soft and creamy, then blend in the sugar and the eggs, well beaten. Add vanilla and dry ingredients, sifted together after measuring. Add the hickory nuts and work them in well. Then, with the hands, shape the cookie dough into balls about the size of a walnut; put them on a cookie sheet about 2 inches apart. Shape each ball with a fork until about one-quarter inch thick. Bake at 400 degrees Fahrenheit until nicely browned.

Post Contest Seeks Recipes For Puddings

"SUGAR and spice and all things nice" go into a holiday pudding. Next week The Post's recipe contest will be devoted entirely to recipes for puddings that are suitable to serve through the Christmas season.

Plum pudding is the old standby, of course, but it is too expensive for everyone to serve. There are any number of other delicious puddings that will enhance a holiday dinner. Submit your favorite pudding recipe. It may be a steamed pudding and it may be a baked one, but it must exemplify the Yuletide season.

Send your recipes to Dorothea Duncan, Home Economics Editor of The Washington Post. Three prizes will be awarded—$3 for the best recipe, $2 for the second best, and $1 for the third best. All recipes submitted should be received on or before Thursday of next week.

Type your recipes if possible. If not, write them in ink. Check all recipes carefully for omissions. The name and address of the sender should appear on each sheet submitted.

LUXURY

By MARYSE RUTLEDGE.

Temple's deep voice dragged her along on its undercurrents. "I've ordered the yacht to Miami," he said. "I'm taking you to the Park Lane—oh, don't worry——" His heavy face lit with a smile—"I'm leaving for Reno tomorrow. What does it matter——" he added, "which way one starts around the world?"

"So you've arranged it all!" Jocelyn stood up straight and tall, her eyes storm-brown. "Suppose I don't agree?"

Slowly Ogden Temple drew out of his pocket a newspaper of the evening before. "Your arrival is announced here rather conspicuously among the social lights on board. Probably your husband will see it."

Dick had seen the paper and so had Mary Derby. When he telephoned her and she heard his voice, hoarse with strain, she knew that he was lost to her.

"She couldn't have got my cable. I only sent it two days ago. She's left the Keenes. They aren't on the boat."

Dick Was Working.

Mary waited a breath before she could answer. That cable, once sent, that she, herself, had insisted on his sending, had seemed such a fragile thing fluttering into space. Since then Dick, as if released, had been working night and day on his Webb & Hoppin campaign. And now Jocelyn had crashed back into a program that meant—Mary didn't dare think what it meant.

"Are you there, Mary?" Dick's voice was impatient, tense. "She lands tomorrow. What shall I do?"

In the quiet old blues and yellows of her living room, Mary smiled into the receiver. A bitter little smile, it was. "Why, meet her, of course."

"D'you think I'd better?"

What a boy he was after all! "I'll go with you, if you like."

And Dick wanted Mary with him. They met for breakfast, Mary in one of her trim blue tailored suits that so successfully hid the subtle charm of her small body.

Dick's bright hair was ruffled as if by winds. Mary couldn't meet the look in his grey eyes. "I can't understand it," he kept on saying. "I can't understand why she came back alone. And how did the papers get it?"

"Now really, Dick——" Mary lost her temper. "Stop fidgeting. She came back because she wanted to."

He would lose a whole day's work this way. And he must get that contract; he must get that Webb & Hoppin account, Jocelyn or no Jocelyn. Mary's pointed little chin could be as obstinate as Dick's. He would get it, if she had to break her promise to him and use her pull with Mr. Finch.

Temple's Car Appeared.

The taxi stopped in a tangle of cars, porters. The Champlain had docked half an hour earlier than her scheduled time. Mary hurried to keep up with Dick's stride

But, while yet on the pavement and before they reached the doors leading to the pier, Mary clutched at Dick's arm. "Wait—oh, wait, Dick." Her urgent whisper halted him.

A black limousine was drawn up. Ogden Temple, big, authoritative, loomed above the crowd. Beside him, slim in her elegance, haughty in the carriage of her head, the reddish brown of her hair gleaming in the sun, Jocelyn walked to his car. Dick hadn't come to meet her. Her decision was made—Temple had won.

Dick wheeled on his heel. "I'll find where they are," he said. "And I'll kill him."

Jocelyn stood motionless in the luxurious suite in the Park Lane, where Ogden Temple had taken her from the boat. He would be back for lunch.

As the great liner drew in, standing on deck beside Temple, her eyes—larger today in their rich chestnut browns—had strained toward the dots and dashes of people waiting on the dock. A waving pattern of hats, arms, faces that grew clearer with streamers of voices thin in the July air. But the one note she sought, Dick's bright hair in the sun, was missing.

She searched still as, with her free, beautiful walk, she stepped down the gangplank. Lovely Mrs. Richard Crane (who was Jocelyn Benckard) returned from Paris, where she had been stopping with the Oliver Keenes. But the news value of her return lay in Ogden Temple's presence. Cameras clicked, linking Mrs. Crane and Ogden Temple multimillionaire, art connoisseur, collector of jewels and women.

Telephone Rang.

Dick hadn't answered her letter. He had not forgiven. Mary Derby had seen to that. Strange that two women worlds apart—Rita Keene and Mary Derby, both hating her—had managed to wreck her life.

The telephone rang. Jocelyn went to it slowly. That would be Temple, of course. Who else——?

"Jocelyn, this is Mary Derby. I'm downstairs at the desk. It's urgent that I see you at once."

Mary seemed to crackle into the room in her trim blue tailored suit, her red hair burnished under her small quilled hat. She wasted no time. "Did you get Dick's cable?"

"No." It went ringing in Jocelyn's ears. Dick had cabled!

"I thought not. He and I went to meet you this morning." Mary spoke quickly, her light blue eyes hard on the one woman in the world she hated. "You were going off with Temple just as we got to the pier." She had her second of triumph as she drove that in, for Jocelyn, very white, swayed as at a blow.

"I have no reason to like you, Jocelyn," Mary went on relentlessly. "It's because of Dick I'm here. It isn't fair of you to come back this way. Just as he was getting on his feet again. It isn't fair of you to do this to him——"

"What do you know about what I've done to him?"

"I know because I love him—and he loves you."

"Dick loves me? You say that?" Jocelyn gripped Mary's arm.

"If he didn't, I shouldn't be here," Mary said curtly.

"I left him at his office. But he'll find out just as I did where you are. And when he does," Mary said fiercely, "he'll come here. If he finds Temple, there's going to be plenty of trouble. Dick's got a chance now to make good. The next few hours are going to decide whether he's smashed for life—or not."

Seas pounded and drummed in Jocelyn's ears. Through the roar of them she heard Mary's voice, a raft in a storm. "Get hold of yourself in a hurry. What are you going to do if he turns up?"

"I love him, Mary—I love him—"

She didn't hear the knock at the door, didn't see Ogden Temple as he strode in.

"I didn't know you had anyone with you, Jocelyn." His deep voice dragged them both around.

Jocelyn's white face winged back at him. "You must go away, Ogden. You must go away at once."

And Dick Arrived.

"May I ask why?" He was massed before her, bleak and wintry.

Jocelyn's heart failed her as she looked up at him. "Dick was at the dock, Ogden. He saw us leave together. I told you—oh, I did tell you if he came and wanted me, I——" Her voice broke.

"Well?" Temple said somberly.

In the silence the telephone whirred again. Mary's small pointed face seemed to push out in the room. "If that's Dick, I won't answer for the consequences, in the state he's in——"

Jocelyn made for the telephone but Temple was ahead of her, blocking the way. "Mr. Crane?" he snapped. "Tell him to come up."

Mary walked to the window.

Behind her another silence hung heavily, horribly. Then Temple's voice, melancholy, and so lonely that Mary, in her own loneliness, shivered.

"I've had everything in my life but you, my dear," he said. Think—Think well, Jocelyn. For this can be the end. What are you going to do?"

"I don't know——" Jocelyn faltered.

Not Worth Killing.

Temple strode to the door, flung it open as Mary started forward. But all Dick saw in the room was Jocelyn. He was strung like an arrow on a bow, hard and taut. He bore down on her with his shoulders and eyes.

"So this is the way you've come back."

"Yes," Jocelyn said, unsteadily.

His shoulders swerved around to Temple. "I've been waiting to meet you again." His cold young eyes swept the block of a man facing him. "I was ready to kill you. I suppose she came to warn you——" His look whipped across to Mary. "But if you're what my wife wants, I've changed my mind. "You're not worth killing." His short laugh was bitter.

"Mr. Crane I have suggested that your wife go to Reno tomorrow," Temple said gravely. "I think the decision lies with her.

"I think not," Dick rapped back. "I think it depends on whether I'd take her back. And—I'm not so sure." He looked at Jocelyn.

She stood, her head high, her arms at her side. Only her eyes, widened and brown in her white face, seemed alive. "That means you don't trust me, Dick," she said clearly. "So it's no use, is it?"

Love Triumphed.

She watched him walk to the door. Mary Derby had slipped around, was following.

"Dick——" she cried. "Dick, don't leave me!"

Dick turned slowly. Very slowly he came back into the room. Jocelyn was sobbing.

Through the tears that blinded and choked her, she saw Temple blurred like a cliff in a driving rain. The cliff seemed to bend. She felt her hand raised to lips that blotted something out forever.

"Dick—Dick—" she kept on wailing.

"Thanks, Mary."

"Dick—Dick—" Jocelyn couldn't stop.

Then the arms closed around her. She was in a circle, in a darkness that broke into lights of bright hair and gray eyes.

On the Air Today

By George M. Adams, Jr.

WASHINGTON'S three largest radio stations, WMAL, WJSV and WOL, will broadcast tonight the ruminations and ex-officio rumblings of local radio editors on their night off.

Jim Chinn, of the Star; Lilian Cutlip, of the Herald; Dick Tenelly, of the News, and your scribe of The Post, will go on the air at 10:30 o'clock from the cabinet room of the Willard Hotel, where staffs of local stations, much maligned local radio performers and their wives and attaches, will be present at what is known somehow as the "Annual Radio Editor's Frolic."

Each radio editor will be allowed one minute and the fraction of a second to tell interested listeners what he or she considers the best network show currently being heard over major systems. Then each radio editor will introduce a local radio star of his choice who will contribute songs, patter, instrumental numbers or just noise.

Tenelly will "m. c." the program, while Chinn, as oldest radio editor in town, will take the mike first. Following will be Miss Cutlip, Tenelly and, again, your modest picker and chooser of what's good to stay away from on the air.

* * * *

NERO, the Roman Emperor who is said to have plucked musical notes from a violin while his noble city burned, had a more human side to his extravagant nature. Pietro Mascagni, the 70-year-old composer of "Cavalleria Rusticana," has woven this assumption into a new opera, "Nerone," which will be given its world premiere at La Scala, in Milan, while N. B. C. broadcasts a portion of it to American music lovers.

According to plans now being worked out, the first performance will be broadcast with microphones on the stage of La Scala on January 18. Voices of the grand opera stars will be picked up and Rome's powerful short wave station will flash the music across the Atlantic.

Mascagni reveals that his opera will deal with Nero's aspirations and frustrations as poet, musician, actor and athlete, rather than his political or regal life.

THAT battle between a fishworm and a goldfish to determine which makes the most noise during routine activities will be broadcast by C. B. S. today at 7:30 p. m., but WJSV, occupied with its "Success Doctor" at that time, won't carry it. Your set should be able to pick the program up, however, on Columbia's WABC, New York; WCAU, Philadelphia, or WCAO, Baltimore.

The broadcast will settle the question of relative noisiness between these combating creatures, by using a sound microscope which magnifies noise 10,000 billion times. It's the invention of Dr. E. E. Free, scientist of New York University, who with its use can make dust dropping on a table sound like heavy thunder.

DR. ALBERT W. HARNED'S National Capital Choir, a local organization of 40 voices, will broadcast its selection of Christmas carols at the Press Club's Christmas Eve party over facilities of local N. B. C., C. B. S. and A. B. S. stations from 1 to 1:30 p. m.

A Christmas message for the club will be read by the Most Rev. James H. Ryan, rector of Catholic University. Word has been received that the Union of South Africa Republic and several foreign embassies have arranged to pick up the broadcast through short-wave stations W8XK, Pittsburgh; W2XAF, Schenectady; W2XE, New York; W3XAU, Philadelphia, and W1XAL, Boston.

MORTON DOWNEY, famous radio tenor, will return to N. B. C. networks Sunday, December 16, at 4:30 p. m., in his own program, at $6,000 a week, the highest salary he ever received for a radio series.

In addition to his half-hour Sunday spot, Downey will be heard for his new sponsor for 15 minutes each Tuesday at 7:15 p. m. on N. B. C. He will have full charge of the programs, select the music and be accompanied by an 18-piece orchestra directed by Ray Sinatra, with a narrator soon to be named.

"Station Breaks."

"SABOTAGE" kept Jim McGrath from broadcasting his usual WOL account of the wrestling matches at Griffith Stadium Thursday night. Just five minutes before he was to go on, Jim discovered that someone had chopped the lines, apparently with an axe. Telephone repair men were summoned, but after the lines were fixed it was too late to report the matches. Seems Jim received an anonymous call the other day telling him to get off the air. He disregarded the warning . . . Children at Emergency Hospital received a big bouquet of flowers Thursday night after WRC's broadcast of "Little Women." Catherine Carson, who plays Meg, received them and decided the kiddies should get them . . . Frank Speaight, English actor, will offer characterizations from Dickens on the Carnegie Hall children's program today at 11:45 a. m. on C. B. S. He'll do the episode where Oliver Twist "asks for more" and a scene from "A Christmas Carol" . . . The diabolical machinations of a bank robber who seeks as his bride a singularly gullible farmer's daughter, will form the basis of the American Op'ry House, "No Mother to Guide Her" presentation tonight on WOL at 9:30 . . . The Philadelphia String Simfonietta, conducted by Fabian Sevitzky, during its Library of Congress concert today at 4 p. m. on WJSV, will play Mozart's "Eine Kleine Nacht Musik," Tschaikovsky's String Serenade and Ernest Bloch's "Concerto Grosso" . . . WJSV is thinking of moving its Minstrel Show, heard Thursdays at 10 p. m., from the Willard room of the Willard Hotel, to the same hotel's main ballroom, which holds twice as many persons.

Seeks Veterans Hospital.

I. A. Lougaris, national executive committeeman of the American Legion, was in Washington yesterday seeking a war veterans hospital for Nevada. He is the guest of Senator Pat McCarran and has been entertained by Veterans Administrator Gen. Frank T. Hines and George C. Vournas, counselor of the Greek Legation.

Arrests Total Ten in Drive On Auto Ring

Three Norfolk Men Held as Investigation Is Made of Thefts.

600 Motors Stolen From Philadelphia, Sold in Va., N. C.

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 7 (AP).—The sweeping investigation by Federal, State and city officers of a motor vehicle theft ring which carried on large-scale operations between this city and Philadelphia, today added three more Norfolk men to the steadily mounting list of defendants, three of whom have been convicted. At least 600 stolen cars are involved.

Nor is the list, which now numbers ten accused men, completed, according to officers. They expect several more arrests before the investigation is completed.

The trio added to the ranks of defendants today were:

John Wood, 28, formerly of Elizabeth City, N. C., charged with the purchase of the stolen cars, who was released under $3,000 bond.

Waive Hearing.

John F. Rhodes, 35, operator of a garage, charged with changing the numbers of two stolen automobiles; released under $1,000 bond.

Andrew B. Rand, jr., charged with perjury before a United States commissioner in connection with charges against John T. Cacace, one of the convicted members of the alleged ring, released under $1,500 bond.

Both Rhodes and Wood waived preliminary hearing, but Rand will appear before United States Commissioner Harry A. Brinkley next Wednesday morning.

The case, Federal officials stated today, is "cracking wide open," as informant after informant comes to the Federal building to furnish information of the widespread operations of an automobile theft ring in Philadelphia that had active sales branches in Norfolk and eastern Carolina.

600 Autos Stolen.

"Within a period of less than three months," said one Federal officer today, "that Philadelphia gang stole more than 600 automobiles. Hundreds of the cars, we have reason to believe, were disposed of in eastern North Carolina, where high prices for tobacco made money plentiful."

Federal agents and police, it was learned today, are now conducting an intensive drive in eastern Carolina, in an attempt to locate stolen cars.

Cacace, who disappeared after his conviction in Federal court and surrendered here Wednesday, remained in the Norfolk County Jail awaiting sentence.

His two brothers and sister, sureties on the forfeited $10,000 bond, posted for Cacace's appearance for sentencing, petitioned Judge Luther B. Way for the remission of this sum. The petition was filed by Henry H. Little, attorney for the sureties, Joseph M. Cacace, Charles M. Cacace and Mrs. Mary Claibourne.

The petition is based on a Federal statute which says: "The court may, in its discretion, remit the whole or a part of the penalty, whenever it appeared to the court that there has been no wilfull default of the party."

Convicted with Cacace were W. T. Reddick, now serving a two-year sentence, and C. E. Winindger, who was released under suspended sentence for his assistance to the Government in working up the case.

The other defendants yet to be tried are Carvel Benson, James Oliver Terry, Percy B. Saunders and George M. King.

Farmer Beats Wife to Death

Used Stove Poker, Firewood in Attack, Surrenders to County Police.

Staunton, Va., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—Using a stove poker and a stick of firewood, the Commonwealth will allege, H. Newton Miller, 50, a Rockbridge County farmer, late last night beat to death his wife, Mrs. Fannie Miller, 53, and then went alone to Lexington, the county seat, where he surrendered to Sheriff Watts. Later in the night the sheriff and Dr. E. P. Tompkins, county coroner, went to the Miller home at Rockbridge Baths and made an investigation.

Domestic difficulties are believed to have been responsible for the dispute that is said to have occurred in the sitting room of the Miller home, culminating in the slaying of Mrs. Miller.

The Millers were married three years ago. Both had been married before and had children, now grown and away from home, by the first marriages, with the exception of Claudia Buchanan, 14, one of Mrs. Miller's children by her former marriage, who lived at the Miller home.

Originally Mrs. Miller was Miss Fannie Sensabaugh.

Expert Advice on Doll Surgery

The Fredericksburg Fire Department has begun its annual Christmas custom of repairing broken toys which the city's more fortunate children are donating for distribution among their needy playmates. Little Shirley Austin, shown above, is giving Truckman Arthur Burton detailed directions for reconstructing the doll she is donating. The firehouse has been converted temporarily into a "Santa's Workshop."

Matthews Will Gives $12,500 To Baptist Fund

Church in Charlottesville Announces Bequest of Confectioner.

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—The First Baptist Church of this city will receive $12,500 from the estate of the late J. C. Matthews, for years the city's leading confectioner, according to an announcement made at the annual business meeting of the church last night by M. C. Thomas, a member of the board of trustees.

This sum, which has been turned over to the trustees, will take the form of two trust funds—one to be devoted to foreign missions; the other to be used for current expenses of the church. Dr. Henry Alford Porter is pastor of the church.

The trustees who will handle these trust funds are Marion C. Thomas, Dr. J. M. Herr, A. Goodman Carter, Harry A. George, sr., G. F. Spitzer, W. A. Haley and Ernest R. Duff.

At the meeting, officers were elected and the financial budget adopted. Officers named were:

Clerk, Miss Myrtle Affelder; assistant clerk, E. R. Riedel; treasurer, J. E. Ellington; assistant treasurer, H. S. Davis; treasurer of fellowship fund, E. H. Armstrong; treasurer of building fund, W. Dabney Harris; superintendent of Sunday school, Dr. J. M. Herr; associate superintendent of Sunday school, Guy F. Via.

Newly elected deacons are: For life term, W. G. Hughes; for 3-year-term, J. W. Vaughan; for 4-year-term, Ernest R. Duff, W. Dabney Harris, G. F. Spitzer, B. A. Wood, Louie Scribner and Guy F. Via.

W. A. Haley and E. R. Duff were added to the board of trustees.

State Sales Tax Trend Is Noticed

Destined to Be Permanent, Says Economist.

Richmond, Dec. 7 (AP).—A general trend toward State sales taxes is observable and in most instances the taxes seem destined to remain as permanent features of the tax system rather than to serve merely as emergency measures, Dr. William H. Stauffer, State tax economist, said today.

Dr. Stauffer, making it clear that he was not expressing any opinion as to the merits of the tax or the advisabilty of Virginia's adopting a sales tax, was discussing the meeting of the National Association of State Tax Administrators he attended at French Lick, Ind., and where sales taxes proved a leading topic of discussion.

The conference, he said, appointed a committee to ask the national Congress to change the law which now prohibits imposition of sales taxes on goods sold in interstate commerce. Possibilities of State tax evasion which this Federal law offers have been presented as one of the chief arguments against the State taxes.

Richmond Mayor Acts To Improve City Jail

Richmond, Dec. 7 (AP).—Mayor J. Fulmer Pugh, today forwarded to the City Council a resolution appropriating $5,000, or as much of that amount as might be required, for repairing the city jail, from which Robert Mais and Walter Legenza, gangster murderers, made their escape.

The improvements, requested by Judge John L. Ingram, of Hustings Court, would include tool-proof bars for cell blocks and a steel door in the jail interior.

A.B.C. Violators Lose Licenses As Board Acts

Drug Store, Eating Places Permits Revoked by Control Unit.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 7 (AP).—The Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board today gave further evidence of a tightening of its policy of enforcing the State control act.

Announcement was made that the hard liquor license of Hurdle's Pharmacy, in Richmond, had been revoked and that in lieu of suspension of its wine and beer license the proprietor had paid a $500 fine. It was charged that the store was selling liquor, supposedly on prescription, to persons who had not in fact held prescriptions and that other persons' names had been used on the prescription blanks when they had not obtained the liquor.

At the same time, it announced that the wine and beer license of S. L. Atkinson, operating an establishment outside of Charlottesville, had been revoked after the board's inspectors reported finding hard liquor in the place. Yesterday the wine and beer license of W. C. Owens, operating the University Club, also near Charlottesville, was revoked on the basis of reports liquor was being sold by the drink in his place.

Deficit Shown By Democrats

Wicomico Co., Md., Reports Expenses of $4,157.73, Receipts of $4,087.

Salisbury, Md., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—L. Thomas Parker, treasurer of the Democratic central committee for Wicomico County, yesterday filed a statement of receipts and disbursements showing that $4,157.73 had been spent in the county and $4,087 received, resulting in a deficit of $70.61.

About $600 of the reported expense was devoted to cost of clerical hire and headquarters during the campaign. The remainder was expended in the cost of auto hire and getting out the vote.

The Republican State central committee has already reported an expenditure of $3,815.

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 7.—The expense account of Representative David J. Lewis, reelected in November, filed yesterday, showed $2,725.58 and a balance of $1.82. Mr. Lewis contributed a total of $866.25 to the State central committee treasurers of the five counties. He received $300 in contributions from friends. Expenditures included $957.10 for advertising, $261.77 for printing and $287.15 for postage.

Court Frees Clerk After Fatal Crash

Case Against McGary Dismissed by Judge at Frederick.

Five Marines Testify; Two Killed, Three Hurt in Collision.

Frederick, Md., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—Marshall E. McGary, 20, 1004 N street northwest, Washington, driver of the automobile in which two persons were killed and three severely hurt in an accident near Urbana on Thanksgiving eve, was freed of any criminal charge at a hearing last night before Justice Sherman P. Bowers. McGary was held in $2,500 bond immediately after the accident, but the bond was reduced to $1,000 the next day.

After the testimony of McGary, Sergt. D. R. Peterson and State Officer A. F. Anderson, who investigated the accident, and other witnesses testified, Justice Bowers said the evidence was insufficient to hold McGary for a grand jury investigation on a manslaughter charge, and the case was dismissed.

Mrs. S. N. McCord, 65, 1004 N street northwest, Washington, and Miss Audrey Hess, 23, of Bellaire, Ohio, were killed, and Miss Ann Glidden, 25, 1004 N street northwest; Miss Margaret Kinter, 23, 1229 Twelfth street northwest, Washington, and McGary were badly hurt. Miss Glidden and Miss Kinter were taken to the City Hospital. Miss Glidden was carried from an automobile into the courtroom to testify. Miss Kinter was not present at the hearing.

McGary testified the party was on its way to Bellaire to spend the holiday. As they neared the top of a hill, he said, he saw several persons waving from the side of the road, and, fearing a hold-up, swung to the left as he started over the top of the hill. Immediately a large Blue Ridge Transportation bus, en route to Washington, came in sight on the right side of the road and he raked the front of it. Miss Hess died in a few minutes of a broken neck and fractured skull, and Mrs. McCord died of a broken back soon after being taken to the hospital.

The men waving were Marines on their way to this city. Six were in the party and while two were repairing a blowout, two or three walked back to warn traffic.

Private J. J. Tokar, Coast Marine Battalion, one of the marines who signaled the automobile to warn of the disabled machine, denied that he or the others stepped into the road to halt any cars. Others in the marine party who testified to the same effect were Privates John Salata, Company A, First Battalion; Daniel Ruscileli, Company B, First Battalion; Walter J. Conrad, Company A, and Raymond Helmick, Company B, of Quantico. Private Leonard Powers, since discharged and believed to be in Milwaukee, was the sixth person in the marine car.

George M. Wolfe, Silver Spring, Md., a passenger in a car which stopped in the rear of the marine machine, testified that McGary's car grazed the bumper of his machine just before it struck the bus. The father of Miss Hess had a statement prepared which he intended to read but this was not permitted. The statement was a plea in behalf of McGary.

Miss McCord's home was at Forestville, Prince Georges County. McGary is a Government clerk and Miss Hess and the two other women also were Government employes.

Dr. McGuire Named To Board of Visitors

Richmond, Va., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—Gov. Peery today announced the appointment of Dr. Hunter McGuire, Winchester, to the board of visitors of the Medical College of Virginia, in the place of the late Col. John W. Williams.

CAPT. PIERO SANTINI.

Trainer of Italian Olympic Riding Team Lectured to Antietam Hunt.

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—Capt. Piero Santini, commander in chief of the Italian reserve cavalry and former chief of staff of the Italian cavalry schools of Pinerolo and Tor di Quinto, has been the guest this week of Dr. and Mrs. J. Stanley Johnson at their country place, Stone Court.

While here, Capt. Santini, who trained the Italian horse show team which competed in the last Olympiad, has been riding to the hounds of several well-known packs and also has journeyed into Virginia, where he has been hunting with some well-known packs.

Capt. Santini delivered a lecture on riding to about 20 enthusiasts here, members of the Antietam Hunt, of which Dr. Johnson is master. He will sail Tuesday for Rome.

Bootleg King Draws 3 Years

'Muck' Holmes Jumped Bail; Also Gets Fine of $2,000.

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—Lester (Muck) Holmes, called the "king of moonshiners" in the Mount Briar and Frog Hollow sections of Washington County, long the rendezvous of illicit liquor manufacture, and reported source of Washington and Baltimore illicit whisky for many years during prohibition, has been sentenced to three years in the Federal penitentiary and fined $2,000. He pleaded guilty in the United States court in Baltimore to two charges of illegal manufacture of liquor.

Holmes, who jumped bail of $2,000 here several months ago, was apprehended last week in Winchester, Va.

While he was a fugitive, many raids were staged, in the district where he operated, by Federal agents, who received reports he was being harbored. It was rumored that Holmes' whereabouts was passed on to the agents with the hope that their almost daily visits into the district would cease. Some of the moonshiners complained that the visits made it difficult to operate stills and that as a result cider ready to be converted into brandy could not be "run."

The recent record rainfall in the district also is understood to have crippled the operations of moonshiners because of the heavy damage to mountain roads.

Army Fliers Sight Bodies Of Hunters

Coast Guard Cutter Sails to Pick Up Sportsmen.

Baltimore, Dec. 7 (AP).—Officers of the Coast Guard cutter Apache received tonight a report that Army airplanes had sighted two bodies, believed to be those of duck hunters missing since Saturday, off Plum Point in the Susquehanna River, three miles from Chesapeake Bay. The missing men, for whom aviators, Coast Guardsmen and others have searched for days, are Harry Porter, 51, an instructor at the Baltimore Polytechnic Institute, and A Ross Carey, 17, son of Maj. and Mrs. Enoch Barton Carey, of Oakington, Md.

The Apache left Fort McHenry tonight in order that dragging in the area where the bodies were reported sighted might begin early tomorrow morning. The flyers, who were from the Aberdeen proving ground, reported the bodies were several feet beneath the surface of the river.

Porter and young Garey went hunting Saturday. When they had not returned late that afternoon, a searching party was formed which soon found the rowboat in which the two had left the shore. The Navy, Coast Guard, Army flyers, officers from the Baltimore police department and scores of volunteers joined in the search. The coats of the two were found floating on the surface but no signs of the bodies were discovered until late today, although the planes went out daily to carry on the search.

Young Carey was graduated from the School for Boys, conducted by his father at Oakington. Maj Garey was president of St. John's College, at Annapolis, from 1923 until 1929.

Porter, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George W. Porter, was born at Snow Hill, Md. He was a graduate of Washington College, received his master's degree at Columbia University, and studied at Oxford, Johns Hopkins and Cornell Universities.

NUDISM now is seen as a foe by the laundry business. J. Clive Quarles, Charlottesville business man, told the midwinter meeting of the Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia Laundry Owners Association at Charlottesville that if they wished to stay in business they must combat the current wave of "back-to-nature" practices.

And up in Baltimore the public might be preparing for nudism, if the information forwarded by the public bath commission is taken with several grains of imagination. The free public baths of that city drew 120,861 cleanly citizens, as compared with only 53,536 for the same month in 1933. Inquiry, however, revealed that a dozen more baths are operating this year than last year, which partially accounted for the increase.

The dream of all bridge players came true this week for Mrs. G. Sanders Davidson, of Charlottesville, Va., when she held a hand of 13 spades. When she bid a "grand slam," her opponents doubled. She promptly redoubled and made it.

Mary, a well-bred pointer dog of 8 years, is, perhaps, the best known commuter of Danville, Va. Nearly every morning she walks over to the street car line near her home, boards a car and rides downtown. Once she is in the business district, Mary visits the bank where her master, C. L. Booth, is an executive, pays other calls to a butcher's shop and a restaurant, then hails another street car and rides home. In 1929, Mary received a street car pass from the traction company, which has been renewed each year.

And speaking of dogs, the canines of Hollywood, Md., should be kept in excellent physical condition chasing the litter that a cat of that town presented recently. She gave birth to 12 perfect kittens.

Westminster, Md., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—The Rev. R. Y. Nicholson, pastor of Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Protestant Church, Washington, was the principal speaker at a quarterly meeting of District No. 6 of the Maryland Annual Conference, M. P. Church, here last night.

The Rev. Dr. Nicholson used as his theme "Worship." The Rev. Dr. E. A. Sexsmith, Baltimore, president of the Maryland Annual Conference, also spoke. The meeting, held at the Westminster M. P. Church, was attended by members of approximately 15 charges.

Martinsburg Tax Case Put Back to Fox

Next Move Up to Commissioner, Is Reply of Prosecutor.

Misuse of City Funds Alleged in Audit Citizens Demanded.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—A suggestion two weeks ago from State Tax Commissioner Fred L. Fox that Prosecuting Attorney Herbert E. Hannis, of this county, take "immediate action" in connection with the disclosure by a State audit of a diversion of funds in the city of Martinsburg's accounts, has met with a reply from Hannis that the grand jury will convene in February; that any subdivision, taxpayer or the State tax commissioner has the right to initiate suit for the recovery of any money expended improperly.

The State tax commissioner, in his letter, said an audit showed the alleged misappropriation of funds had been underway since 1930, adding that the situation represented a "most extraordinary abuse of official power and one which deserved immediate attention."

In his reply, Hannis said the audit shows an erroneous distribution of $13,000 taxes and a transfer of approximately $64,000 from the sinking fund, but "the money had been spent in the orderly functioning of government and in the maintenance of the credit of the city government under distressing times and circumstances and has in no way profited the individual members of the city council, upon whom the responsibility rests."

Disclosure of the diversion came several weeks ago from a citizens' committee, invited by the city to help find means for raising additional revenue.

City officials concede the diversion, but said it was done in the interest of relief for necessary civic functions.

Joe Penner Is Star of a Hit At the Palace

Oakie and Mary Brian Aid; Lederer Is Earle Star; Other Programs.

By Nelson B. Bell.

The highly geared hysterics of both college and commercialized football are made the basis of this farcical tale of gridiron heroes and department store owners.

There is not a great deal in the picture that has not been seen before, but there is something about the method employed in presenting this more or less stereotyped material that lends it a perhaps counterfeit aura of newness and novelty.

The lad who is the greatest of them all on the football field becomes a hobo after graduation and the boy whose sole contribution to the gayety of collegiate life was his virtuosity on the piccolo proves an awful "bust" at managing his dad's department store. So the hobo takes over the department store job and jazzes it up in the only way he knows—a purely experimental application of the practices of the football field and "girl" show to the conduct of big business. The scheme clicks.

Romantic Rivalry Continues.

Of course, there has been keen rivalry between "Love and Kisses" Finnegan and Larry Stacey for the favor of Gloria Van Dayham while they all were in college and this circumstance is utilized to lend added zest to the department store sequences.

It all sounds fearfully trite, and is. But there obtrude themselves, nevertheless, a verve and a lusty enthusiasm on the part of every member of the cast, and all the thousands of supernumeraries who occupy the Rose Bowl stands during the football games, that lift "College Rhythm" out of the rut of mediocrity and place it up among the hits.

Joe Penner repeats for this amiable opus all of the crazy tricks of speech and action he has been doing on the vaudeville stage for years and they score tremendously. Jack Oakie, as "Love and Kisses" Finnegan, has a crack-pot part that suits him right down to the ground, and Lanny Ross, while not an especially ingratiating figure, sings his way into immediate favor.

Mary Brian and Helen Mack share honors as leading feminine factors in the fable and in the end each gets a man, but not the one she expected. Lyda Roberti serves as a clever foil for much of the insane pastiming of Mr. Penner and Goo-Goo, his duck. One of the catchy songs of the musical score contrived by Gordon and Revel is "Goo-Goo, I am Ga-Ga Over You." That will give you a rough idea!

Novel Ensemble Effects.

The rival department store owners are impersonated with their usual skill by George Barbier and Robert McWade and the picture has been mounted and photographed in the grand manner, thus establishing itself as one to be seen by anyone not averse to a little handsome foolishness now and then.

The chorus and rooting section routines in the football grandstands are skillfully devised and executed and possess almost the spectacular brilliance of an Army-Navy game. Numerous other ensemble effects will be found to sound new notes in the screen's utilization of songs and sound as an aid to both serious drama and comedy.

Supplementing the major feature are a new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer travel subject devoted to the glories of the Zion Canyon in the Far West, an Our Gang comedy, "Mike Fright," and a new release of the Metrotone News.

Earle

"THE PURSUIT OF HAPPINESS." Paramount picturization of the play by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Langner, adapted to the screen by Stephen Morehouse Avery and Jack Cunningham, starring Francis Lederer, with Joan Bennett, Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland, Minor Watson, Walter Kingsford, Barbara Barondess, Holmes Herbert, Winter Hall, Bert Sprotte and Henry Mowbray. Directed by Alexander Hall. Previewed Tuesday, December 4.

The quaint comedy of bundling concocted by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Langner as one of the stage hits of its season has been translated into the less turbulent terms of the cinema without any loss of standing as a work of keen interest and amusement.

This is somewhat surprising since "The Pursuit of Happiness" was supposed to depend in large measure for its success upon those brittle bits of double antedre intrusted to the role of Meg, the servant girl of promiscuous inclinations. Practically all of these have been dropped from the screen version of the play and the play suffers no appreciable injury. In fact, it is by no means a surety that it has not been vastly improved from the viewpoint of the mixed family audience.

As it stands at present, "The Pursuit of Happiness" is a straight comedy-drama, dealing with Colonial love affairs between a young deserter from the hired Hessians, serving in the army of King George III of England, and Prudence Kirkland, the ingenuous young daughter of Aaron and Comfort Kirkland, as honest a pair of burghers as ever dodged the tax collector or defied the village bluenose. It holds interest remarkably and loses nothing of the dramatic forcefulness of the original, even if it does omit some of that lusty comedy's ribaldry.

Expanded in Scene.

The story has been greatly expanded in scene, as goes without saying. That is one of the inevitable processes through which every picturized stage play must pass. It has been carried a little farther than usual here.

The opening scenes are set in the palace of George III, and antedate the opening of the stage play by revealing the manner in which Max Christmann came to be in the Colonies in the first place. The conscription of the Hessians, the Washington proclamations encouraging their desertion and other minor preliminary incidents precede the major narrative.

Once events settle down in New England, however, the contour of the piece is about what it always has been—still with a multiplicity of scense, of course, that the stage never could have accomplished.

The bundling sequences, in which Prudence extinguishes the warm fire blazing in the fireplace, opens the windows and otherwise insures the necessity of retiring beneath the covers of the ample bed, with its protective centerboard, to do her "sparking" with Max, have been retained intact, along with all of the original Langner dialogue which, to say the least, is provocative.

The picture has been made to afford even more romantic rivalry than the play and especial stress is laid upon the activities of the village moralist, played by Walter Kingsford, who created the part in the Broadway stage production.

Is Lederer's Best.

In the character of Max, Francis Lederer has the zest role in which he has been seen by American audiences and he plays t wth a light-hearted charm that adds immeasurably to its effectiveness. In the opposite part of Prudence, Joan Bennett is demure and entrancingly lovely.

Charles Ruggles and Mary Boland, as the parents, may or may not have been the ideal choices for their present assignments. My personal impression would be that they were not.

The aforementioned Mr. Kingsford does a splendid piece of work as Squire Banks and Adrian Morris plays the rival suitor with gusto and a deal of bad temper. Minor Watson is a distinct asset to the picture in the role of an aide on the staff of Gen. Washington.

On the Stage.

The stage portion of the bill is headlined by the Westchester Hillbillies, Pappy, Zeke, Ezra and Elton, indulge a predilection for both mountain and standard ballads with fine effect. Elton is a yodeler of no mean dimensions and the four do marvels with "The Last Roundup" and other numbers of similar nature.

The first act introduced by the smartly turned-out Miss Audrey Sieber is the Four Franks, four youngsters whose dancing is A-1, instrumentalism not so hot and sense of travesty enormous. The burlesque love scene between Greta Garbo and John Barrymore in "Grand Hotel" is a masterpiece of roughhouse comedy that one expects neither of the youthful participants to survive.

Others who contribute to the goings-on include Eddie White, monologist and singer, and Don Ruiz and Bonita, assisted by Marion and Bea, two blondes, all dancers of the first rank.

The newsreel and "Rio Rita" overture, conducted by C. Frererick Clark, with Bert Granoff singing the vocal interludes, complete a bill that can be unconditionally recommended.

Loew's Fox

"THE WHITE PARADE." Fox picturization of the novel by Rian James, adapted to the screen by Mr. James and Jesse L. Lasky, jr., featuring Loretta Young and John Boles, with Dorothy Wilson, Muriel Kirkland, Walter Johnson, Frank Conroy and Joyce Comaton. Directed by Irving Cummings. Reviewed Friday morning by Isabel Harraman Manaum.

Following upon the heels of a good year and a half of hospital stories—which ran the gamut of Fay Wray, crisply white uniformed in "Once to Every Woman," through Bebe Daniels, terrifyingly capable and spotlessly starched in "Registered Nurse," on and on until we reached the more sordid side in "Men in White" and the spicier elements of "Night Nurse"—we finally arrive at this latest opus of hospital life, entitled "The White Parade," which is, surprisingly enough, a new side to an old story; clean, inspirational and absorbing.

Here are none of the wild excitements of hospital life—the clanging ambulance bells, the breathless and gory operating-room scenes, the internal intrigues and politic machinations. This is a simpler history of a desire to serve; raw material being made into the smooth, sure moving and efficient women who form the background and backbone of a hospital.

Three Grinding Years.

It begins with this mass of raw material pouring through the hospital doors. Girls from the city and country, from every walk in life. Flat-heeled shoes! No rouge or lipstick. Petticoats—of all things! Three years of strict training. Three years of hard work. Three years of learning to serve. Sometimes you don't make the grade—and then you pretend you're glad to be out of the grind and drudgery—but you aren't really. You want to go on—and on—and on.

Loretta Young plays the role of Jane Arden, and plays it with a dewy sort of youngness and sincerity which will make you very indulgent of the few weak spots and silly shots, such as Nurse Arden quoting the "Night Before Christmas" to a nursery full of new-born babes and turning down a perfectly nice young man with $1,000,000 to continue her nursing career.

You will feel: "Oh, well. She is very young. She'll probably change her mind after the picture is over."

And, of course, Ronald Hall, the Third, will be waiting for her, because he said he would. John Boles, as Ronald Hall, has very little to do, but does that little in a charming John Boles manner.

Dorothy Wilson is Zita, Jane's roommate, who is stalked by tragedy; Muriel Kirkland is Glenda, Jane's friend, and Astrid Allwyn portrays Gertrude Mack, the inevitable trouble-maker. Jane Darwell as Sailor, a supervising nurse, is splendid, and Sara Haden as Miss Harrington, the head of the hospital, is one of the best characterizations we have seen for some time.

A Worthy Tribute.

"The White Parade" is dedicated to Florence Nightingale, founder of modern nursing, and, while much of it may be cinematically idealized and bits of it may be trite, it is a pleasant and worthy tribute.

Jack Sidney's "Samples of 1934," holding forth on the stage of Loew's Fox this week, is billed as the big, little show. Tom, Dick and Harry, slapstick dancing trio in Mr. Sidney's entourage, do some hilarious and light-footed gyrations which received loud applause. The Walker Sisters croon nicely into a microphone; Davey Kraft, Betty Kean and Elsa Greenwell all contribute nimble moments to the terpsichorean art, while Mr. Sidney himself favors the cash customers with a popular tune in a pleasant voice.

Master Timblin Scores.

Charles "Slim" Timblin, that incorrigible and rib-splitting Southern preacher, has nothing new to offer and doesn't need anything new. He always has been and always will be a riot. He is assisted by Val Russell and Sam Ward. Les Reis and Artie Dunn, of radio fame, bring their most popular selections with them, and the Five Elgins juggle Indian clubs and hats in a deft manner.

Maestro Phil Lampkin leads the orchestra through an overture of ballet music from "La Gioconda," featuring the lovely "Dance of the Hours," and, with the addition of a Fox Movietone News, rounds out a generous program.

A New Costellar Film Alliance

Myrna Loy, attractively pictured above at right, who has been devoting her studio time pretty consistently to appearances opposite the suave Mr. William Powell, soon will be seen as teammate of Cary Grant in Paramount's production of "Wings in the Dark," a James Flood directorial effort which, one imagines, has something to do with the aerial art of flying. These two able players will be supported by Hobart Cavanaugh, Roscoe Karns and Dean Jagger. "Wings in the Dark" will be coming along in time.

Columbia

"GAMBLING." Fox picturization of the play by George M. Cohan, starring the author, with Wynne Gibson, Dorothy Burgess, Theodore Newton and Walter Gilbert. Directed by Rowland V. Lee. Reviewed Friday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

Some actors have been playwrights and some playwrights have been actors, but no one has combined the superlative qualities of both professions as has George M. Cohan.

So far as the current work presents George M. Cohan in "Gambling," the picture is eminently successful.

But when that picture is looked at other than for the star and his play, the combination is not so happy, for here Mr. Cohan has been treated with far less than the customary consideration generally accorded stars of such eminence. The photography is not of the best, injudicious cuts are evident and the supporting cast, while adequate, is not of a caliber even approaching that of the star.

Notwithstanding these obvious shortcomings, the Cohan story of a confirmed gambler, who ferrets out the supposed murderer of his adopted daughter, is still the sole property of George M. Cohan, and so long as he plays the sad role of Al Draper, the incidental investiture of "Gambling" is of small consequence.

Occupies Unique Niche.

There may be some question whether Mr. Cohan is "America's premier actor," as the billing states, but there can be no gainsaying that he is a great actor who recognized what he could do best and then proceeded to go and carve out a particular niche for himself in that branch of the theater wherein his talents could best be utilized.

Thus in the current translation of "Gambling," Mr. Cohan delivers a smooth, thoughtful and restrained performance.

Among those in the supporting cast, whose collective work can not hold a candle to the incandescence of Mr. Cohan, are Wynne Gibson, Dorothy Burgess, Theodore Newton, Walter Gilbert, Percy Ames, Cora Witherspoon, Joseph Allen and Harold Healy.

Heading the list of short subjects is Paramount's contribution to sporting thrills, "The Nerve of Some Women," a collection of hair-raising exploits by female daredevils. Charles Chase, with Betty Mack and Del Henderson, is seen in "Something Simple," which is really funny in spots. A release of the Metrotone News rounds out the bill.

Metropolitan

"FLIRTATION WALK." First National picturization of a story by Delmar Daves and Lou Edelman, adapted to the screen by Mr. Daves, with music by Allie Wrubel and Mort Dixon and dances directed by Bobby Connelly, featuring Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler and Pat O'Brien, with Ross Alexander, John Arledge, John Eldredge, "Big Boy" Guinn Williams, Henry O'Neill and John Darrow. Directed by Frank Borzage. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

"Flirtation Walk," First National's engaging recital of romance and adventure in and about the remote outposts of Uncle Sam's military establishment and at the United States Military Academy at West Point, bids fair to rival the extraordinary record of Grace Moore's prodigious success, "One Night of Love."

Entering the second week of its renewed downtown run at the Metropolitan, "Flirtation Walk" manifests no diminution in public interest and enjoyment. There is no reason why it should, for, as was stated in these columns upon the occasion of its initial presentation at the Earle, this strikes your present reporter as being the best film of its kind ever made.

Hawaii to West Point.

Initiating its action in Hawaii, this tuneful romance eventually shifts its locale to West Point and there presents all of the glamor of the daily routine and spectacular special occasions that mark the lives of the aspiring young men who seek to become America's future generals.

By way of adding spice to an already highly seasoned entertainment, a play within a play is offered during the development of the romance that forms the basis of "Flirtation Walk." This involves Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler in pivotal roles and also enlists the gruff contributions of Pat O'Brien and a supporting cast of unusual distinction, led by Ross Alexander.

It is highly appropriate that the foremost auxiliary attraction at the Met. is "Pop Goes Your Heart," a Merrie Melodie cartoon comedy, based on the hit tune from Dick Powell's "Happiness Ahead," in which he played opposite Josephine Hutchinson. The combined Paramount and Universal newsreels complete a bill that is worth anybody's time and attention.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Friday Morning Music Club in Barker Hall. Program of music for viola d'amore and viola by Alix Maruchess, assisted by Mary Howe, virginal and piano, and Flora McGill Keefer, mezzo-contralto.

Timbres rarely heard by modern ears came pleasantly from those seventeenth century instruments, the viola d'amore and the virginal, in the opening group of this program. Gone forever are the days when the delicate tinkle of the virginal had not yet been overpowered by the harpsichord and the hammerklavier, and its tones today inevitably evoke visions of a vanished epoch. As for the viola d'amore with its amber-colored tones, it has been unjustly relegated to the category of antiques.

Delightful and quaint were the items the musicians offered from the past: an andante and minuet by Milandre, the anonymous dancing air, "La Romanesca;" Gretry's "Serenade de l'amant jaloux," a pastorale and polonaise by Rust, and a tambourin by Gossec. Played with skill and sympathy, they were thoroughly enjoyed by the audience. Refreshing, too, was the Handel sonata in C as disclosed in the terms of viola and virginal.

Mrs. Keefer sang expressively to the accompaniment of the bowed instruments, Scarlatti's appealing "Poura Pellagrina" and four lovely songs in medieval mode by the late Gustav Holst.

Modern compositions for viola and piano formed the closing group: Ernest Bloch's "Supplication," a tango by Irene Poldovski, "Lullaby of the Burro," by Mildred Cooper, and "Capitan Fracassa," by Mario Castelnuovo-Tedesco.

Other officers who will be installed at this time are Leonard M. Mauck, adviser; J. D. Cammer, banker; J. W. Cammer, secretary; Charles J. Owens, watchman; R. R. Whitacre, escort; the Rev. S. J. Goode, chaplain; Maj. James Mars, assistant chaplain, and O. L. Tevalt, trustee.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

By Morgan Baker.

COOPERATION between Federal organizations with employe groups and credit unions was the keynote of the December session of the Educational Forum of the District Federation of Federal Employes Unions.

BAKER.

Dr. Frederic C. Howe, Consumers' Counsel, AAA, as chief speaker, discussed cooperation in many fields of activity, looking toward a wide development of the movement. Credit unions, particularly in the Federal departments here, as cooperative lending agencies, were discussed by the varied audience in the NFFE sponsored session.

Dr. Howe declared a credit union is "a thing I'll be a member of to promote democracy."

"No credit in the world is comparable to that Government employes can offer," he continued.

Dr. Howe is directing the recently organized credit union at Agriculture, which is one of 19 credit unions in the service here, either organized by and for, or sponsored by the National Federation of Federal Employes, pioneer in that field in the Government.

Jerome Eldridge, director, District of Columbia Credit Union League, reports that plans are under way for a national league.

The speakers were introduced by Luther C. Steward, N. F. F. E. president.

Employes Boost Toy Fund.

Encouraged by the enthusiastic response last Saturday, the Diary again today offers guest tickets to Loew's Fox, Loew's Palace or Loew's Columbia theaters to Government employes who contribute five toys or $1 in cash to The Post Toy Fund.

Federal employe contributors should come to room 300, The Washington Post Building. The offer of the Loew's theaters tickets is good only today, between noon and 2:30 p. m. Do your part to help Washington's needy children pass a merry Christmas!

AAA Dance Tonight.

AAA employes will frolic tonight at a dance and entertainment at the Willard Hotel as guests of the AAA Lodge, No. 116, American Federation of Government Employes. Rudolph Blick (C), chairman of the entertainment committee, promises an exceptional program. Among the leaders in arranging the affair is Joseph Landow (C), lodge secretary.

Definite proof that the smaller European elm bark beetle is a carrier of Dutch elm disease has been obtained by entomologists in the Department of Agriculture, according to William Middleton, Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine. Mr. Middleton and his coworkers have proved that the beetles from infected elms are contaminated with the fungus of the disease and transmit it when feeding in the crotches of healthy trees.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF (F), (P) or (C) follows your name, call in person on the Federal Diary editor. You will receive tickets to (F) Loew's Fox (stage, Jack Sidney Samples and other acts; screen, John Boles and Loretta Young in "The White Parade"); or to (P) Loew's Palace (Joe Penner and other stars in the All-America musical comedy, "College Rhythm"); or to (C) Loew's Columbia (George M. Cohan in "Gambling").

MISS VIRGINIA TRUE, of Interior Department, has a leading role in "Alison's correct House," which the Columbia Players will present at Pierce Hall next Wednesday and Thursday nights.

Diary office hours are daily, except Sunday, 12 noon to 1 p. m. and from 4:30 to 6 p. m.; Saturday, 12 noon to 2:30 p. m.

In Memorium.

To Inspector Samuel Cowley, Special Agent Herman Hollis, Department of Justice.

Now pillowed in the all surviving soil
In quiet peace two Federal servants rest
While with bowed heads kind kinsmen turn from toil
To smooth the mantle o'er each silent breast.
They knew no word save that of Duty's call
And to each task brought fearlessly their best—
No soldier e'er more truly gave his all—
No nation e'er could be more richly blessed
Than one possessed of loyal sons like these
Who gave their lives in thwarting crime's cruel ways
But in so doing fell like towering trees
Whose fire-lit branches set the woods ablaze—
Well might we pause and humble homage pay
In memory of these two who passed away.

BY A FEDERAL CO-WORKER.

An illustrated lecture on "Modern Hydrographic Surveying" was given recently by Dr. Herbert Grove Dorsey, principal engineer of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, before the Lecture Club of Wells College.

AFTER searching the deserts and foothills of Russian Turkestan and most of Turkey for plants to control soil erosion, Harvey L. Westover and Charles R. Enlow, plant explorers of the Department of Agriculture, have returned after seven months with nearly 1,800 lots of seed.

Among these is seed of a desert grass that may be uprooted by the wind but grabs hold when it lands. Other surprising plants of pioneer sturdiness are in the list. Most of the seed collections represent grasses or legumes that form a thick turf close to the ground, enabling them to bind the soil and hold it against the ravages of wind and rain. Seeds from a few trees also were brought back.

An exhibition of photographs by Ruth Kilbourne, (F), of San Diego, Calif., will be held the remainder of this month in the Arts and Industries Building, Smithsonian Institution, the section of photography, National Museum, announces.

In the old days, when knowledge of the healing arts was very vague, it was the practice to treat the sword rather than the wound. In cases where the sword was not available they sometimes put the medicine on the bloody clothes. In either case the wound had to take care of itself.

People believed in the "sympathetic" treatment of wounds. Unlike many seventeenth century medical treatments, this form of treatment certainly did no harm, hence wounded persons who recovered in spite of their wounds were quick to proclaim the advantages of sympathetic treatment. At least it did not hurt as much as when the salve or ointment was actually put on the open wound.

It is pointed out by Dr. Howard W. Haggard in his "The Lame, The Halt and the Blind" that reference is made to this manner of caring for the wounded in Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel" where the wound of William of Deloraine was treated by Lady Margaret. She "bade the wound be clean and then took the broken lance that caused it:

"And washed from it the clotted gore,
And salved the splinter o'er and o'er."

One of the strangest stamps in any collector's possession is the Death Stamp of Siberia. The stamp bears the likenesses of Black George and King Peter in profile. Turn it upside down and you can see the death mask of King Alexander. Peter was placed on the throne by the same conspirators who murdered Alexander in 1903.

'Bamans Favored to Trim District Stars Today

Sensational Contest in Prospect

Garner Will Snap Ball to Bankhead at Start of Shrine Contest.

FORMER heroes of Alabama's Rose Bowl teams, banded now as the Alabama All-Stars, have been established as the favorites at odds ranging from 8 to 5 to 2 to 1 to defeat the District All-Stars today at Griffith Stadium.

Boasting three bona-fide All-Americans of former seasons in their back field in the persons of John (Hurry) Cain, Pooley Hubert and Tony Holm, the Alabamans will be meeting the pick of District college players of recent seasons. It will be the first annual All-Star game under the sponsorship of the Almas Temple Shrine.

Former Rivals on Team.

Former rivals of undergraduate days in Washington colleges will find themselves teaming in the District All-Star back field when Johnny Fenlon and Tom Whelan take the field. Coach Jim Pixlee, of George Washington, who is tutoring the District team, has flanked Fenlon and Whelan with Jan Jankowski, former Catholic U. back field star, and a grist of former G. W. back field aces.

Fenlon and Whelan constitute the District team's greatest threat to the Alabamans. Their memorable duels before the George Washington-Catholic U. series was abandoned was a bright feature of local college football with individual honors even, although Whelan led his Cardinal mates to victory.

Wide-Open Game Seen.

The prospect of a sensational, wide-open football game sprinkled with passes of varied types has resulted in the largest advance sale to mark a football game here this season. Bleacher seats will be placed on sale at Griffith Stadium at noon for 55 cents.

Washington fans will see in action again the sensational "Hurry" Cain, brilliant passing-running-kicking-blocking back who led the Crimson Tide to its memorable victory over George Washington on the same field two years ago. Cain, now assistant coach at Alabama, is hailed as the Crimson Tide's greatest star since Hubert.

G. W. Men in Line.

Fenlon will be asked to match the punting of three super kickers on the Alabama squad. The versatile "Hurry" Cain, who boots with either foot as well as passes with either hand, is one of the outstanding punters produced at Tuscaloosa, but "Flash" Suther and Hillman Holley are rated almost his equal.

The 50-piece Almas Temple Band will disport on the field, before the game and between the halves. A preliminary game starting at 1:15 p. m. will see two midget teams on the field.

High Tension Captures Bay Meadows Feature

Irish, Trojans Meet Today On Coast

Notre Dame Is Favored; Tennessee Will Play Louisiana State.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7 (U.P.).—National football interest centers on two widely separated and widely different games this weekend when the final contests of the regular season will be played.

On the far coast tomorrow Notre Dame plays Southern California in one of the traditional intersectional contests. In New York on Sunday the Giants play Chicago's Bears in the national professional championship battle.

There are many other contests of sectional and local interest, but few are of abiding interest from a national viewpoint. The extreme East, for the first time since September, has no college football whatsoever.

Tennessee Plays L. S. U.

Tennessee meets Huey Long by proxy, the same being Louisiana State. The game is set at Knoxville and is the Old South's best game of the day. Texas has two intersectional thrillers—Texas Aggies vs. Michigan State at San Antonio, and Texas Christian vs. Santa Clara at Fort Worth.

Time was when Notre Dame-U. S. C. was one of the most significant games of each year, but there is little punch in the 1934 renewal.

Melancholy Season.

Notre Dame's melancholy season has included losses to Pitt, Navy and Texas. The U. S. C. season has been little short of distastrous. Of ten games played by Southern California, only four brought victories. There were five defeats and one tie. Only one major victory (Oregon) was recorded.

So it's a lack luster meeting this year and Notre Dame, which came on fast in its last two starts, is expected to win and by a huge score. A U. S. C. victory would be an upset equaled only by Yale's "ironmen" triumph over proud Princeton.

Portsmouth Declines, Lets Miami Accept Bid

Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 7 (AP).—Miami High School's football team, unbeaten by a Florida opponent since 1929, will play the undefeated Andrew Jackson Tigers, champions of the "Big Ten" State High School Conference in a charity game here New Year's Day.

Dog Racing at Braves' Field Flayed by Frick

NEW YORK, Dec. 7 (AP).—The question of a baseball magnate's right to mix dog racing, and its attendant gambling system, with baseball in the same major league ball park brought a cocktail of potential headaches today to the new National League president, Ford C. Frick, and the statement from him that such an alliance was "absolutely preposterous."

Frick, former sports writer who formally succeeds retiring John A. Heydler in time to take charge of the annual National League meetings here next Tuesday and Wednesday, vigorously attacked the first major problem facing his administration as soon as the Boston Braves applied to the Massachusetts Racing Commission today for a license to operate a dog track this summer at Braves Field.

Calls It Preposterous.

"I can not speak for the board of directors, of course" said Frick. "But such an alliance is absolutely preposterous and entirely at variance with the principles for which baseball has battled so strenuously. The sentiments I have heard expressed on all sides lead me to believe that the matter will be settled very definitely at the annual meetings.

"Organized baseball has outlawed players for gambling. It has waged a ceaseless campaign to wipe out even the slightest signs of gambling in ball parks. Not only is it inconsistent, but it is ridiculous to conceive that baseball now could permit a sport founded on gambling to move into the same premises with it."

Brought Into Open.

Frick's ringing statement of policy, inaugurating his new regime, brought into the open a situation that has stirred up nothing but opinion and comment supporting his stand since Judge Emil Fuchs and Charles F. Adams, owners of the Braves, conceived of the idea of turning the Boston ball park into a dog track during the coming summer evenings.

Word that a license would be applied for as soon as the racing commission was established in Massachusetts, where betting on horse and dog races were recently made legal, has filtered through baseball channels. It was reported that Kenesaw M. Landis, baseball's high commissioner, was so indignant at the idea that he threatened to resign unless club owners joined him immediately in snuffing out the plan.

Unanimous Decision.

Decision to support Landis and Frick unanimously was quickly reached, the Associated Press learned on high authority today. Word reached Boston unofficially, and the formal attitude of the rest of baseball will be presented the Braves' officials at next week's meetings.

"The Braves have done none too well financially of late," another official source revealed today, "and every one in the game would like to see Judge Fuchs avail himself of anything that would increase the income. But dog racing and baseball don't mix and we've got to take that stand now and stick to it, or abandon principles we've fought for relentlessly.

"How could you chase gamblers out of a ball park in the afternoon and invite them in to bet on your dog races at night?"

Eleanor Holm's Amateurism Under Fire

MIAMA, Fla., Dec. 7 (AP).—Contributing further to the prospects of a stormy session on the floor of the forty-sixth national convention of the Amateur Union, tomorrow and Sunday, it developed in committee meetings today that the amateur status of Eleanor Holm Jarrett, Olympic swimming star, is under fire and probably will lead to sharp controversy among the assembled delegates.

It promises to cause more debate than the case of any amateur athletic figure since Charles W. Paddock, the one-time "California comet," was an A. A. U. storm center.

The charges against Mrs. Jarrett, made by the Central Association of Chicago, are based on the use of her picture and personal indorsement in the advertisement of a swimming suit.

Olympic Fight Looms.

Convention delegates meanwhile wrestled with a variety of athletic problems, including the awards of 1935 championship events, examination of a long list of track and swimming records, the possibility

Cotton Against Change Just to Let Him Play

Brussels, Dec. 7 (AP).—Although Henry Cotton, holder of the British open golf championship, would be happy to play for Great Britain against the United States in the Ryder Cup matches next summer he does not feel the rules of the competition should be changed just to permit him to play.

He is barred under the rules as now written because of his residence in Belgium. He is professional at a club here.

Hunt Club Lays Plans to Meet Fire Rules

By Bill McCormick.

A PROMINENT architect who is interested in sports was formulating plans for modernizing and enlarging the Riding and Hunt Club yesterday even while the District Commissioners were demanding strict observance of all fire regulations at the Twenty-second street boxing arena and the Hunt Club promoters were preparing to comply with their demands.

Henri DiSibour, an architect who also is an official Boxing Commission fight judge and is interested in other sports, is working on plans to increase the capacity of the Hunt Club to almost double its present size. His plans call for the expansion of the club on the west and south sides. The present bowl-like seating arrangements would be retained.

DiSibour would make no statement yesterday as to whether it was his intention to form a company to purchase the Hunt Club, which is in financial difficulties or whether he would cooperate with the present owners. He intimated that the project would be financed by private parties rather than by a sale of securities.

Immediate Action.

The promoters at the Hunt Club promised immediate action to remedy any existing objectionable conditions pointed out by the District Commissioners in calling for strict observance of fire regulations.

The District Commissioners called for strict observance of all fire regulations after hearing reports from the building inspector that the rid-

Freezing Winds Blow, Alabama Has Off Day

University, Ala., Dec. 7 (AP).—Alabama's Crimson Tide welcomed an off day today as freezing winds whipped across the university campus, but tomorrow they will go through the week's third signal practice preparatory to starting "rough work" Monday for the Rose Bowl game.

Paul Burnum, freshman coach, will direct tomorrow's practice session, which is slated to stress passing plays. Other coaches will be out of town over the week-end.

Cronin Hints At Deal for Myer

Praises Nats' Infielder; Another Buying Spell by Yawkey Looms.

BOSTON, Dec. 7 (AP).—The most expensive personage in baseball, Joseph Edward Cronin, new player-manager of the free-handed Boston Red Sox, sounded the warning that Owner Tom Yawkey was about to set out on another spending spree today when he was formally inducted into office.

It was Joey's first visit to Fenway Park, his new workshop, since Yawkey dismissed "Bucky" Harris and gave Cronin's kin-in-law, Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Nationals, a sum reported everywhere from $150,000 to $250,000, with Shortstop Lyn Lary to boot, for his services.

Needs Infielder, Pitcher.

As a proper setting for such a costly importation, General Manager Eddie Collins gave Joe a coming-out party that took the form of a buffet luncheon for his new manager and the baseball writers.

Cronin refused to open up his heart to his new acquaintances, but he did say that he thought the club needed another right-hand pitcher and a second baseman.

But that casual remark was probably much more significant than Joe realized. If he does not know it now, he will soon learn, probably during next week's major league meeting in New York, that Owner Yawkey takes keen delight in spending fortunes to satisfy the slightest whims of his managers.

Praises Buddy Myer.

The fact that Cronin wants a new righthander and a second baseman is reason enough to send Yawkey and Collins out on a shopping tour that will take the breaths away from the other American League magnates attending the sessions. Yawkey has invested more than $3,000,000 in the Sox to date and there is plenty more where that came from.

Most writers, who have been hearing rumors since the world series, believed that the Red Sox and St. Louis Browns have come to an understanding about Ossie Melillo and Irving Burns. If they have Cronin may hurl a wrench into that deal for he regards Buddy Myer, his Washington teammate, as an ideal second baseman for the 1935 Sox.

"You must remember," Joe admonished the writers, "that defensive strength in the infield is not the only thing to be taken into consideration. There must also be offensive power, and don't forget that Myer was one of the outstanding batters in the league last season."

Matman Paroled After Arena Fight

Steele, Numa and Marvin Haled in St. Louis.

St. Louis, Dec. 7 (AP).—Wrestlers Ray Steele and Leo Numa were placed under special parole today in city court after a hearing on peace disturbance charges.

The charges were the outgrowth of a disturbance following a bout between Steele and Numa at the arena last night. Numa was declared the victor through dsiqualification of Steele.

The referee, Charles Rentrop, of Memphis, Tenn., and Tommy Marvin, a wrestler, one of Steele's seconds, also were in court and likewise received special paroles.

When Rentrop disqualified Steele, giving the bout to Numa, Marvin punched Rentrop, whereupon police stopped the show and arrested the wrestlers, the referee and Marvin on peace disturbance charges.

Haley Captains Harvard.

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 7 (AP).—Bob Haley, 22, of Winthrop, Mass., today was elected captain of the Harvard football team for the 1935 season. Haley, a junior, was quarter back of the Harvard team this year. He prepared at Worcester Academy.

Mr. Gallico Gets Every Sport Running Nicely—Takes a Rest

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Things are in pretty good shape in sports in this country, thanks to my fearless pen and unswerving devotion to my public, and I guess a guy could go away for a little while and have himself a vacation without any of the parties he is leaving here getting themselves into trouble.

The only one I am a little worried about is Gen. Phelan, the chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission. The general does HANG so on my advice and counsel. I mean, what WILL he do right after he has perpetrated some new edict, if he opens the paper and doesn't find my approval in it? The general is very unhappy when I do not approve of him. I must ask my colleague, Dr. Jack Miley, who probably will be looking after the boxing end of things in this space in my absence, to see that the general does not get too lonesome.

Fixed Up Football.

Football I have fixed up in fine shape, having sent Alabama to the Rose Bowl and arranged for a sell out at the Polo Grounds Sunday when the Chicago Bears play the New York Giants for the professional championship. I would have preferred sending Colgate or Pittsburgh or Columbia out to Pasadena, but the pressure of my Southern constituents was so great that I gave in and agreed to send Alabama. I was delighted at that to be able to do this for my friend Frank Thomas, the Alabama coach.

I would like to see that football game Sunday. I would like to see that swell fight card that my friend, John Kilpatrick, has arranged for next Friday in the Garden. But, after all, I know the results beforehand. The Giants will create a sensation by beating the Chicago Bears for the championship. Sammy Fuller will knock out Eddie Cool and Shuco will trounce John Henry Lewis. That little Korean, Jo Tei Ken, I am afraid, will lick one of our former Golden Glovers, Dick Librandi, but Len Del Genio will square things for the Golden Mittens by licking Tony Falso in a very rough brawl. That's one of the blessings of being a wizard, a seer and a prophet. If Nation's "Tennis Bums" Target For Ruling of Net Group Today

By Jack Cuddy.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7 (U.P.).—Taps will be blown for American "tennis bums" tomorrow at the quarterly meeting of the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association's executive committee.

The committee will recommend as amendment to the association's code preventing the flannel-pantied brigade henceforth from living off the game more than two months each year. Likewise the buxom gals in shorts.

Young racqueteers who have been traveling swelelegantly about the country, eating filet mignon and what not at the various Northern tennis clubs in summer, and at southern California, Bermuda and Jamaica clubs in winter, will be forced to live off papa and mama for ten months annually, or, above all things, to go to work. A bitter blow indeed.

Would Combine Tourneys.

This recommendation and another which the committee will adopt—advocating combination of the men's and women's national singles championships at Forest Hills into one big tourney each year like Wimbledon, England—are virtually certain to be okayed at the association's annual general meeting in Cincinnati on February 9. They are two of the most important recommendations American tennis ever knew.

Walter Merrill Hall, president of the U. S. L. T. A., explained today that this business of cracking down on the tennis "bums" did not originate in the United States. Hall did the Major's notes

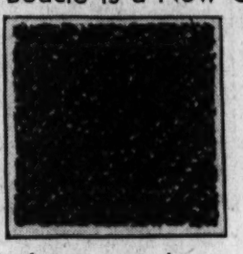
The Major Explains The Xmas Necktie

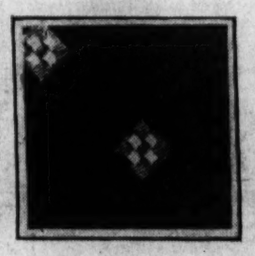
Boucle Is a New Chinchilla Texture



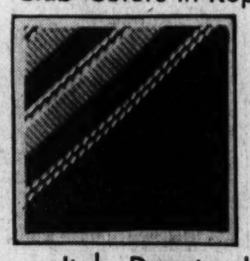
The trend toward rough weaves in suitings, makes this tie a favorite, both for its tweedy brightness of nubbed color and the hard knot surface that blends admirably with outdoor fabrics. University men go for it in a big way. $1.00

Charvet Makes a Gentleman's Tie

The famous Parisian haberdasher created a tie fabric of flat, corded texture, whose luxury of "hand" and modulated colorings earned it high ranking in the scarf world. He called it "Regence" because it was fit for royalty, but well dressed men call it by the name of the maker, "Charvet." $1.00



Club Colors in Reps and Mogadors

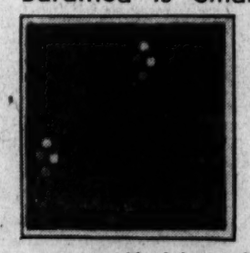


This corded fabric has a pristine brilliance and wearing quality seldom found in others. It lends itself admirably to those unusual stripings denoting club or regiment color insignas. Equally good with tweeds or lounge suits. $1.00

Italy Donates Hand Loomed Grenadines

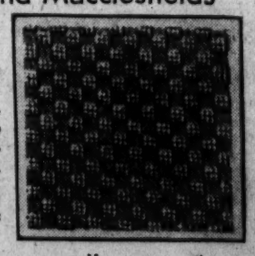
This is the most open weave of all neckwear, and probably the most gauze-like fabric. Its colorings are as harmonious as Whistler's nocturnes. For years these have been hand-loomed in Italy. It is my own favorite tie. $2.50

Barathea Is Smartly Conservative



The rich grounds of this broken twill fabric, smartly studded with jacquarded figures is ranking choice with sophisticated dressers. Particularly smart with starched white collars, and suitable for all but sports wear. $1.00

Spitalfields and Macclesfields From Britain



The former is an all over mosaic design (illustrated) and the latter a rough or even weave which is a favorite texture for club colors. Quite in high fashion this season. $1.50

Water Effect Moire Silks . . . $1.00
Jacquarded Satin Ties $1.50
Persian Paisley Patterns $1.00

Hair Trigger Triumphs by Three Lengths in Feature Event at Charles Town

Goody Goody Pays $49 in Second

Weir and Atkins Split Riding Honors With 2 Winners Each.

By Walter Haight.
(Post Staff Writer).

CHARLES TOWN Race Track, Dec. 7.—Favorite players failed to cash a win bet at this mountain race track today as longshots and near longshots dominated the racing for the second day of the meeting. The high spots of the day from a financial angle were the $49 and $35.20 mutuels supplied by Goody Goody and Brilliant Girl, respectively. These prices made the choice betters envious and they waited in vain for a "break" all afternoon.

However, the racing was generally good, the weather snappy, the crowd small but enthusiastic and the betting fairly heavy. The track, slow yesterday, had dried out and the horses were near track records on several occasions.

Divide Riding Honors.

Fritz Weir and Georgie Atkins divided the riding honors, each having two victories on the seven-race program. Weir won the feature event, the fourth on the card, with Hair Trigger, the property of S. W. Menaguale. He put up a whale of a ride on a fit horse to gallop home three lengths ahead of Jilted, which barely held the place safe from Mere Wave. The last named was a 17-1 shot.

Mere Wave broke in front as the 7-furlong dash began and Weir sent Hair Trigger up to give battle. On the backstretch, Hair Trigger finally shook off his rival and ran the rest of the route on top. Weir played safe and rode hard all the way.

Runaway In Opener.

Ethan Allen made a runaway of the first race, a 5-furlong dash. Jockey Sammy Palumbo hustled him into the lead and he was never headed, opening up a margin of four lengths at one stage. Miss Cyllene took the place from Ardor in easy fashion. A bad start marred the race with the heavily-played High Chair having no chance under the conditions. Ethan Allan paid $6 to win and $7 to place.

To the tune of a $49 mutuel, Goody Goody, a daughter of Mars and Good as Gold, sprinted home two lengths in front of Apathy in the second race. Holster was third in the field of eight. Canobie Lake opened a lead of seven lengths on the back stretch, but folded like a book at the last turn. In the battle to the wire Goody Goody pulled away from Apathy.

Outfinishes Spero.

Brilliant Girl, with little to recommend her in the past-performance sheets, gave the longshot players another chance to cheer. She made the mutuel boys hang up a $35.20 pay-off. Ridden by A. Tryon, the daughter of Brilliant was whipped into a lead and outfinished Spero. Major Accident ran a good race to be third.

Well-played horses accounted for the last three races, but the favorites failed. Phil R., under Atkins' handling, took the fifth. Weir and Accolade took the sixth, while old Kingbird awoke to win the finale.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HAIR TRIGGER, $7.40, $5.60, $3.80; JILTED, $7.40, $5.00; MERE WAVE, $9.40.

HAIR TRIGGER followed the early pace under steady restraint, moved into command when called upon, and drew away, winning with speed in reserve. JILTED responded to pressure when called upon, moved up steadily, but could not menace the winner. MERE WAVE was rushed into command rounding the first turn, saved ground thereafter, but faltered in stretch run. THREE GRAND closed some ground under pressure. TOPSIE H. raced evenly. JUSTA TEACHER, on the outside going to first turn, dropped out of contention rounding the back stretch.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:40½. Off at once. Winner, G. Atkins' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PHIL R., $11.00, $3.20, $3.00; GOLDEN PLAY, $2.80, $2.60; GRACIAS, $5.20.

PHIL R. outran his field from the start, was rated along steadily, and drew away in the stretch and held speed in reserve. GOLDEN PLAY, well up and on the outside of leaders, responded to pressure in stretch, but hung at the finish. GRACIAS, in nearest pursuit of the early pace, saved ground and held on well. ASTUTE ran in spots. TRENTONIAN was outrun. BAY WRACK had no speed and was outrun.

SIXTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:06. Off at 4:09. Winner, D. Christmas' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ACCOLADE, $9.00, $5.00, $4.00; BRIZETTE, $17.40, $11.80; QUICK, $4.00.

ACCOLADE a forward contender throughout, moved into command when called upon and drew away with speed in reserve. BRIZETTE was placed under pressure on the back stretch and finished strongly. QUICK showed early speed and had no mishaps. BARCELONA PETE closed ground from a bad beginning. WHIRRY raced evenly all the way. REIGH ROSE was caught in close quarters going to first turn and eased back. She could not improve her position thereafter. HARD PLAY raced in spots.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:34. Off at 4:34½. Winner, Mrs. A. M. Hall's b. g. (5), by Star Hawk—Pietra. Trained by B. F. Baker. Value to winner, $225; second, $50; third, $25. Time, 0:25, 0:50 3-5, 1:17 1-5, 1:43 1-5, 1:58.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KING BIRD, $10.00, $7.00, $3.40; ROYAL LASSIE, $7.20, $4.80; GEORGE DE MAR, $6.80.

KING BIRD followed the pace under steady restraint, responded when called upon, moved up fast rounding the far turn, disposed of GEORGE DE MAR, and drew away. ROYAL LASSIE, in close quarters going to first turn, improved her position when clear and finished fast. GEORGE DE MAR showed early speed and had no mishaps. MAKE BELIEVE closed some ground slowly under urging. MY BETTY and FLUTTERING had no mishaps.

Trombone, 1-2, Victorious By Nose

Wins Fair Grounds Race; Favorites Score After 10 Losses in Row.

FAIR GROUNDS, New Orleans, Dec. 7 (AP).—Form players, who had seen ten straight favorites beaten at the Fair Grounds, staged a big comeback this afternoon, among their many successes being D. Grant's Trombone, the 1-to-2 choice in the West End Handicap, 1-mile feature of the program. Carrying 116 pounds and well ridden by Jockey C. Rollins, Trombone fought it out head and head with A. B. Letellier's Bibbie's Choice through the last 3 furlongs and outgamed Bibbie's Choice in the final strides to win by a nose.

Mrs. J. Chesney's Incandescent was third, finishing strong to nip Precursor on the wire.

Two-Horse Race.

Trombone and Bibbie's Choice made a two-horse race out of it almost from the start. The favorite was on the inside and Rollins kept him there, but did not make the mistake of using him up. Entering the stretch, Bibbie's Choice moved up on even terms and G. Fowler, on Bibbie's Choice, and Rollins staged a riding duel which thrilled the largest week-day crowd of the meeting.

Trombone was dead game and won on the nod.

The handicap was the best week-day program of the meeting. A return of sunshine found the track responding astonishingly and it was fast for the latter half of the card.

Londos Meets Christy Here Next Week

JIM LONDOS, the gorgeous Greek who officially is heavyweight wrestling champion of the world and unofficially No. 1 resuscitator of waning wrestling, will return to the wars here against Vic Christy, of California, at the Auditorium on December 12.

Promoter Joe Turner originally had planned to pit Golden Jim against Titanic Tor Johansen, the 310-pound Gibraltar of the mat, but Christy's performance in winning from Rudy Dusek last Wednesday was so pleasing that he was assigned the role.

Christy is one of the few of his calling who boasts a fall over the great Greek. His artistry against Dusek was masterful. Suddenly abandoning the role of patient suffering, he turned on Rude Rudy with a tremendous burst of pugnacity.

Out of the ring and up the aisles he pursued Dusek as the crowd screamed in ecstasy. Back into the ring they clambered for more excitement, with Vic finally being awarded the first fall on a foul when Dusek sank his knee into his abdomen. The second fall was short and sweet, going to Christy in three minutes.

The usual supporting features will be announced later.

Park View Goes To Soccer Final

Defeats Fillmore by 3 to 1 on McMillan Field.

Park View, present city champions of the municipal playground department soccer competition for elementary schools, yesterday again qualified for the city finals by defeating Fillmore, 3-1, thereby winning the western section title. The game was played at McMillan playground.

Fillmore was a little stage-struck as the game began and lost an early goal, but soon recovered and tied the score, which remained deadlocked until the interval.

From the kick-off upon resumption, Park View pressed and Henkin put his side ahead with a hard shot from 6 yards, Lawrence getting another soon afterwards.

Hamilton, Navy Coach, Here, Calls Borries Greatest of All Modern Backs

By John R. Vosburgh.

THE greatness of Fred (Buzz) Borries, Navy's football hero, is not in the least exaggerated. Mr. Borries' severest critic and closest observer, Coach Tom Hamilton of the Naval Academy, will tell you so. In fact, Coach Hamilton will tell you that the famous Buzzer is absolutely "uncanny."

Borries, the Middie mentor said last night as guest speaker at the St. Albans' School football banquet, is the greatest back he has ever seen. Spoken by Borries' own coach, this declaration might be interpreted as a bit of affectionate paternalism were it not for the positive frankness with which the Navy coach says everything, combined with a personal football background which qualifies him to know whereof he speaks.

Played Against Stars.

Hamilton played against the great Red Cagle. He played against the great Four Horsemen of Notre Dame, Layden, Miller, Stuhldreher and Crowley. He played against Harry Wilson, another of the greatest Army backs of all time. Hamilton has either played against or seen virtually every great back to trod a gridiron for the past decade or more.

And he still picks Borries above them all.

Hamilton was unbale to restrain a burst of enthusiasm when the evening's topic turned to Borries.

"I've never seen anyone like him," he said. "The more I saw him play, the more uncanny his playing seemed to me."

"Do you think he's as good as Cagle or Wilson or Corrideo?" he was asked.

"Better Than Any."

"He's better than any of them," Hamilton shot back. "What you see him do from the stands out there on the field is only a part of it. He's not merely a great individual star. He's a great team player. His being in the game is an inspiration to the team."

The big, broad-shouldered coach, who looks a lot like Jack Dempsey and wears a boxer's hair-cut, disclosed that the field at the Army-Navy game was not as bad as it actually appeared.

"Right under the surface of Franklni Field," Hamilton said, "there's a har terrain which our long, storm-weather cleats easily reached. It was pretty mucky on top, but the field was not as slow as it looked."

Hunt Club Plans To Change Arena

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, who generally is accepted as spokesman for the interests promoting boxing at the Hunt Club, stated that he had no intimation that conditions were not satisfactory and that immediate steps would be taken to conform to all regulations.

Show Next Monday.

"We have a show booked for next Monday night," Ahearn said. "That show, we understand, will be allowed to go through without changing the arena. Immediately after that show, we will start renovating in every respect demanded by the building inspector and have been assured that we will be allowed to hold the card of December 17, which already has been authorized by the Boxing Commission."

Eddie Burl and Pete DeGrasse, featherweights, are booked in the main event for next Monday. Early yesterday, before the action of the District Commissioners had been made known, Steve Dudas, New York heavyweight sensation, had definitely been signed to meet Buck Everett in the main event scheduled for December 17.

Fire Doors Ordered.

Among the changes that must be made before the site will be approved for public assemblage is the erection of self-closing fire doors on the ramps leading from stables in the basement to the main floor on which boxing is held.

Additional exits also must be erected on the east and west sides of the balcony, if it is to continue to be used. Oils and paints stored in the basement have been ordered removed from the building or stored in fireproof compartments and all seats have been ordered fastened together

Capt. Hugh P. Oram, director of Inspection, told The Post yesterday that next Monday's show would not be interfered with, but that definite progress must be made toward conforming with fire regulations before December 17.

Will Be Sanctioned.

"If the Hunt Club has made definite progress toward conforming to regulations next week, and satisfied us that all regulations will be complied with as speedily as possible, the building will be sanctioned to hold the show of December 17, as planned," Oram said.

Capt. Oram stated further that in the future it would be necessary for a seating plan to be approved and the club inspected before each projected fight show.

Johnnies Trim Mt. Rainier, 35 to 21

Swagart Leader in Attack; Scott, of Invaders, Gets 15 Points.

ST. JOHN'S opened the local prep school basket ball season yesterday by toppling Mount Rainier High, 35-to-21, on the St. John's court. The Johnnies used only five men throughout; each of them scored at least 5 points.

Playing cautiously at the start, St. John's had only a 1-point lead as the first period ended with the score 3 to 2. The teams opened up in the second quarter, however, and the Johnnies held a 15-to-9 lead at the half.

Swagart Gets 12 Points.

Johnnie Swagart, sharp-shooting forward, tallied a dozen points, including 5 baskets, to lead the winners' attack, but scoring honors for the day went to Tilman Scott, Mount Rainier guard, who sank 7 goals from the floor and a free shot for 15 points.

Simone, the fast-stepping back on the football field, netted 8 points, and Regis, McHugh and Counselman, 5 each.

Fuchs Would Transfer Site of Braves' Games

Boston, Dec. 7 (AP).—Judge Emil Fuchs, president of the Boston Braves, today met league criticism of his plans to install a dog racing track in Braves' Field with a plan to abandon the park as a baseball site and move the Braves' home games to Fenway Park, home of the Red Sox.

Among the Hunters . . .

By M. W. Meier.

S. GROOME EARECKSON, of Clarendon, enjoyed his first quail shoot of the season yesterday, although, in our humble estimation, he owns one of the finest shooting dogs in America.

Too busy to go previously, he hunted in the vicinity of Warrenton, and his shooting companion was Jack Charles, who also owns some worthwhile dogs.

They reported a rather slim bag, but, knowing both gentlemen as we do, we know they left some "seed" stock.

The Irish Setter.

The Duke of Rookwood, Earecksson's shooting dog, is one of the finest Irish setters we have encountered in 41 States. He has some field faults, but they are chiefly the ones of immaturity for he is but two years old. Irish setters rarely develop until they are three or four. They develop slower, but live longer than any other breed. Few owners know this, apparently, for they rave at them for hard-headedness and temperament ere they have acquired a coat.

Due to bench show influence, the Irishman has badly deteriorated the last few decades. Originally a hard-going field dog that asked favors of no one, it is hard to find a good specimen today.

Outstanding Specimen.

The Duke is one of them, however, and although no judge of our acquaintance would ever hand him the "blue" in close competition, we regard him as an outstanding specimen of his breed. He is big, rough-coated and huge-boned. His head is squarish and far from what the show judges demand.

But he has a heart of gold and in the field he leaves nothing to be desired. If there are birds ahead, he finds them and he doesn't stop to think about fences, briars or other obstacles.

Other breeds of bird dog are trained to do the same thing but each has his own way about doing the task demanded.

Cold Snap Helpful.

Now that cold weather seems around the corner, duck shooters are hopeful that the long-anticipated flocks will start coming down.

We do not wish to be pessimistic but local nimrods might just as well adjust themselves to the fact that ducks will be scarce this season and every other season thereafter—until we bring them back through more protection and greater consideration of their rights for places to breed—unmolested by useless agricultural projects and laws that do not fully protect.

In other ways, the cold weather is promising more sport for those who follow the hounds. The coon, oppossum and rabbit hunter is just now coming into his own.

Quail shooters also are rejoicing that the long spell of rain has seemingly given way to the sort of days that make one's blood tingle as they tramp over the hills and fields behind their dogs.

Playing Safe With Guns.

Several old-time shooters have reproved us for our recent suggestion that the only safe way to carry a loaded shotgun afield was at the "port."

Some men, because of their poise and ability to handle a situation, are capable of carrying a gun in any manner but by the trigger. They are never forgetful of the fact that the trigger and hammer are the two all-important parts and, regardless of how they carry a firearm, they automatically protect themselves and others. They may seem a bit careless going over a fence, but they never forget what might happen and they act accordingly.

Most of us are thoughtless and careless and too hasty to consider others. Knowing this, we still contend that a gun has but one purpose from the time it leaves its maker—and that is to kill. We also contend that the safest way to carry a shotgun in the field is at the port, regardless of whether you know about them or not.

We know splendid hunters who never put a shell into their gun until their dog points game. We know others who load when they leave their homes. Also, we've taken "dutch" bracers in our time, until we felt capable of "breaking the news" to the waiting wives of those who had methods of their peculiar own.

As long as you are not with us, it really doesn't matter how you carry a gun or not. What we said was sheerly for the safety of shooters in general.

Badrudden Unfit, Donoghue Advised

Syndicate's Plan to Buy British Horse Fails.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 7 (AP).—Steve Donoghue, famous English jockey, tonight was advised that Agha Kahn's great 3-year-old, Badrudden, would run in the Santa Anita Handicap in California under American colors.

Donoghue, breaking a journey to Jamaica by a brief stay here, said he received a cable from his son, Pat, advising him Newmarket veterinarians had pronounced the horse unsound for racing.

Donoghue, acting for an American syndicate, members of which included John Hay Whitney, T. W. Durant and Ben Smith, New York sportsmen, had offered approximately $40,000 for the winner of the Two Thousand Guineas, one of the best-bred stake horses racing in England and on the Continent.

Uniform Racing Rules Aim of Eight States

Jersey City, Dec. 7 (U.P.).—Eight States will meet here Monday to draw up uniform rules to govern race tracks. The recommendations will be submitted to the State Racing Commissioners convention at Miami next month.

Representatives of Massachusetts, Maryland, Illinois, Kentucky, Michigan, Ohio, Florida and New York will attend the conference here.

Millers to De Land.

Minneapolis, Dec. 7 (AP).—The Minneapolis American Association baseball club will train next spring at De Land, Fla., President M. J. Kelley announced today. He said the Millers would spend the month following March 10 in training.

G. U. Prep Five Returns Only One Player

Squad Reduced to 12 Men; Schedule of 22 Tilts Is Announced.

GEORGETOWN PREP, for three years prep school basket ball champion, faces a hard struggle this season if it is to keep its reign unbroken. Coach Joe Garner has only one letter man available, Capt. Hughes Spalding, of Atlanta, Ga.

The remainder of the squad of 21 candidates which first reported for practice this week consists of inexperienced youths who need the usual grooming process before being fit to take part in fast competition.

The squad has been cut to 12 men with Spalding a guard, the only man apparently sure of a position. Lloyd Rice, football full back, and Lefty Powell and Ken Cummings are fighting for the center position, and "Irish" O'Shaugnessy, Tony Scatuorchio, Ray Higgins and Tom Murray are battling for the forward berths. John Parks, Bobby Troutman and Elkin Franklin are candidates for the other guard position.

January 11, Landon, home; 14, Chevy Chase, home; 16, Gonzaga, at Washington; 18, Central, home; 23, St. Alban's, home; 25, Friends, away; 28, St. John's, away; 30, Loyola, home.
February 1, Rockville, away; 6, Gonzaga, home; 8, Landon, away; 12, Friends, home; 13, St. Alban's, away; 15, Kendall, home; 18, St. John's, home; 20, Chevy Chase, away; 23, Loyola (New York), home; 25, Georgetown Frosh, here; 27, Western, away.
March 6, Loyola, at Baltimore.

Grayson Improves; Stanford Hopes Up

Condition Not Dangerous, Thornhill Reports.

Stanford University, Calif., Dec. 7 (AP).—Smiles took the place of apprehension in Stanford's football camp today when new X-ray pictures showed Full Back Bobby Grayson was definitely on the road to recovery from injuries suffered in the California game November 24.

A cartilage torn from its moorings is mending and recent pains, at first thought to be from an undiscovered injury, were the result of exertion in the region of the hurt, Coach "Tiny" Thornhill reported.

"There is nothing dangerous in Grayson's condition," Thornhill said. "Naturally he must not overdo himself, but he will be all right."

Miami Tourney Opens Today; 300 to Vie

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 7 (AP).—Depicting a new deal in golf tournaments, a heterogeneous field of 300 players, representing the great, the near-great and the unknown will tee off here tomorrow in three divisions in quest of 90-odd cash prizes, aggregating $12,500, in the fifth annual Miami-Biltmore open.

Lloyd Sparrow, of Tampa, Fla., was the 300th player to enter the tournament late today, and indications were that the field would become even more unwieldy with additional entries before the last threesome gets under way from the initial tee sometime Sunday.

Eighteen Amateurs to Vie.

Under a division of the tournament, 40 players make up the first group of the "bombing squadron;" 242 make up the second group, or "pursuit squadron," and there are 18 amateurs.

Prizes aggregating $7,500, with $2,500 going to the winner, await the field in the bombing squadron, which includes those players who were among the low 60's and ties in the last P. G. A. tournament, and the low 30's and ties in the national open.

A purse of $5,000 has been posted in the pursuit squadron, with a top prize of $1,000. That group is made up of professionals who seldom or never compete in tournaments.

Trophies are to be awarded the low-scoring amateurs.

Record-Breaking List.

The forgotten men of golf, the rank and file of pros who populate the teaching tees and purvey the clubs, balls and score cards to the Nation's 3,000,000 golfers, have literally swamped the 6,640-yard, par-71 golf course and boosted the entry list to record-breaking proportions.

The field is so large that not more than half of it will be able to get into action tomorrow. The remainder will not tee off until Sunday.

Eighteen holes are to be played each day, starting tomorrow and ending next Thursday.

Tennis 'Bums' Hit By National Body

International Tennis Federation, at its London meeting in July, adopted the eight weeks' free living and traveling provision. U. S. L. T. A. is merely preparing to revise its code to conform with that of the international federation. Hall thought it a splendid step toward making amateur tennis simon-pure.

Might Help the Game.

But would not the eight weeks' provision cause many American players of Davis Cup caliber to turn pro? Hall said it might, "But we will be glad to have semi-pror become regular professionals. It is better for amateur tennis. Some already have turned professional, knowing we were going to adopt the amendment." Hall mentioned no names, but it was apparent he was referring to George Lott and Lester Stoefen.

The proposal that the men's and women's national singles championships be combined into one tourney each September, Hall said, was for three reasons: (1) One big tourney of two weeks' duration will be less expensive than two separate tourneys. Moncy will be saved on ushers, tickets, officials, organizing and publicity, etc.; (2) the combined tourney will offer fans a better rounded program, with women and men stars competing daily, bringing a better total gate; (3) it will ease schedule making—about 450 tourneys are run off within four summer months—and will give an extra week for some of the important tourneys in which big-time players might participate.

Want Big Social Event.

Officials of the association hoped that the combined tourney will develop into an important social event like Wimbledon, which is attended by the King, Queen, royalty and all of society that can buy tickets. Wimbledon tickets are usually sold out in Februrary, although the tourney is held late in June.

London, Dec. 7 (U.P.).—Tennis instruction by correspondence and competition with or against professionals would be prohibited for amateur tennis players, in proposals today to the International Tennis Federation. A resolution against amateur players writing tennis articles was defeated.

ANY coaching from the sidelines will be entirely superfluous as far as the Alabama bench is concerned this afternoon when 'Bama All-Stars battle the District All-Stars at Griffith Stadium. No less than eight coaches will be in the Alabama lineup at odd times.

Alabama is rivaling Notre Dame as an incubator of coaches. Former players of the Crimson Tide are scattered throughout the Southland in coaching roles. Four men in the 'Bama Stars' back field—Pooley Hubert, "Hurry" Cain, "Flash" Suther and Tony Holm are coaches in their own right. All that the Washington team must do today is outguess 'em. That's all.

Alabama stars may come, go and return, but the magic name of Pooley Hubert, "Hurry" Cain, "Flash" Suther and Tony Holm—are football. It was this Hubert, now baldish and a bit paunchy, who wrapped his big right hand around a couple of footballs in the Rose Bowl on different occasions and threw a couple of passes that beat the Pacific Coast champions.

Johnny Mack Brown, the only legitimate All-American ever to make good in Hollywood, was on the receiving end of Hubert's passes. Somehow Brown got down the field to take a 54-yard pass from Hubert for a touchdown in 1925. A year later, in the Rose Bowl, he proved it was no fluke by taking from Hubert another touchdown pass that sailed 58 yards through the air.

DOWN South, they still speak of Hubert with a kind of reverence. Following graduation from Alabama, he joined Red Grange's barnstorming professional team in company with other stars of his day at a time when college authorities were looking with horror at professional football. The Southern Conference promptly passed a rule forbidding any member college to engage a coach who had played professional football.

But an exception was made in the case of Hubert. In tribute to the great renown he had brought Southern football, a special dispensation was made for him, and at the end of his professional football career he was welcomed back as Wallace Wade's assistant at Alabama.

Despite the attempts of the National Professional Football League to pacify college authorities with the announcement that the league would sign no players who had not completed their college courses, the Southern Conference, now called the Southeastern Conference, has hewn to its rule forbidding member institutions from hiring coaches from professional ranks.

But the barriers are being beaten down. Harvard, symbol of all that is supposed to be pure in college athletics, is negotiating for Dutch "Potsy" Clark, star of the Detroit Lions, as coach to replace the retired Eddie Casey. Professional players as coaches soon will no longer be regarded as "untouchables" by the colleges.

FOMORROW, at the Polo Grounds, the New York Giants and Chicago Bears will draw a full house of 60,000 fans, adding another chapter to the romantic saga of professional football and its sensational growth.

To Time, this Department is indebted to the story of how Tim Mara, New York promoter, parlayed a mere $500 into a professional football franchise now valued conservatively at $500,000.

Less colorful than college football, lacking cheering sections, mascots and goal-posts scuffles, the professional game has finally captured the imagination of football fans by its very fierceness and technically correct tactics of play. And, unlike college teams, the pros are sponsored by showmen who have ordered their field generals to open up their play with trick passes and formations that amaze the spectators.

Mara, one-time newsboy, theater usher and race track bookie, paid $500 for the New York franchise in 1925 when C. C. Pyle brought Red Grange to the metropolis in an effort to form an outlaw league. Mara outstayed Pyle in the lean professional field, although losing $50,000 in 1926.

Then he began his build-up of professional football, hiring the most highly publicized college stars and at one time paying Gene Vidal, former West Point ace, now United States Director of Air Commerce, $100 to play 15 minutes in an exhibition game.

Yale's Defeat of Princeton Greatest Upset of Season

By Robert Edgren.

ONE of the delightful things about football is that you never can be sure what will happen.

There's Princeton, for instance. The Tigers have had a great team the last two years. They went through all of last season without a defeat. They went along this season without a defeat until they met Yale. That was November 17—pretty late in the football year. People everywhere were predicting that the Tigers were in for another complete clean-up. It looked a sure thing—especially as the remaining competition had shown little to compare with the Tiger ability.

But Yale licked Princeton, 7 to 0, and did it in convincing style. Yale scored a touchdown and goal in the middle of the first period, and thereafter smashed every desperate attack by the Princeton juggernaut until the last whistle blew. More than that, the iron men of Yale played clear through the game without a single substitution! It's a long time since Yale cohorts had a chance to tear down the goal posts in Palmer Stadium—and how they did enjoy it!

Satisfied It Was Yale.

There must have been some gloom in Tigertown after a defeat that stopped the Tigers from making a glorious two-year winning record, but after all, if any one had to beat Princeton I'm sure the boys down in New Jersey were well satisfied that it was Yale. Years ago there was a bitterness in the Tiger-Bulldog games, but for some time the only feeling has been that of a keen rivalry tinged with plenty of respect on both sides.

I remember coming back to Princeton with Bill Roper one night, in the Tiger team's car, after Princeton had pulled an amazing victory out of a desperate game with Chicago, scoring two touchdowns in the last ten minutes of play. That had been a hard fought game all the way, and the boys were pretty well banged up. Black eyes, bruises, bandages, limps, but plenty of good cheer.

"They played a pretty rough game, didn't they?" I suggested to a group of players, on surveying the damage.

"Oh, no," was the answer. "Not a rough game—just a good, hard game, but perfectly fair. And so did we. They're probably as much bruised up as we are, but they won't mind. They're great fellows."

West Virginia Lists Cage Tourney Dates

Clarksburg, W. Va., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—Dates for the annual State basket ball tournaments have been announced by C. A. Jackson, of Bluefield, president of the State Athletic Association board of appeals.

The sectional tournaments will be held March 1 and 2; the regional tournaments March 8 and 9 and the State title contests March 15 and 16. The cities in which they are to be played will be chosen at a meeting of the board to be held December 31 in Charleston.

Football and Soccer Letters Are Awarded

Staley Is Named Head Of Semi-Pro League

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 7 (Spl.).—D. Lee Staley was elected president of the Washington County Semi-pro Baseball League for the 1935 season.

The league is composed of 14 teams representing most of the county towns and several teams in this city. Staley, a former star athlete at St. John's College, Annapolis, succeeds Charles W. Boyer, resigned.

Cavaliers Slate 10 Games on Grid

W. & M., Davidson Added, Dartmouth Dropped.

University, Va., Dec. 7 (AP).—The University of Virginia's 1935 football schedule, just announced by James G. Driver, director of athletics, list ten games, three of them with Southern Conference teams.

William and Mary and Davidson College are the only new teams on the program. Dartmouth, played for the first time this year, is dropped.

The schedule:

September 21, William and Mary, at Williamsburg; 28, Hampden-Sydney, at home.
October 5, Davidson, at home; 12, Navy, at Annapolis; 19, St. John's, at home; 26, V. M. I., at home.
November 2, Maryland, at home; 9, Washington and Lee, at Lexington; 16, Virginia Tech, at home; 28, North Carolina, at Chapel Hill.

Stock Shrink Seven-Tenths; Buyers Careful

Deprived of aggressive support, the share list generally settled a little lower while speculative action shifted into metal, local traction and scattered specialty issues.

Investment demand for income-producing securities persisted, in contrast with the caution evident in speculative quarters. Preferred shares again contributed sizable gains to the list and bonds continued to move forward under the leadership of industrial favorites.

Stocks Sales Drop.

Turnover in the stock exchange dropped to 1,018,940 shares from 1,420,355 in the preceding session. Some traders cashed in on paper profits and withdrew to the sidelines for the week-end to await more exciting developments.

Lively retail trade under the stimulus of holiday buying was a familiar story of recent weeks and did not evoke perceptible response from security markets. However, most commission houses stressed the upward trend of business in presenting bull arguments.

Apprehension that the technical position of the market had been weakened during the recent upward movement made traders hesitate before expanding their holdings.

United States Smelting, pacing the silver shares, spurted 4 points. American Smelting, Cerro de Pasco, Howe Sound and some of the gold issues rose fractionally to more than a point.

On Rising List.

The mild inflationary flurry reflected in the strength of gold and silver stocks apparently was influenced by the renewed advance in the open market price for gold in London this week.

National Lead climbed to a new peak at 170, up 2½. Among local tractions, Interborough, Manhattan guaranteed and Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit finished fractionally to a point up. Rumors of unification developments stirred the greatest response in Interborough bonds.

Senior issues of Curtis Publishing, American Bank Note, American Chain, City Ice, Goodrich Tire, Jones & Laughlin Steel and Union Pacific got up 2 to about 3 points. Radio B resumed its advance into new high ground, ending more than 3 points higher at 45¼.

Stocks on Down Trend.

Such stocks as United States Steel, Montgomery Ward, American Telephone, Santa Fe and General Motors moved a little lower with the main list.

The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks dipped seven-tenths of a point to 75.1.

The weekly trade summary of Dun & Bradstreet noted Christmas retail trade estimates were being revised upward as result of increased demand for goods this week. Some optimists looked for the largest Christmas trade tonnage volume since 1929.

A further decline of more than a cent in the British pound, carrying it below $4.95, emphasized the strong position of the dollar.

By Special Writer of The Post.

The National Association of Manufacturers has declared itself to be in favor of a noncumulative manufacturers' sales tax, to be collected by the Government and equitably shared with the various States. They recommend that this tax be substituted for State sales taxes and Federal "nuisance" taxes. At one time it seemed highly probable that the next Congress would enact some form of sales taxation as a means of providing needed additional revenues, but it now appears doubtful whether any revenue measures imposing new burdens upon business will be voted at the coming session. However, whenever Congress seriously undertakes to bring the budget into balance, the proposal to levy Federal sales taxes will almost certainly be pressed again.

The question as to whether sales taxes ought to be permanently incorporated in the American system of taxation has already been answered decisively in the affirmative. State sales taxes are now in force in 22 commonwealths, not including States which levy discriminatory taxes on chain store sales. In a few cases, notably Pennsylvania, Virginia, Delaware, Connecticut and West Virginia, sales taxes have been levied for a good many years; but the great majority of the States have turned to such taxes reluctantly and only as a last resort during the depression years. For instance 12 States adopted sales taxes in 1933, and during the first half of 1934 a few more were added to the list. In some cases the taxes are quite comprehensive, being levied on the gross receipts of manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers. In other cases they include only wholesale and retail sales taxes or just retail sales. There are also numerous exemptions and special kinds of taxed transactions to give variety.

Rates Vary According to Nature of Taxed Transaction.

The rates vary widely, too, from State to State and according to the nature of the taxed transaction. It has been estimated that a Federal manufacturers' sales tax at a 2¼ per cent rate, under a licensing system to prevent the tax being paid more than once on the same article, with certain commodities exempted and excluding firms with a turnover of less than $20,000 per annum, would yield $600,000,000 to the Government. Retail sales taxes imposed on a volume of sales ranging up to a maximum estimated at $50,000,000,000 in 1929 would provide an even more prolific source or revenue at lower rates. Even in 1933 when sales of $25,000,000,000 were reported by 1,526,000,000 retail stores, a small tax would have brought large returns.

The chief argument in favor of these taxes is their revenue producing potentialities, and the fact that they provide an alternative to new taxes upon incomes and property which are already seriously overtaxed. In theory sales taxes are difficult to defend, because of their regressive nature; that is, they impose a relatively heavier burden upon the man of small means than upon the well-to-do. Furthermore, like all taxes collected from business, but supposed to be shifted, their incidence is uncertain. Especially under present conditions, a rise in prices to cover such taxes may reduce the volume of business and cost more than it would if the tax had been absorbed. However, as an offset to these and other serious defects, the sales tax possesses the advantage of affording a fairly dependable source of revenue coming in at all times.

Because of the relative ease of collection, and the belief that the tax will be shifted there is, of course, a danger that the levies will become oppressively high in course of time. Then, too, if the taxes are imposed at all stages of the productive process from manufacturer, through wholesaler to retailer, the resultant pyramiding adds greatly to the cost of goods to the final consumer. In addition to the these objections administrative difficulties are encountered which would be extraordinarily great in the case of a Federal sales tax. A tax on manufacturers would be easier to administer than one imposed upon retailers, but in either case the local authorities are better able to levy and collect such a tax than the Federal Government.

Large Numbers of Plants And Retailers Increase Task.

Some idea of the magnitude of the administrative task involved in a Federal taxation is afforded by the fact that there are about 200,000 manufacturers from whom collections would have to be made, while over 1,500,000,000 retailers would be subject to the tax.

It is true that a uniform Federal sales tax would eliminate the discrimination between businesses which results from the fact that certain States levy sales taxes, while others do not. However, the general level of all taxes imposed upon business is the really important factor in interstate business competition — not any single tax.

Despite the fact that quite a number of States regard their sales taxes as temporary expedients for raising revenue, effective for only a short time, experience has shown that sales taxes, once adopted, like income taxes usually grow and grow. They are the kind of taxes that should be reserved to the States, but if the Federal Government intends to exploit this source of revenue, it should do so without delay before the States have come to rely too heavily upon receipts from sales taxes.

Bonds Holding Upward Trend; Sales Smaller

New York Traction Issues Lead; Trading Cut to $12,119,000.

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—The bond market was not so active today, and some of the recent gainers were restrained by profit taking, but the trend of prices was still upward.

Transfers totaled $12,119,000, par value, against $14,966,000 in the previous session. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate issues recorded another gain of two-tenths of a point at 86.2.

While optimistic sentiment continued to dominate the proceedings in senior securities dealings, some realizing tendencies appeared in view of the fact that the market has been forging ahead for the past several days.

High-Grade Loans.

Most high-grade loans were fractionally higher and the majority of moderate declines were found in the secondary groups. There were a number of new highs for the year recorded, especially in the industrial division.

New York Traction bonds came into the limelight with the sharpest gains they have enjoyed in some time following revival of rumors that a unification agreement was imminent.

Interboro Rapid Transit 6s got up 6 points to 66 and the refunding 5s advanced 2 to 85.

Curb's Prices Close Lower In Dull Session

Utility Issues Decline; Pan-American Airways Record Gains.

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—With the exception of a few miscellaneous specialties, which responded to selective buying, the curb market behaved listlessly today and ended on a slightly lower plane.

Utilities were in supply and leaders like Electric Bond & Share and American Gas & Electric, yielded some ground. Certain of the inactive preferred shares of the power group were forced down several points, although United Gas preferred closed 1½ points higher.

After the market's close it was announced that directors of the American Superpower Co., important utility investment unit, had omitted the $1.50 quarterly dividend on the first preferred stock. No sales of the senior issue were recorded during the session, but the common stock was steady around 1½.

Among the issues which moved against the major trend were Allied Mills, up a point on a good turnover; Pan-American Airways, up 1, and Parker Rust Proof, New Jersey Zinc and Newmont Mines, up fractions.

Aluminum Co. of America worked down 1½ points, while Babcock & Wilcox dropped 2¾. Great Atlantic & Pacific nonvoting yielded 3¼. Swift Internacional and A. O. Smith gave up half a point each.

Wool Market.

Boston, Dec. 7 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agr.).—The Boston trade in domestic wools was not as active as two weeks ago. Sizable quantities of few grades, however, were moving right along. Short French combing and clothing 64s and finer territory wools in original bags moved freely at around 68 cents, scoured basis, while bulk average French combing wool of similar grade brought 67-70 cents. French combing 58s, 60s ¼ blood territory wool sold readily at 68-70 cents, scoured basis.

Wheat Pulled Down Under Profit Taking

(Associated Press.)

A bearish factor was talk of possibility of 50,000,000 bushels of low-grade Canadian wheat being shipped into the United States as feed. Buyers of cash corn refused today to follow price upturns and sales indicated a drop in the trading basis.

Wheat closed nervous, at the same as yesterday's finish to ½ cent lower, May, 1.03⅜@½; corn, ⅝@1¼ down; May, 91¼@⅜; oats, ⅝@1⅝ off and provisions unchanged to a rise of 37 cents.

Cotton Market

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—Cotton held within a narrow range today, easing a bit at the close. The market finished steady, unchanged to 3 points lower.

A small opening gain was due to fairly steady Liverpool cables and buying attributed to the trade and houses with foreign connections.

The selling was absorbed within narrow limits by trade or commission house buying. December worked off to 12.41, and May to 12.53 or about 5 to 8 points from the high level of the morning. Closing quotations were at or within a point or two of the lowest.

There was some evening up in anticipation of tomorrow's official forecast.

A private report placed the indicated yield at 9,609,000 bales and was within the range of recent estimates.

Exports today 39,097, making 2,090,779 so far this season. Port receipts, 41,228. United States port stocks, 3,123,862.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil made new high levels for the season early today with net advances of 10 to 13 points on renewed covering and commission house buying prompted by the firmness of crude and the sharp upturn in lard and strength of grains.

Offerings increased when grains turned weak and lard lost most of the early gains, and the market reacted under realizing, with final prices 2 points higher to 2 net lower. Sales were 66 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal; December closed 10.00; January, 10.05; March, 10.15; May, 10.27; July, 10.38.

Sears, Roebuck Sales Increase 18.3 Per Cent

Chicago, Dec. 7 (AP).—Sears, Roebuck & Co., reported today an increase of 18.3 per cent in sales so far this year, as compared with the corresponding months for 1933, consolidated sales to date were given as $277,429,502; last year's up to the eleventh period were $234,420,457.

An increase of 7.4 per cent in sales for the eleventh period—November 6 to December 3—also was reported with $30,878,329 this year, against $28,233,631 a year ago.

Retail Trade Makes Strides, Survey Shows

Halting Pace of Business Found Turning Into Brisk Drive.

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—Retail trade showed broad gains during the past week under the influence of seasonable weather, says the Dun & Bradstreet weekly business review.

"The halting pace of trade movements during the closing weeks of November," asserted the summary, "was turned into a brisk stride which has all the firmness that accompanies determination.

"With convincing demonstration consumer buying was manifest immediately following the Thanksgiving holiday and the breadth of purchasing power was widened by the release of Christmas savings funds.

"Almost without exception the reports received from all parts of the country indicated a sharp rise from the preceding week's sales totals, with evidences that many were trying to crowd into December the deferred purchases of November as well as all of the month's seasonal needs.

"Even in New England where retail sales have been falling behind last year's record, there was a substantial percentage of increase reported for the week, while in most sections of the East the gain ranged from 5 to 12 per cent over last year's totals.

"In contrast to the situation which prevailed for many months, when improvement was confined almost solely to distributive branches, gains in industrial operations now are projecting longer shadows into the spotlight.

"A number of industries have resumed after shutdowns which extended from a few days to a month or more, with the outstanding instances of enlarged activity reported for textile, food products, radios, rubber goods, jewelry, building materials, iron and steel, automobiles and other durable goods divisions."

Walt Mason, Himself

The Long Story.

The book contains a thousand pages, it's heavy, cumbersome and fat; the author surely earns his wages when he's turned out a book like that. The buyer also has the feeling that he receives his money's worth, which thought, I'm sure, is vastly healing, inclined to stir up harmless mirth. I sit me down for pleasant reading—that book will hold me for a week; as through the waste of words proceeding, I feel my brain begin to creak. So many characters are talking of curates, dogs and garden seeds; so many characters are walking down trifling deeds. So many characters are sweating on tennis courts, where gay youths pant; so many names I keep forgetting, and can't tell James from Henry's aunt. I read about one generation, and then another one comes on; the old folks, tires of tribulation, are planted in the churchyard lawn. When I have reached 600 pages, this second generation dies, and all of them, the cranks and sages, are planted where the burdocks rise. I find the tale so dull and dreary, I pause, my briny tears to wipe; I ask, all broken down and weary, "Can I e'er finish all this tripe?" And dismally I read and skim it, and say, "We need a law, indeed; 300 pages are the limit of any book that's fit to read. One generation is aplenty, the added ones but cause distress; the charcters should number 20, or 17, or even less."

APPLE MARY — By Martha Orr

FIRST, I INVEST DENNIE'S MONEY IN JOE'S STORE, THEN THE STORE BURNS, NO INSURANCE— SO I LOSE TH' MONEY—AN' NOW, SOME BIG BULLY PUTS HIS FRUIT STAND ON MY CORNER AN' CHASES ME AWAY!
WHAT ARE YOU DOING ON THIS CORNER, APPLE MARY? YOUR OLD CUSTOMERS WILL HAVE A HARD TIME FINDING YOU HERE!
DON'T I KNOW IT, MR. OAKES? YOU'RE TH' FIRST ONE TO COME AROUND, ALL DAY.
THEN, WHY ON EARTH DID YOU MOVE AWAY FROM YOUR OLD CORNER? DID THAT FELLOW, WITH THE FRUIT STAND, CHASE YOU AWAY?
WHAT, THAT LITTLE SHRIMP? CHASE ME AWAY? I GUESS NOT!
Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.: Copyright, 1934, by Publishers Syndicate
IF THAT WARD BOSS WASN'T THERE, I'D SHOW THAT FELLOW WHO OWNS THAT CORNER— I'VE GOT TO GET IT BACK, SOME WAY, OR I'LL NEVER MAKE A LIVING FOR DENNIE AN' ME, MUCH LESS SEND HIM TO THE CLINIC.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Coming Up, Mr. Bunnie — By Harry J. Tuthill

YES GEORGE, THIS GENTLEMAN IS FROM MR. BUNNIE TO SEE YOU.
BUNNIE? OH YES. WELL, WHAT?
AH, MAY WE STEP INSIDE, PLEASE?
LISTEN, ARE YOU ONE OF THOSE BABIES WHO GRABBED MY CLOTHES AND TOSSED ME INTO A BED AND?
NO SIR! I'M WILTON, SIR. I'M HERE, MR. BUNGLE, ON A VERY URGENT MATTER AND....
WELL I....
MR. BUNNIE DEEPLY REGRETS THE TROUBLE CAUSED BY THE SERVANTS AND ASKED ME TO SAY HE WILL APOLOGIZE AT ONCE AND....
I DON'T HOLD ANYTHING AGAINST HIM, BUT....
MR. BUNNIE APPRECIATES THAT, SIR, AND HE OFFERS YOU A CHANCE THAT DOES NOT COME TO MANY MEN.
A CHANCE TO DO WHAT?
TIME IS VERY PRECIOUS, SIR. THE CAR IS AT THE DOOR. I BEG OF YOU TO LET ME EXPLAIN WHILE ON OUR WAY TO MR. BUNNIE, WHO IS ANXIOUSLY AWAITING US.
YOU SAY HE'S SICK? IS IT SERIOUS?
OH NO NO NO! EVEN A WHISPER OF THAT WOULD START STOCKS TUMBLING IN EVERY EXCHANGE IN THE WORLD. MR. BUNNIE MERELY NEEDS REST AND....AH, HERE WE ARE AT THE HOTEL, SIR.

FortDorbigny's Fall Imminent In Chaco Drive

Capture Would Clear Way for Paraguay Push on Bolivia's Base.

Buenos Aires, Dec. 7 (AP).—A Paraguayan drive in the Pilcomayo sector of the Chaco, launched despite the near approach of the rainy season in an effort to strike the knockout blow in the long war, tonight apparently had Bolivia's Fort Dorbigny in extreme peril.

Behind Dorbigny lay Bolivia's rich oil fields and the territory of Bolivia proper, and military circles here believed Estigarribia, reaching that objective, might force the La Paz government to sue for peace.

Occupation Wednesday of the strong positions of Las Vacas and Carosi, commanding two important Bolivian military highways, gave Estigarribia the tactical advantage as he prepared to strike at Dorbigny.

In other directions, too, the Paraguayans could move freely, and events of the next few days, it was expected, would determine whether the Bolivians would fight or retreat still further upriver.

Since their big victory at El Carmen early in November, when their enveloping tactics brought the capture of 7,000 Bolivians, the Paraguayans have advanced the upper, central and lower parts of their "lever" respectively, from Dorado below Fort Ballivian to Cururenda, 65 miles, from Carmen to Cururenda, 55 miles, and from Fort Strongest to Las Vacas, 30 miles.

Timely suggestions for good things to eat for Holiday dinners will be found in "Holiday Hints" in Post Classified Ads.

3 Killed, One Injured As Tree Falls on Bus

Seattle, Dec. 7 (AP).—A falling tree struck a Spokane-Seattle double-deck bus 4 miles west of Snoqualmie Pass Summit today during a windstorm, killing three men and injuring a woman. The dead were Samuel H. Webb, about 55, Portland, Oreg.; H. L. Bauer, 43, Oregon City, Oreg., and S. T. Lyle, 30, Seattle.
